Twin Bombs Shake IOC

(Times sport columnist Bill Walker is holidaying in Europe this week and was in Amsterdam when the International Olympic Committee met to make its decisions on the sites for 1976 Olympics and Winter Games. He telephoned this exclusive account of the politics behind the votes and the reaction.)

By BILL WALKER

AMSTERDAM—Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, thought he had a neat little atom bomb for the committee to juggle here this week. He obviously didn't know what they knew.

The IOC delegation had one in return.

Last week Brundage asked the committee to study professionalism in Olympic sports, particularly hockey, skiing and basketball. The committee began that study today.

But last night they brought down their own shocker. The surprise was wrapped in two packages.

First one opened was the real bomb.

Montreal had been awarded the 1976 Olympic Games.

The second one was labeled "Sop." That was for Denver, which got the 1976 Winter Olympics.

Site Awards Set Precedent

This marked the first time in Olympic history that North America had been elected as the site for both events, also the first time that Canada had ever been elected.

The Montreal victory completely shook the large gathering. Moscow and Los Angeles has been considered the prime candidates. And there was a long silent moment of disbelief before the Montreal contingent erupted with screams of delight. Meanwhile, Moscow's delegates huddled briefly, rose from their seats and walked out of the hall.

But if the gathering was surprised at this turn of events, the Vancouver-Garibaldi delegation was stunned.

"Oh, No!" Father David Bauer, a member of the committee and a former Olympic hockey coach, was heard to mutter. "Now there's no way," he said.

For this vote had killed Garibaldi's chances and even the most optimistic delegate, although refusing to concede, ruefully admitted they had lost.

Leak Confirms Elimination

And sure enough.

For shortly after the IOC voting group had reconvened to determine the site of the Winter Olympics, there was a leak from the committee room that said that Garibaldi had received only nine votes on the first ballot. Denver had 29; Sion, Switzerland, 18 and Tampere, Finland, 12.

Garibaldi had been eliminated. The final vote on the third ballot, Denver 39, Sion 30.

The Montreal victory came unexpectedly as another "leak," which was later confirmed, had Moscow winning the first ballot 28 votes to 25 for Montreal and 17 for Los Angeles.

On the second ballot all the Los Angeles votes went to Canada except for one. This was considered significant by the delegation as it indicated the solid stand against Russia as host for the Games.

There was no comment from the mayor of Moscow for the vote. "Nyet" was his only word.

No communist nation has ever been host to the Olympic Games.

The Montreal triumph and Garibaldi's defeat gave a bitter-sweet touch to the situation. On the one hand, the eastern Canadians were laughing and gay. The Garibaldi smiles were evident, too, but they came through clenched teeth.

Drapeau Man of the Hour

Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau was the man of the hour. And why not? He had just completed an impossible double in international politics. He had parlayed the name of Expo 67 into worldwide fame. Now he had the Olympics for his beloved city.

This was Montreal's third try for the Olympics and Garibaldi's first.

Drapeau was also surprised at the Montreal decision, and was so excited that he declined to answer the television announcer's queries immediately. However, he quickly regained his aplomb, and hurried to the podium to accept the '76 Games for Montreal and Canada.

He promised dutifully that Montreal would host the event in the true spirit of the Olympics and with humbleness, simplicity and dignity.

It was definitely a personal triumph for Drapeau. The Montreal delegation was the first to admit this. He himself admitted it was a low-key approach that had won it for Montreal, compared to high pressure tactics and the commercial overtones that had accompanied the Moscow and Los Angeles bids.

The numbness has started to wear off the Garibaldi delegation today, but some were still in a state of confusion.

They had come so close, only to lose — in effect — to another Canadian city. This was the consensus and this made the heartbreak a little harder to take.

First, because they had been told that technically they had the best site for the Winter Games. The presentation to the IOC had been extremely well received. Mayor Tom Campbell of Vancouver almost, but not quite, openly predicted victory for Garibaldi on the second ballot.

A telegram of 105,000 names of Vancover and Victoria residents offering their support of the bid had been an instant hit with the committee.

And then Brundage himself had stood up to say that he too had recieved "a foot-high stack" of telegrams from Vancouver. He said the Vancouver-Garibaldi Olympic committee obviously had the support of its people.

But it was not to be, not after Montreal's victory, or as James Worrall, Canada's voting delegate later said:

"It was obvious the committee was not going to give one country both events."

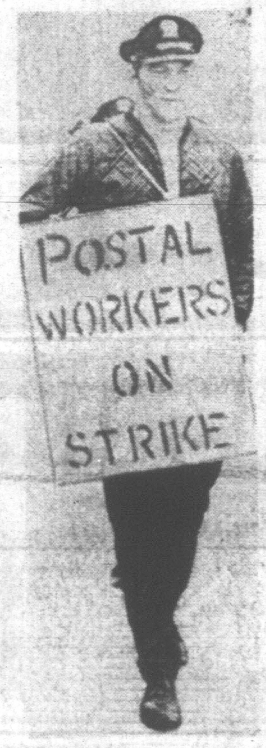

Worrall did suggest, however, that it was his opinion that in the future that one country should bid for one event.

WAR FUND CUTBACK EYED BY SENATORS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Senate is ready to begin a debate on the war in Southeast Asia, a debate likely to continue for the announced duration of U.S. operations in Cambodia.

Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said the opening round involves an amendment to cut off funds for U.S. operations in Cambodia effective June 30.

U.K. Looks to Canada For Major Army Base

LONDON (CP) — The British army is considering the possibility of taking over a large military base in Canada or some other country for training purposes, a spokesman said today.

He emphasized that the question of finding large training areas abroad is in the early stages of study and no details could be provided now.

"Obviously Canada is among the areas considered," he added. "We also are looking at Australia."

The need to find vast new ground results from withdrawal of British troops from Libya where large ground and air exercises had been undertaken from time to time.

Canada provides areas for training of British troops each year but these have been mainly on a battalion scale. The British army appears to be looking for major installations where perhaps a brigade could exercise in combined training with a number of British air squadrons.

BIG BASE

The Canadian defence department is reported to be gradually closing its big base at Rivers, Man., in line with the government's decision to restrain defence spending. Last week a defence spokesman at Ottawa suggested that Rivers is one of the bases the British army is exploring.

A defence department spokesman in Ottawa said it is possible that training of British forces in Canada will be expanded but it was too early to say to what extent.

A number of locations are being considered but no decision has been made, said the spokesman.

It "could be" that Rivers, Man., is one of the bases under consideration. The future of Rivers, has been in doubt for some time. It is known to be one of a number of Canadian forces bases the government is considering closing for economy reasons.

Defence Minister Leo Cadieux indicated last week that the decision on Rivers may be announced within a few weeks.

Some observers doubted that Rivers is roomy enough for British army training purposes. It is primarily an air base, with a drop zone for training paratroopers.

Wilson Party Leads by 7%

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Wilson's Labor government showed a 7.5-per-cent lead today over the Conservatives in the latest Gallup poll.

Anthony Shrimsley, Sun political editor, called the swing to labor sensational and predicted Wilson will call a general election in June.

Ship Refit Waste Hit

Deputy Ministers Attacked

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons public accounts committee said today disciplinary action may have to be taken against government personnel involved in the refit of the aircraft carrier Bonaventure.

In a report tabled in the Commons by chairman Alfred D. Hales (PC — Wellington), the committee said it "fails to understand" why two deputy ministers did not order an on-the-job inspection of the 1966-67 refit of the Bonaventure.

The two referred to are deputy minister E. B. Armstrong, 55, of the defence department and Gordon W. Hunter, also 55, at the time deputy defence production minister. Hunter now is master of the Royal Canadian Mint.

The committee said it feels it has "only explored the tip of an iceberg of unsatisfactory estimating procedures, miscalculations and poor administration."

It recommended that the departments concerned "determine the reasons why departmental officers involved in the refit performed in the manner they did and also take appropriate action to ensure that such inefficiency be eliminated in the future."

MUST CHANGE SYSTEM

"This will require changes to the system under which they work and may require disciplinary action in regard to personnel involved."

The committee asked to be informed of action taken in respect both to procedures and personnel.

"The committee fails to understand why the deputy ministers of national defence and defence production, realizing that the cost of the refit of the Bonaventure was, month by month, getting out of control, did not order an 'on-the-job' investigation."

Estimates by the naval dockyard in Halifax placed the refit price at $8,000,000.

NEW YORK MARKET FALLS BELOW 700

Israeli Forces End Campaign

By REUTERS

Israel said the last of its tanks which took part in Tuesday's raid on Arab guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon returned to their home bases today, 32 hours after the first tank rolled across the border.

Contradictory accounts of the operation in the rugged foothills of 9,000-foot Mount Hermon came from the Israelis and the Arabs.

In Beirut, Reuters correspondent Ian MacDowell reported that Palestine-Arab commandos celebrated what they hailed as a victory in the battle against the powerful Israeli armored force.

SAY FEW WOUNDED

Despite Arab claims to have inflicted a heavy toll on the raiders, the Israelis reported only 11 wounded, 10 of them slightly.

Military spokesmen also denied Arab claims that there had been direct clashes between Israeli forces and the Lebanese army.

The Israelis said that during the raid the Israeli troops occupied six villages, blew up 40 buildings and took 11 prisoners. An undisclosed number of guerrillas were reported killed.

A spokesman said Israel stood ready to repeat the land and air invasion into Lebanon.

BEHIND SCHEDULE

The Israeli plan, which originally provided for the raiding force to be pulled out by sunset, ran behind schedule.

Early today, Egyptian planes went into action against Israeli positions in the northern sector of the Suez canal.

NOL REGIME AID REFUSED

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary William P. Rogers, appearing at a surprise news conference today, ruled out any United States military support for the government of Premier Lon Nol in Cambodia apart from limited arms aid.

"We don't intend to become involved militarily in support of the Lon Nol government," Rogers said.

Bourassa Cabinet Debates Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — The optimism of negotiators provided a hopeful note in the strike by 25,000 Quebec construction workers today as Premier Robert Bourassa and his cabinet prepared to discuss the strike.

After two days of hard bargaining, Andre Desjardins, chief negotiator for the Quebec Federation of Labor-affiliated unions, said management "is really doing its best" and half of the outstanding issues could be settled today.

VIETS BEGIN NEW DRIVE

Times News Services

SAIGON—South Vietnamese forces, with U.S. advisers, have launched a major land offensive along Highway One leading to the capital of Cambodia.

Associated Press correspondent David Rosenzweig reported that a South Vietnamese armored column accompanied by U.S. advisers pushed up Highway One from the provincial capital of Svay Rieng to Kompong Trabek, 25 miles to the west.

The armored column linked up with South Vietnamese marines driving up the Mekong River, then engaged about 600 Communist troops three miles beyond Kompong Trabek in heavy fighting.

The announced purpose of the drive was to clear Highway One for the repatriation of Vietnamese in Cambodia.

Earlier this week 30 South Viet gunboats escorting barges, made the run to the capital of Phnom Penh. This action was described by Saigon as a means to repatriate Vietnamese living in the capital.

The U.S. command announced that the first American troop withdrawal from Cambodia was completed but

Campus Strikes Hit 266 Colleges in U.S.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Student strikes and demonstrations have continued to surge and subside on the campuses in the United States. At the University of South Carolina, 100 persons were arrested during student-police clashes.

The arrests Tuesday night at the 13,000-student campus in Columbia, S.C., were made after students threw bottles, bricks and firecrackers at city and state police, backed by troops, who were imposing a 9 p.m. curfew.

Law enforcement officials used tear gas and clubbed several students. Two soldiers suffered minor injuries.

The student strike information centre at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., reported today that 266 colleges and universities were on strikes of indefinite length.

Strikes at many of the 1,500 four-year colleges and at other educational institutions began last week to protest Nixon's decision to send American combat troops into Cambodia and the deaths of four Kent State University students shot as National Guard troops attempted to quell a disorder.

Unofficial student strikes and protests have continued on many campuses with impacts of varying degrees.

BANS GASOLINE SALES

Michigan Gov. William Milliken declared a state of emergency in Ypsilanti following two days of disorders by Eastern Michigan University students. The emergency order sets a curfew and prohibits the local sale of gasoline in containers. The college has 14,500 students.

Striking students engaged in a variety of anti-war activity, including demonstrations, leafletting, lobbying, withdrawing money from banks, urging workers to strike for peace and cashing in U.S. savings bonds.

The New Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam announced in Washington that soldiers at 22 U.S. military bases will stage anti-war demonstrations this weekend to coincide with Armed Forces Day Saturday. The announcement said organizations at 43 military installations would participate.

In New York city, the City-Wide Work Stoppage Committee, an organization of students and workers set up recently to promote a general labor strike against the war, said 300 workers met with an equal number of students to discuss strikes for peace.

"Everyone at the meeting was for a general strike to demand immediate withdrawal from Southeast Asia," a committee spokesman said. "The question is when."

The Ohio National Guard disclosed what it suggested was new evidence of sniper fire at Kent State at the time the students were killed May 4. Guard spokesmen have maintained that troops opened fire after a sniper began shooting.

The guard spokesman said nearby construction workers heard a shot before the killings. He also said a .32-calibre revolver had been found in a nearby river.

Gravel Pit Favoritism Denied

The charge was made Tuesday by Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver-East) who said taxpayers suffered because no free bidding was allowed for the 185-acre gravel site at Treat Creek on Jervis Inlet.

Williston said the reason Delta Rock Ltd. didn't have to put up a certified cheque for $692,174 like the others wishing to bid, was that the company owned the facilities already located on the site.

These include an office building, two bunkhouses, two powerhouses, a wharf, water supply and sewer system and seven conveyors and a rock crusher.

The minister explained that Delta Rock Ltd. had moved in and begun a gravel operation under a deal with a logging company which had a special use permit for logging only.

FOR LOGGING ROADS

He said the initial use of gravel on the property was understood to be for logging roads only, but before the government could move in, a gravel pit was in operation and the facilities installed.

Since Delta Rock owned the facilities, it was decided to get an appraisal on their value and require other biders for the gravel rights to in effect buy them if they wanted the gravel rights.

Macdonald charged that the cash requirement effectively discouraged other bidders, leaving Delta Rock free to bid the minimum amount.

"Now Delta Rock is rewarded for making off with the gravel before the public auction by being set up as the only possible bidder," Macdonald said.

"This is straight out of Gilbert and Sullivan," he said.

Williston said the appraisal was a lower value than might have been put on the assets because factors such as the time invested by the company in site development were not allowed as part of the value.

Williston rejected Macdonald's call for a public inquiry into the matter, saying all the facts are now available to the public.

Mohamed Choucri, Egypt's ambassador to Canada, will begin an official visit to Western Canada when he arrives in Victoria Tuesday, May 27.

Choucri will stay at the Empress until his departure May 29.

The ambassador will visit Premier Bennett and Lt.-Gov. John Nicholson. During his tour, Choucri will discuss the Middle East conflict from an Arab viewpoint.

He will also spend time in Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton and Winnipeg before returning to Ottawa June 5.

. . . OLYMPIC GAMES

Minister Without Portfolio Grace McCarthy was distraught.

". . . and we so much thought we had it won," she said.

"It's a long way to come for such a big disappointment," she added.

Other members of the Garibaldi team echoed similar sentiments. President Jean Brusset said, "I think we should try again, but for me another four years is a long time."

Vice-president Sid Young said he wasn't about to take "no" as a final answer.

"We know we did a good job, we know we couldn't have done any better. The Montreal decision beat us. Nothing else."

Father Bauer was more critical of the committee than he was of the defeat for Garibaldi.

"A most incredible decision," he said of Denver's victory. "We had the backing of all the winter sports federations. They didn't and they won."

In that regard there was a suggestion later that the winter federations might challenge the IOC decision. But this was considered highly unlikely although feelings were running high.

Denver, it was implied, had won because of Olympic politics. This was appeasement because LA had lost.

CHEQUES DELIVERED

A Victoria post office spokesman today confirmed reports that old age pension cheques for June have been received early and are being delivered.

Old age pension, youth and family allowance cheques for May were also received early by the post office and delivered last week.

The cheques are normally not delivered until June 28. Ken Darlington, president of the Victoria local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said this morning early delivery of the cheques indicates the government expects a strike.

PREPARED

He repeated his union's position that members are prepared to make emergency deliveries of pension, youth and family allowance cheques should a strike occur.

Darlington said negotiations between the government and postal workers unions have been resumed, but a strike vote is still set for Tuesday, May 19.

Postal information officer in Victoria Ken Stofer said he did not know whether June's family and youth allowance cheques would be received early. He would not comment on whether early delivery of pension cheques indicates the government is expecting a strike.

informed sources in the South Vietnamese capital said the withdrawal affected less than 2,000 men.

The command first announced that elements of the 3rd Brigade, 9th Infantry Division, had been withdrawn from the Parrot's Beak section of Cambodia about 45 miles west of Saigon.

Later, headquarters reported the withdrawal of one-third of the 4th Division force operating more than 200 miles to the north in the Se San base area of Cambodia, about 50 miles west of Pleiku City.

"The remainder of the task force will continue to operate along with elements of the South Vietnamese 22nd Division," a spokesman said.

U.S. Defence Secretary Melvin Laird said in Washington earlier that several thousand American troops already had been withdrawn from Cambodia.

Sources said the 9th Division unit had secured Ba Thu, about a mile inside Cambodia, after the North Vietnamese base area had been seized by South Vietnamese. U.S. Losses during the week of occupation were reported as four killed and 20 wounded.

The U.S. command said today that all U.S. losses in Cambodia totalled 101 killed and 427 wounded.

Official sources have said 14,000 to 16,000 U.S. troops and 18,000 to 20,000 South Vietnamese troops are operating inside Cambodia on more than a dozen fronts on both sides of the Mekong River.

Headquarters said American and South Vietnamese forces have killed more than 6,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops and seized nearly 10,000 weapons and hundreds of tons of ammunition in Cambodia since the drive began two weeks ago.

In action inside Cambodia Tuesday, a column of South Vietnamese tanks pushing North from Svay Rieng met resistance in the tow of Kompong Trach on Route 24, about 80 miles northwest of Saigon.

The South Vietnamese called in air strikes. Several buildings were destroyed or damaged, field reports said.

The South Vietnamese drove the Communist forces from Kompong Trach today and joined up with South Vietnamese marines who had been fighting along the Mekong River.

STAFF CUT FURTHER

B.C. Forest Products Victoria sawmills are expected to have only 20 men working by Thursday as a result of the B.C. towboat strike.

Mill workers are refusing to handle logs and booms marked hot by the striking Canadian Merchant Service Guild and as a result thousands of coast sawmill and woods workers have been laid off.

Added to the unemployed total this morning were 85 employees of Crown Zellerbach operations at Courtenay.

In the 10 days since 1,150 CMSG officers, mates and engineers went on strike in support of better safety, manning and accommodation clauses in their contracts, an estimated 10,000 forestry employees have been affected.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Most areas in southern B.C. were free of frost overnight with only Williams Lake and Cranbrook reporting freezing or near freezing temperatures. Showers persisted in a few regions.

Cloud cover will be quite variable today with a few showers persisting along the coast and afternoon showers or thundershowers developing in the interior.

The next Pacific disturbance will bring rain to the exposed coast late tomorrow. A decrease in shower activity and cloud cover is expected in most other regions.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

More people get sunstrokes than you would think. As long as we insist on going out in the heat of the day when the sun is shining fiercely from overhead, we can get too much sun. When that happens, the victim suffers what is known as a sunstroke.

Desert travellers and explorers in Africa and the jungles of South America aren't the only people who get sunstroke. Long-distance runners, golfers, hikers, bricklayers and even people in a boat or a canoe out on a lake can get a sunstroke.

When the wonderful thermostat inside the brain signals changes to the body when the buildup of body heat is too great blows out and the body can't change its temperature, the victims is in danger from sunstroke. People die from it, too.

'Honest, Officer . . . I Was Only Reaching For My Cigarettes'

By DAVID HASKELL

BOSTON (UPI) — There's the story of one smoker who wanted to quit cigarettes so he taped his pack to his thigh. Consequently, whenever he wanted a cigarette he would have to lower his pants.

He quit in three days.

And how about the mother who locked her cigarettes in the cellar freezer and then put the key under her child's mattress at night. She felt that to risk waking her child, walking downstairs to the freezer and unlocking it was just too much bother to go through for a smoke. It helped her cut down.

These are just a couple of extreme examples cited in a new book, the Smoke Watchers' How to Quit Book, detailing the program used by Smoke Watchers, Inc., of New York.

Bently Blum of New York, president of the two-year-old organization, said not all smokers go to such extremes to reduce their cigarette consumption, but that many find ingenious ways of making the butts inaccesible during their reduction program.

Blum, himself a former smoker, underwent the "extremely painful" process of kicking the habit and felt that "certainly there must be an easier way."

He feels the book will help smokers find that easier way.

Anyone who has ever watched a psychiatrist on a TV show will see the logic in the smoke watchers program. One major reason smokers fail to beat the habit, Blum said in an interview, is "their failure to first understand it thoroughly." The book quotes Alexander the Great, "never attack an enemy until you understand him."

This applies to the smoking habit, Blum said. "Smoking isn't one habit. It's a whole bunch of little habits. From the brand you smoke, how you light it, where you carry it, when you smoke, during work, after sex, etc."

"The book is organized in such a way that it allows the smoker to gain a complete picture of his own habit," Blum said.

"From that point on he can begin to attack parts of his habit piece by piece. Beyond that, hopefully, he might get down to zero (non-smoker)."

Quitting "Cold Turkey" is extremely painful and really doesn't accomplish what the smoker wants to do — break the habit, Blum said.

"Cold Turkey supresses the habit but doesn't get rid of it," he said. "The habit involves not only the act of smoking, but the multitude of little things that go along with it."

Blum feels that because the cigarette habit was started one smoke at a time, it can be eliminated or reduced the same way. That is what the book tried to accomplish.

He feels his organization has been successful, more so than any other method currently being tried by millions of smokers. Out of every 100 who have completed the smoke watchers program, 86 quit entirely and 11 cut down to 10 or less cigarettes per day, Blum said.

The book, the cover of which is patterned after a popular cigarette brand, is being used at smoke watchers clinics around the nation.

Among other things, it advises to "attack only one habit at a time and don't go on to the next habit until you've gotten rid of that one."

And then the book points out this little incentive to quit smoking:" Smokers find their sex lives less interesting as they approach 40. Those who stop smoking often report a startling, almost instantaneous revival of sexual drives."

WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 1970

A Word to the Wise . . .

SLIDES SHOWN AT A PUBLIC meeting last week depicted a number of sore spots in Victoria's Inner Harbor, and subsequent comment on them has neither explained nor justified them. Some of the scenes showed garbage dumps — waterside banks down which debris and discarded junk of all kinds were being thrown, with consequent pollution of the harbor waters and ruination of the view.

Seeing the pictures, it was difficult to believe that management would condone such dumping if it knew about it, for proper disposal would be a relatively cheap operation for such large business firms. Now, as a result of the publicity, management must know, and the improvement should be readily forthcoming.

In cases where liquid effluent of one kind or another was being discharged into the harbor, correction might take a little more effort. But this type of pollution is even more dangerous and calls even more loudly for correction. It is an exaggeration to say that insistence on the removal of the waterfront eyesores and contaminations would mean closing up local industries. These are relatively trivial violations of good housekeeping and could be easily halted.

It is the major air and water pollutions which call for expensive remedies — and even in this field British Columbia industry is slowly finding that sound pollution control does not necessarily mean unprofitable operation.

A body of water near any sizable community can be a priceless asset or a shocking liability. Far too often, on this continent, the latter is the case. In Victoria's Inner Harbor and the upper reaches of the Gorge, we have what in the early days of the city was a favored recreation area, but which over the years has become increasingly dirty and offensive. That development has not been necessary — it has come about primarily through private inadvertence and public disregard.

As parts of the waterfront undergo the costly improvement heralded in such plans as the Wharf Street rehabilitation project, it will be more necessary than ever to ensure that the rest of the shoreline is not allowed to negate this progress.

Regardless of which authority should be demanding adherence to anti-pollution measures, the industrial offenders themselves should take the problem in hand and clean up the situation. A minor effort could in most cases produce a major improvement, and it would be all the more welcome as a voluntary move rather than a reluctant compliance with some law.

Voluntary Restraint Withheld

PRESSURES ARE MOUNTING that could put the government's anti-inflationary program in serious jeopardy. In the first quarter of this year wage gains averaged 9.1 per cent as opposed to the Prices and Incomes Commission's target of about four per cent. And, according to the Financial Times, a representative group of 43 companies report an average increase in profits of 4.2 per cent for the first quarter of 1970 over the first three months in 1969.

The alternatives to the present voluntary restraint would not be palatable to either business or labor. Compulsory wage and price restraints would require a huge new bureaucracy if they were to be made effective. And there is reason to doubt that labor, in its present militant mood, would submit cheerfully to government measures.

In the United States the situation is serious and could be a precursor of what might happen in Canada if inflation increases. A congressional study recently forecast a deficit of as much as $8 billions. It can be argued that this figure is small in a one-trillion dollar economy but the United States Federal Reserve Board will be reluctant to ease credit restrictions with a deficit of this size. A 4.7 per cent increase in steel prices is expected to be general by June and labor costs rose 8.4 per cent in the first quarter of 1970 — the steepest quarterly increase in 14 years.

If there is no significant break in the wage-price spiral soon, both Canadian and United States governments will be under pressure for wage-price laws, easier money or more credit controls. Increasingly there appear to be only two alternatives: compulsory restraints or more co-operation from labor. Labor still remains aloof from government requests to cool wage demands. Such indifference, if it is continued, can only harm the worker in the end by adding speed to the runaway dollar.

Mr. Walter Reuther

THE TRAGIC DEATH OF MR. Walter Reuther in an air crash last weekend took one of American labor's foremost leaders — a man who leaves an indelible impression not only on the trades union movement but on his country as a whole.

His career as a union official spanned the early battles in the 'thirties for better wages and conditions of labor and the present era of discussion of such advanced concepts as the guaranteed annual wage. He moved from straight union bargaining to include active championship of important social movements, and at his death was involved in plans to try to direct industrial policy to the point of forcing anti-pollution devices on new automobile models.

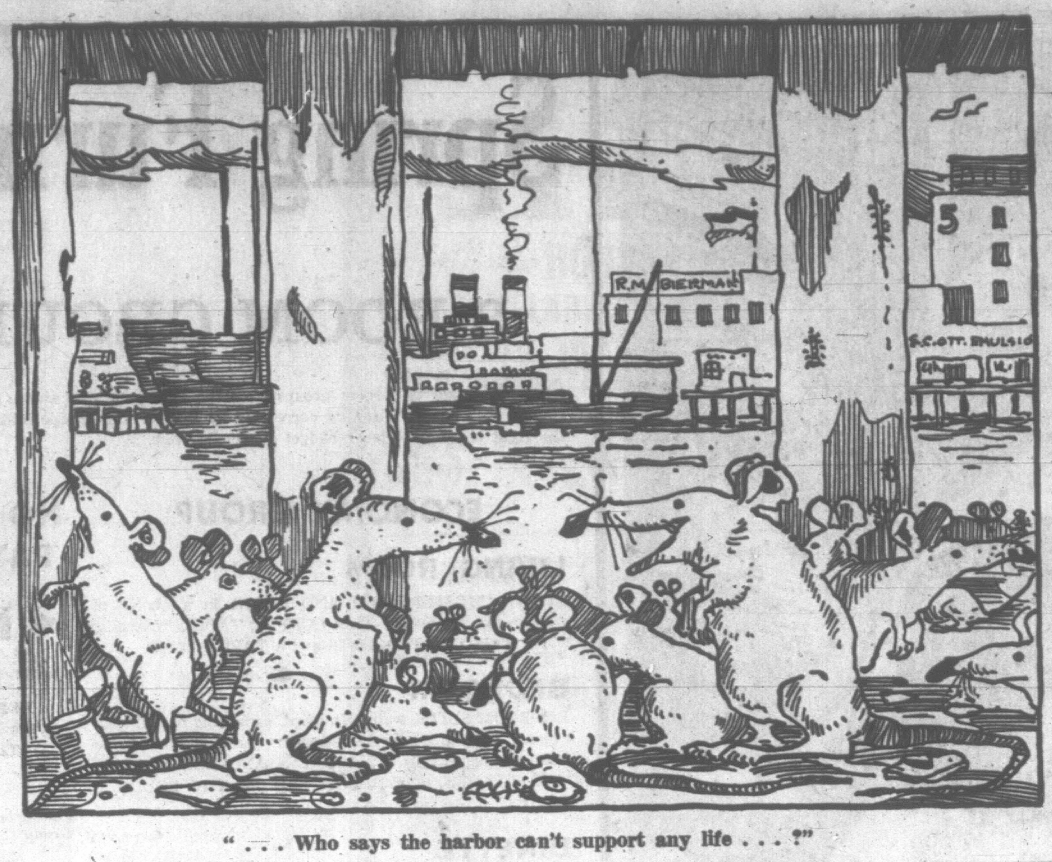

In almost a quarter of a century as president of the United Auto Workers, which he built into an organization one-million strong, Mr. Reuther survived attacks both verbal and physical, led his membership into and out of associations with other labor groups, and tried — with considerable success — to keep labor in the forefront of industrial and social change.

He was a giant in his field, and it was an increasingly large field. A man of his stature becomes a part of the history of his country and cannot be entirely replaced. Organized labor will miss Walter Reuther, whose strength was rooted in personal dedication and honesty. He served his cause well.

The Big One for Montreal

MONTREAL'S MAYOR JEAN Drapeau has landed the big one. The decision of the International Olympic Committee to make Canada's largest city the venue for the 1976 Games is a triumph for the man, the metropolis and those about him who brought new dimensions to the world-fair format in Expo. Canadians will expect Montreal to bring to the staging of the world's most impressive athletic contests the same flair which made the international exposition a success.

If British Columbians are disappointed by failure to attract the winter games to Garibaldi — well, there'll be other years.

". . . Who says the harbor can't support any life . . . ?"

OTTAWA'S 'IN' WORDS — By BRUCE HUTCHISON

The New Information Vocabulary

AS I am informed by usually unreliable sources in Ottawa, the government's new information department is having trouble already with its press releases. It can't seem to get them written properly. The pure literary style which was to be modelled on Prime Minister Trudeau's antiseptic English somehow is missing. Recently, for instance, Leopold Kulch, who is in charge of this important work, almost resigned in despair when he read a press release prepared by his star ghost writer, Edgar Puttle.

Hutchison

It was only a routine announcement of the government's decision to start an adult education course in basket weaving for the nearly extinct community of Liberals left on the western Prairies—a deprived and underprivileged group in urgent need of help. But Mr. Kulch, a perfectionist, read Mr. Puttle's draft with horror.

"It simply won't do," he told his assistant. "You ought to know by now that no official statement is ever issued unless it contains certain key words chosen by the government as its trade mark and you haven't used a single one of them."

Liberally Non-Partisan

Mr. Puttle, who had been a vacuum cleaner salesman before entering the information department, confessed that he had never read a press release and never heard of the key words. He had been appointed because he was strictly non-partisan and took no part in politics, except at election times when he worked 16 hours a day for the Liberal party in Blue River, B.C.

He unlocked his safe and took from it a little black book, the essential vocabulary of government.

"This is confidential, classified and top-secret," he warned, "but note the words I've underlined in red ink. At least six of them must appear in every press release.

"Now look at what you've written. You say the government is 'planning' a course in basket weaving for Prairie Liberals. Don't you know that the government never plans? It programs. Then you say the government hopes to expand its plan. The government never expands. It accelerates and escalates. Again, you say that the Prairie Liberals are depressed and poor. You mean they are alienated and socially disadvantaged. Why can't you use plain English?

"That's not the worst of it," Mr. Kulch went on. "You forgot to stress the Prairie 'potential' or even the government's 'perspective.' Besides, nowhere in your draft can I find the most important word of all—'Identity.' Good heavens, man, every speech, document, white paper or blue book must mention the Canadian identity. What will the unfortunate western Liberals think of us if we don't identify their identity?"

Mr. Puttle admitted that he knew it had disappeared long ago.

"No, no!" cried Mr. Kulch. "A Canadian may die, or even worse, he may vote Conservative, but he cannot lose his identity. On the other hand, even if he is rich and powerful he is always alienated. Without universal alienation there would be no need for the information department, no reason for government itself. And," Mr. Kulch added with a hard look, "no job for you."

This deeply impressed Mr. Puttle, who had no wish to sell vacuum cleaners in Blue River again.

"Another thing," said Mr. Kulch. "You refer in your draft to the government's 'purpose.' Weasel words like that are taboo. In a pinch you might mention the government's 'conceptual philosophy' or, still better, its 'social conscience,' but the accepted word is 'thrust.' Yes, everything the government does is the 'thrust of its policy.' No one knows what that means but it sounds fine and even the ignorant editorial writers are beginning to use it in every second paragraph. No cabinet minister, I can tell you, would think of leaving his house in the morning without a well-polished thrust in his vest pocket in case of some emergency like a press conference.

"Well, go ahead and rewrite your draft and make sure it includes no word of partisanship or propaganda. Just emphasize, gently, that the great Prairie initiative was conceived by a Liberal government for Liberals in the historic Liberal tradition. And remember," Mr. Kulch concluded, "that the information department is absolutely neutral in politics. Always be fair to the opposition parties by never mentioning them. You can't be more neutral than that."

Fatal Perfection

After three days of intensive work, Mr. Puttle came back with a new draft which began as follows: "In the latest thrust of Liberal policy, the Canadian government has programmed a conceptual approach to the alienation of western Liberals and will escalate a basket weaving course to perpetuate the identity of the socially disadvantaged and accelerate participatory democracy. This initiative, the government emphasized, is absolutely non-partisan since it does not include any participants except Liberals of established social conscience."

Mr. Kulch read the draft with escalating disappointment and fired Mr. Puttle, advising him to sell vacuum cleaners. But recognizing his talents and non-partisanship, despite his services to the Liberal party in Blue River, the government appointed Mr. Puttle to the Senate where his speeches are much admired. They have thrust, alienation, identity, potential and perspective. But of course no propaganda.

FROM WASHINGTON — By TIM TRAYNOR

New Anxieties Over Nixon 'Impulsiveness'

THE build-up to President Nixon's decision to attack Communist sanctuaries in Cambodia has been the subject of much anxious conjecture. It has been said that the president overrode Secretary of Defence Melvin Laird and Secretary of State William Rogers. Both have denied this. A central preoccupation has been the dramatic evolution of the president's position between the Vietnam announcement of April 20 and his statement on Cambodia ten days later.

Traynor

In announcing that 150,000 U.S. troops would be withdrawn from Vietnam over the next year, he had warned the Communists against continued escalation of conflict in Cambodia and Laos, but had said progress in Vietnamization had "substantially exceeded expectations" and had asserted that a just peace was in sight.

"We can say with confidence that all American combat troops will be withdrawn," he had said. The U.S. was strong and would not be defeated in Vietnam.

His confident tone gave no hint of the grim declamation to come. "I have concluded," he said, "that the actions of the enemy in the last ten days clearly endanger the lives of Americans who are in Vietnam and would constitute an unacceptable risk to those who will be there after the withdrawal of another 150,000." He would move against the Cambodian sanctuaries "to guarantee the continued success of our withdrawal and Vietnamization programs."

Saying that the age was one of anarchy, he asserted that free nations and free institutions everywhere would be threatened by totalitarianism if the U.S. acted like "a pitiful, helpless giant" before an opponent which sought to "humiliate and defeat us." The possibility of winning a just peace in Vietnam and the Pacific was at stake, along with the lives of Americans and millions of Cambodians and South Vietnamese.

'Spasms of Caprice'

Some have seen this abrupt change of tone as the ultimate example of an increasing and alarming presidential impulsiveness. Describing the president's actions as "spasms of caprice", one leading American commentator has said the capital "is left with an alarming sense of doubt about what he will do next."

The president's account of the changes in circumstance in the ten-day period has aroused intense scepticisim.

It has not seemed credible to some that developments over the ten days could have altered the situation as critically as the president suggested. It has been widely charged that, in the face of setbacks at home and implicit challenges like the enlistment of Soviet military personnel in Egypt, Mr. Nixon has been swept along into an impetuous assertion of U.S. power similar to that which President Johnson often made.

The reports of cabinet opposition have been taken as confirmation. Mr. Rogers has been quoted as telling a Congressional committee the day prior to the decision to use U.S. troops: "We recognize that if we escalate and get involved in Cambodia with our ground troops, that our whole program is defeated."

Laird's Revelations

It is impossible to tell how much of the scepticism is warranted, but comments by Mr. Laird can at least be said to put the matter in a different perspective. Mr. Laird, who is said to have advocated only bombing the sanctuaries, made plain in an interview with U.S. News and World Report that army chiefs had sought to delay the announcement of further troop withdrawals in the light of the battlefield situation.

Mr. Laird stressed the sanctuaries, without which the Communists could not fight the present kind of war, were a threat of long duration. The implication was that they had loomed ever larger as a problem for the Vietnamization program with its related withdrawal of U.S. forces.

In the past two years, he said, the massing of Communist forces relatively immune from attack and close to South Vietnamese population centres "permitted Hanoi to pose a continuous and serious threat to South Vietnam's internal security that no amount of progress in Vietnamization or pacification could eliminate. He referred to the dangers of a total Red takeover of Cambodia, eliminating even the limited restraints of former years, only as an extension of the basic danger.

A fair inference to be drawn from the Laird comments is that the administration had for some time been focussing on the sanctuaries as an obstacle to Vietnamization, and that the turmoil in Cambodia in recent weeks provided only the final impetus for action. Accordingly, there are new questions being asked here about the U.S. role in the change of regime in Cambodia, which led to the current turmoil.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times of May 13, 1910.

Some progress is being made in furtherance of the scheme for placing all wires underground in the business section of the city. Forms of the proposed agreement between the corporation and the various property holders involved in the proposition have been distributed and it is understood that a number have already been signed.

Letters

Extortionate

Carpenter labor rate is $6.17 per hour, $46.28 per 7½ hour day, including fringe benefits, which benefit the carpenter and which are paid for by the public.

Now, the carpenters are demanding an increase to $8.02 per hour, $60.15 per 7½ hour day, including fringe benefits, and demanding welfare while their unemployment is caused by their utterly unfair and unrealistic demands which the public is quite unable to pay.

I could have provided hundreds of jobs for carpenters in the last few years, and even recently, if the public, which is paid very much less than these knights of labor, could have afforded these extortionately high rates.

I feel the construction labor unions are being led to ruin by their labor bosses, who have failed utterly to consider the economic facts. Who can afford to pay these rates? We can't even afford to build schools or hospitals. — M. P. Paine, 3620 Quadra.

Cheaper Underground

I have been following the "Underground Wiring" issue with interest but note that only one side of the issue has been debated to date. The opinion seems to be that underground wiring is expensive and if it is desired the customer-ratepayer must pay for it.

What is not generally known is that underground wiring, in fact, is cheaper because:

a. it has a life expectancy of 40-50 years compared to 12-14 for overhead wiring;

b. its maintenance costs are only about 1c for each $1.00 of capital investment compared to 4c for overhead wiring.

It can readily be seen that underground wiring is by far the best investment financially on a long-term basis.

It is for these considerations only that investor-owned and municipally operated distribution systems in much of Europe and North America have been converting to underground wiring on a no-cost basis to the properties concerned. The facts that underground wiring enhances our environment and is storm proof, and not subject to traffic accidents are all desirable by-products.

B.C. is lagging behind in this development and surely it is not because management of B.C. Hydro is not aware of the long-term potential of underground wiring.

In my opinion there are other barriers to converting to underground wiring which have not been resolved such as:

a. Does B.C. Hydro have the ability and necessary credit to raise the capital required for a modern underground distribution system?

b. Is the B.C. forest industry willing to lose the present market for poles?

c. Is organized labor willing to lose the vast number of jobs now associated with the maintenance of the overhead system which would become redundant on the installation of an underground distribution system? — A. R. Guy, 2756 Dewdney.

New Forces Stirring in Asia

By HAROLD EVANS
The Sunday Times, London

Men with machine guns sometimes wait in ambush for Manuel Elizalde, Jr. when he slogs by jeep into the remote forests of Mindanao, the second largest island in the Philippines.

The ambushers are loggers and ranchers, aided by a corrupt policeman or two, and by gunplay and fraud they are grabbing the untitled virgin lands from the Tbolis, the Manobos, the Mansakas, and the other indigenous Filipino minority groups.

Elizalde is a target because he is a philanthropic pioneer of scientific community projects which will enable the scattered four million Filipinos in minority groups to stand up for themselves — to halt the march of progress is the way the land grabbers prefer to put it.

The struggles of Elizalde do not fit the stereotypes of our headlines from Asia. There are no Communists. There are no G.I.'s. There is no Mao plot. There is, instead, a mixture of science, idealism and private greed.

And at the one Asia assembly, a group of 250 foreign ministers, scientists, editors and economists, organized by the Press Foundation of Asia, the emphasis was all the same. The flops of the conference were all those people who tried to import the ideologies of "domino" politics.

U Thant caught the assembly's mood when he regretted Communist China's absence. President Ferdinand E. Marcos of the Philippines went against it when he banned Han Suyin, author of "A Many Splendored Thing," because of her sympathies with China and under pressure from the Formosan delegates who threatened to walk out. The verdict of the lobbies was brusque: "He should have let them go."

MARCOS

Asia has come of age. The young of Asia constitute well over half its population. A great many have become literate because that was one of the first tasks of the post-colonial governments. They are a different breed of Asian. And they are disappointed men.

They were born and bred with promises of early economic liberation.

They reject the cold war ideologies of either side. One of the greatest misunderstandings, far too flattering to Maoism, is the idea that every student demonstration, every rebellion, began in Peking. It is a confidence trick the establishments of Asia are happy to offer to the West.

In Manila, Marcos blames the student riots on Maoists and in Kuala Lumpur the Tunku blamed the race riots on Chinese infiltrators. In truth one is a protest against the corruption of Filipino society (political leaders have been known to demand and get a 33 per cent personal rake-off on contracts); and the other was an excuse for the incendiary nature of the government's failure to integrate the Malay and Chinese communities. The currency of counterfeit Communist plots should no longer be encashable for the debts of government failure.

If there is no new unifying ideology in Asia, the beginnings of a plot can be discerned. It is not between Communists and the rest, but between the developed and the developing world. Industrial countries, say the Asians, are quick to lower their tariffs between themselves but move with glacial gradualism for the rest, and the one Asia assembly noted with jaundice the laboratory developments of artificial coffee, tea, textiles and cocoa which threaten their primary exports.

Science has stilled the fears of starvation and raised aspirations. The new strains of wheat and rice are doubling yields. And the assembly was spellbound by the prospects of outer-space photography and remote sensing devices for detecting enormous mineral resources and fishing grounds.

Here were glittering prospects for Asian cooperation and here more than ever the love-hate relationship with Japan emerged. Mao's China is thought to have nothing to say since it descended into an internal religious crusade. But Japan seems to have done everything the Asian countries want to do.

In their urge for leadership in self reliance, the Asian countries look to Japan, but the Japanese do not know how to respond. They are everywhere in Asia, building the factories, buying the land, crowding the airport lounges in package-tour clumps of giggling souvenir hunters, but they are insulated because they cannot converse. They have never learned the common language of Asia, which is English.

VIOLENCE during anti-Vietnam war demonstration in Tokyo points up question being asked with some concern by Asian leaders: Can Japan's energy be constructively channelled?

When Prime Minister Sato talks about Japan providing military security for Asia he strikes a chill among Asians who have no nostalgia for Japanese occupation.

"Our problem," one Asian foreign minister told me, "is that if we do not find an outlet for Japan's energy it will come out of a gun barrel again."

'Final Solution to Unwanted Child'

By SIDNEY CALLAHAN
National Catholic Reporter

(Mrs. Callahan is a regular columnist for the Reporter, a paper of broadly liberal Catholic viewpoint.)

Every now and then I lose my cool. Elegant detachment and a comic view of life can't muster the right irony for every occasion.

Last week I just wanted to wail. First, I visited with a friend who works in the inner city and heard her accounts of routine starvation, desperation and child abuse. With welfare cuts the children are now eating garbage, as if in a war.

In the real war more and more atrocities have come to light. Just as the news of the ecological crisis grows grimmer. Finally, New York passed its abortion-on-demand abortion law.

So — the world isn't going to end with a bang or even a whimper, but in one giant abortion. We'll be the world that didn't make it, the aborted species.

Death can be proud; it is gaining on life everywhere. Mother Earth will be aborted of her children.

The fruit of the womb can now be vacuumed away and ground up with technology's latest gift to efficient death. The vacuum aspirator outdates the knife — no blood is left on the hands.

Minor Malfunction

Meanwhile enlightened liberals congratulate each other on abortion reform — at last. The feminists have made it their cause, claiming that punitive men have denied women abortion in order to repress them.

"Women should have control of their own bodies" is their cry. The image of the body here is that of a machine one controls. The conceptus is but a minor malfunction, a non-ordered part that is rejected. What has a microscopic bit of tissue got to do with persons?

Plenty, of course. If we didn't know about that issue's unique and dynamic growth we couldn't deduce or fear the future baby. Make no mistake, except in rare cases of unusual disease, it is not the process of pregnancy that is being rejected but the child which is its end result. Abortion is an alternative to receiving and rearing a child. And this is the shame we all bear. We reject children.

Let Them Starve

In the affluent U.S.A. we let children starve as their parents did before them. There is no medical aid, no education, no housing, no aid to unmarried mothers, no child-care centres — in other words we wash our hands of communal responsibility for our children.

Children are abused at home and-or rot in horrible institutions because no one cares. Women are literally deserted by the society at large in their role as mother.

Deserted, depressed and penalized, pregnancy often means either penalizing their other children or the child they carry.

In such a situation the "right to abortion" looks like freedom. It is the final solution to the unwanted child —and far easier to effect than radical support for women and children.

In my feminist view, every abortion represents an abandonment of women and children. Some male has ratted, some family has pressured, a whole society has turned its back.

Among the affluent classes, male models of achievement and male working conditions have been imposed upon women so that work conflicts with childbearing and child-rearing.

The spread of a distinctly masculine type of selfishness, aggression and uncommitted sexual freedom has also turned women away from children.

Follow through with this trend and soon young women draftees will also be able to shoot babies and napalm civilians.

Already the job of doing abortions is about to be pushed off upon women. Doctors, even liberal doctors, are not happy at the prospect of performing abortions by the thousands, and so suggest "abortoriums" staffed by para-professionals (mostly women, of course).

Don't Prescribe

"After all," as one doctor who worked for abortion reform states, "doctors have been trained to preserve biological life." Personally I think social scientists should staff the abortoriums, just as hawk legislators should go to Vietnam, or those who vote down welfare live in the slums. If you can't do it, don't prescribe it for others.

Unfortunately, in the case of abortion one also would have to be prepared to deny an abortion to desperate women. Knowing the total lack of support and prior conditioning of most women, can you look the desperate distraught women, or teenager in the eye and say "no"?

Frustrating

Abortion is like no other ethical problem. Next month my husband's book Abortion: Law, Choice and Morality will be published by MacMillan. After four years' work and much anguished wrestling with the problem of abortion both here and around the world he concludes, and I concur, that there is no sadder or more frustrating subject. This is a "no exit" dilemma.

Personally, I feel paralysed and am utterly unable to act. My disengaged status from any position of public authority has never been more of a luxury. I am free to indulge my abhorrence and deep distress over any act of abortion.

My pacificism is untested also, but I think that I could never destroy potential human life. I know I could never approve or co-operate in capital punishment. Without a thorough-going reverence for life, opposition to abortion loses its credibilty. It becomes part of a punitive sexual morality rather than ahimsa.

In my most wildly optimistic moments I can imagine my descendants (when I'm optimistic I count on having lots) being unable to imagine the callousness of our present time.

"You mean, they actually cut out embryos and destroyed them!" "You mean, no one helped pregnant women or supported the children . . . I don't believe it."

Just as we can't imagine a public disembowelling, so they will shrink from the horror or our generation's abortion epidemic. Abortion will join auto-da-fe's, leeching, Bedlam and branding as an outdated therapeutic enterprise.

Or of course we can play it the other way and see the spread of abortion as only the beginning of what some have termed a "behavioral sink."

CALLAHAN

The fragile bonds can break more rapidly than you might think. Panic and a fight for survival are very unpleasant to behold.

When the lemmings rush to get their destruction in the sea, do the females get pushed in? We know for a fact that at the camps, the ones with "the showers," women and children always went first.

CRITICISM CURBED?

By ALFRED FRIENDLY

LONDON — Can professional criticism in a scientific paper of a scientist's work be the grounds for bringing a libel suit? A recent decision by the British Court of Appeals has so ruled, holding that a dentist who claims to have been injured by an article in the British Medical Journal may sue the publishers, i.e. the British Medical Association and the authors.

The case will be argued sometime next year before the High Court but the decision already rendered, merely opening up the possibility of suit, has the most serious implications for freedom of scientific discussion.

The article at issue mentioned the dentist by name and attacked a method of anaesthesia he had developed and recommended — in an earlier piece in the British Medical Journal, as it happened. The dentist went to court with a claim that he had been defamed in the conduct of his profession.

For the majority, Sir Gordon Wilmer said that what seemed to him the essential feature of the case was that the plaintiff was a practising dental surgeon whose professional reputation was at stake.

Triumph of a Working Lifetime

By ART STOTT

Stott

Through the thinned old growth firs gleams another pool, with mallards cruising, waddling up the bank to the soft green grass and accepting food from their fanciers. Beyond them, beds of red tulips, full blown now, lift above the foam of light blue forget-me-nots and, across the greensward, banks of pansies, wallflowers and big red and white daisies splash their color. In the distance the camas fields above the cricket ground and below the flagpole are a blue sea washing the cultivated areas of the park.

These are the vistas that cheer the eye and ease the spirit on the acreage Sir James Douglas set aside to grace Victoria, a broad jewel room with ever changing treasures on display.

Some of us who have walked through the park, off and on for the last 40 years — and have found continuing delight in its attractiveness — are in a position to appreciate the changes that have occurred there.

In my boyhood, the park was lovely, but apart from the artificial lake, stone bridge and floral entrance across the road from South Park School, inclined to sombreness. The old conifers growing thickly west of Goodacre lake had reached an age when they didn't care about appearances. The thickness of the stand, some of it moribund, denied life to grass underneath and in winter storms, the blowdown created a tangle of jackstraws that took a season's labor to clear away.

The old animal pens, noisome and too small, held interest for young eyes, with Ursus Kermodei, the unique dirt-yellowed white bear the centre of attraction. But the interest was tinged with pity. You felt, with a sense of guilt, the creatures should not have been penned there. It was the wrong place and the facilities were inadequate.

Over the years the scene has changed. The area has been opened up. While the wild sections facing the sea have been preserved, and improved by the planting of daffodils for spring's magnificent show, other parts have become a garden.

This has been the work of Herb Warren, who studied floriculture at Guelph, intended to go into commercial horticulture and, fortunately for Victoria, applied for and was appointed to the job of parks superintendent here. That was 40 years ago. The fruits of his labors and that of his painstaking crew are now one of the glories of the capital — a park, the best of several good ones under their jurisdiction — to stand beside any of its kind and size in the world.

About this time of the year the Keukenhof gardens outside The Hague are magnificent in their display of tulips and other bulbs, assembled in this lovely region by commercial growers to encourage orders from touring horticulturists. The flower beds of Bath's Victoria Gardens below the Crescent, and those reaching up from the Avon behind the Parades are brilliant. Kew and the London parks are lush and colorful. Hampden Court has its formal, precise floral patterns — copied in one instance in the knot garden at Centennial Square. And in a multitude of places where natural beauty has been cultivated the vistas are grand.

None of the other parks, though, slope down to the glistening Strait of Juan de Fuca with the snow-capped Olympics silhouetted in the background. Beacon Hill, its broom, its oaks, its meadows, its playing fields and children's recreation area, its almost tame mallards, its conventional swans, seems to have what Victoria wants — an appreciation Herb Warren has helped to nourish.

He has given a working lifetime to that ideal. And when he retires in another couple of months — "to try something different, perhaps a little consulting work" — he should know that his efforts have been recognized. He has some indication of that now. Vandalism at Beacon Hill is minimal. He'd like to say the same about Centennial Square, but some of the sick youngsters who gouge out the planters and profane beauty won't let him.

Because he and his crews have tended it so long and so carefully, I've come to think of Beacon Hill as Herb's park. He has a different idea. It's Victoria's. He has enjoyed working on it. He thinks he has given the city what it desired, has fought successfully against commercialization. And when he moves out, he'll probably confess, a little grudgingly, that it looks kinda nice. He may even concede that the pattern he has set, with some changes that different times will bring, could keep it that way.

Arctic Oil Ports Will Face Problems

By BUD JORGENSEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ABOARD MANHATTAN (CP) —Proving that an icebreaking tanker can navigate Arctic waters is only half the story of developing an oil trade through the Northwest Passage. The other half would be development of loading facilities.

The source of oil for Humble Oil and Refining Co., a subsidiary of Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), principal sponsors of the two experimental voyages of the tanker Manhattan, would be the Prudhoe Bay area of Alaska. Permafrost and shallow coastal waters in this area would create major engineering problems.

Stanley Haas, Manhattan project manager, says he is confident technology is available to build both icebreaking tankers and a loading facility.

"We're going ahead with definitive planning for a loading facility on the North Slope (in northeast Alaska)," Haas said in an interview on the Manhattan, which has been making a test run in winter ice after navigating the Northwest Passage last summer.

Haas estimated the loading facility would have to be about 35 miles off the Alaska coast. He said they would have to go that far out to get the 90- to 100-foot water depths required for deep-draft tankers.

Cost, he said, has been estimated at $500,000,000, and about 80 per cent would be for lines and tanks.

Haas said the loading platform would likely be prefabricated, using cement, in the south and shipped north for on-site assembly. There are techniques in use that could keep ice from forming around the platform.

Lines from shore, Haas said, would probably have to be buried 10 to 20 feet under the ocean floor. This would be to protect them from ice floes.

There are no icebergs in the western Arctic—icebergs are formed in the mountainous eastern Arctic and because of currents do not drift west—but huge ice islands occasionally drift close to the continental shelf.

Haas said Humble has studied the possibility of having storage tanks on offshore platforms. But he said the company would only build such facilities if it was convinced there would be no possibility of a tank being ruptured and spilling oil into the ocean.

Haas said planning for construction of a loading facility has been concurrent with the Manhattan tests. But he said that at present no field crews are working.

Moving the oil in underwater pipelines would be easier than moving it above ground. Under water the temperature would be around 30 degrees while above ground in winter there would be long periods of below-zero weather.

TAKES THREE YEARS

Haas said they would expect to heat the oil stored in tanks but doubted if they would need a system to heat lines moving oil from shore to a loading platform.

He said they estimate it would take three years to build a loading facility, which is the same period they estimate it would take to have the first icebreaking tanker in operation.

Haas said he expects to have a recommendation for the Humble board of directors this summer on whether he believes the marine operation would be economically practical. Meanwhile, he is convinced the marine solution to transporting oil from the North to United States markets is technologically feasible.

Panarctic Oils Ltd., a company partly financed by the Canadian government which is exploring on islands in the Canadian Arctic Archipelago, would encounter different problems in building a loading facility in the eastern Arctic, where much of its activity is centred. There steep island cliffs plunge straight into the sea and depths a short distance off shore are up to a half mile or more.

Ontario Civil Servants Take French Crash Course

TORONTO (CP) — George McEvoy, 54, is in a French crash course, part of a quiet revolution among 60,000 Ontario civil servants.

The highway equipment inspector and 400 civil servants like him are learning to speak Canada's other official language in what used to be a French Roman Catholic high school in Toronto.

Their bosses are learning French too. In another classroom the deputy minister of lands and forests, G. H. U. Bayly, grasps for le mot just. Downtown, retired Gen. W. A. B. Anderson, chairman of the civil service commission and responsible for the French program, takes a "mini-course" in French.

The school's manager, Jean-Claude Giguere, 30, a former language instructor at Quebec's Laval University, oversees nine full-time and four part-time language instructors.

About 400 civil servants are enrolled in a continuing instruction program which lasts three years for 255 students who take eight weeks of full-time instruction annually and much longer for 175 others who attend two night classes a week.

The program results from Premier John Robarts's 1968 pledge to consolidate national unity according to the recommendations in the report of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

Every effort would be made to accommodate the needs of Ontario's 700,000 French-speaking residents, he said. To this end French high schools would be built, more cultural exchanges with Quebec made and French-speaking residents of Ontario would have access to bilingual government services.

TOO OLD TO LEARN

The program began with the introduction of French courses on a limited scale two years ago, and nearly half of the MPs attended the first few lessons. The number quickly dwindled and Mr. Robarts is still unilingual, saying he is too old at 53 to learn a new language.

But Mr. McEvoy is more hopeful. "It's challenging, but not at all easy . . . you get frustrated, so you try a joke. But you're supposed to say everything in French—even jokes—and that's not easy either," he said.

Mr. McEvoy is in a group of six civil servants from such bilingual communities as Cornwall, Ottawa and Sudbury, who are on a three-year program of oral and written French.

Every three months they head for the Toronto school, at government expense and with full pay, and spend two weeks in "partial immersion" with French.

Images flash on a classroom screen and a female voice dictates simple, declarative French sentences.

At night the civil servants double up in rooms at a nearby housekeeping hotel. They read French newspapers, listen to the CBC French radio station and talk among themselves in French.

Pigeon Hunt Urged For London

By CY FOX

LONDON (CP) — London's pigeon population, loved by some and loathed by others among the British capital's human element, will be in for a hot time if a Conservative MP gets his way.

Douglas Dodds-Parker, a parliamentarian who numbers himself among the pigeon-loathers, is asking authorities to have crack army marksmen go gunning for the birds in London's Westminster district.

"I have no sympathy for pigeons or the people who think they are part of London and a tourist attraction," Dodds-Parker said Wednesday.

The capital's pigeons "are dirty, fat, overfed and a hazard to health," he added.

The tourist consideration, in a country acutely conscious of foreign visitors as a source of vital overseas funds, is precisely the case some of London's pigeon defenders state.

GATHER IN SQUARE

At last count, there were about 300,000 pigeons in London, droves of them concentrated in a famous part of Westminster, Trafalgar Square.

Tourists are commonly photographed feeding pigeons or simply allowing themselves to be used as landing bases, apparently unaware of a British agriculture department warning that pigeons are carriers of a virus causing symptoms similar to pneumonia.

A London Sunday newspaper has said that, when mixed with rain, pigeon droppings form an acid likely to eat away architectural stone and cherished public statues.

Teenage Press Baron Appeals to Students

By MARVIN KUPFER
(Newsweek Feature Service)

LONDON — With shaggy blond hair falling into his eyes, he looks more like a misplaced flower child than a budding press lord. But at only 19, Richard Branson is the talk of Fleet Street—and everywhere else in Great Britain.

The lean, bespectacled Branson is editor and publisher of "Student," a youth-oriented magazine he launched from almost no scratch two years ago and that today boasts an astounding circulation of 100,000 and such distinguished byliners as Vanessa Redgrave, James Baldwin and Jean-Paul Sartre.

No less a critic than Malcolm Muggeridge calls the magazine "an extraordinary achievement," and the London Sunday Telegraph recently rated it "an astonishing professional product . . . in a polished format that would grace any periodical."

But more than publishing a glossy, well-edited magazine, Branson offers a sympathetic ear to thousands of troubled young people in England. For in each issue, he urges his readers to "give us your headaches."

And in they pour. The 12 phones never stop ringing and letters arrive by the scores each day at "student's" headquarters in a rundown five-storey house in the Bayswater section of London.

In one week recently, the cramped, third-floor office that serves as an "advisory centre" handled 60 calls from young, pregnant girls and hundreds more from teenagers whose problems ranged from unemployment to homosexuality.

"What we've done," explains Branson across his cluttered desk, "is to develop a group of expert contacts—doctors, lawyers and social workers—who understand young people and are willing to help them for little or no money. We're a referral centre for people with no place to go."

One such person was Glenn Shands, a 24-year-old University of North Carolina graduate who appeared at the advisory centre six months ago with problems that, as he says, had him "going through a pretty bad time." Branson helped him out and today Shands is director of the centre.

Fresh from a private school in Surrey and with no publishing experience, Branson started his now-burgeoning enterprise in a dreary, two-room basement flat, sharing a bedroom with the building's rusty boiler.

At first, advertisers turned him away. But after he had succeeded in cajoling articles out of Redgrave and Baldwin, they began to listen. Still, it was tough going. "I think I sold one ad for every 100 advertisers I talked to," he recalls.

At the same time, Branson began interviewing almost anyone of interest who would talk with him. For an article on prostitutes and strippers, he spent a week wandering the neon streets of Soho, a tape-recorder hidden under his jacket.

"I started out by asking a lot of childish questions," he recalls of his first encounter. "But it was because I was so young that she talked to me. It cost me five quid. But it was a beautiful interview."

While interviewing and hustling advertising, Branson also rounded up six young assistants. Stashing their sleeping bags where they could, they moved into the basement apartment with him and began putting together the first issue of "Student."

On the day the first press run of 50,000 copies arrived back from the printers, Branson and his staff spent four hours lugging the bundles into the basement only to discover when it was filled to the ceiling that 20,000 copies remained out on the sidewalk.

"I had to crawl over piles of magazines to reach the telephone so I could call friends and ask them to store the rest of the magazines in their apartments," recalls Branson.

Selling the first issue, however, proved no difficulty whatsoever. Weeks before it came off the presses, Branson had arranged for students at 20 universities to sell it on their campuses and had recruited young volunteers to hawk the magazine in the streets of London.

The issue—with articles on music and fashion, student poems, a short story by John Le Carre, a piece by Miss Redgrave on education and one by Henry Moore on youth and the arts—sold out in three weeks.

Today, "Student's" expanded Bayswater quarters are more a commune than an editorial office. Most of the staffers live on the premises and, except for a few top editors, work for room and board only.

"We don't need any extra cash," explains Branson. "All our friends live and work here with us. Our social life is here. It's really kind of fun."

A quarterly at the outset, "Student" is now a bi-monthly and will be a monthly by June. Branson is also busily planning German, French and U.S. editions, has opened up an advisory centre called Help International in Paris and expects to begin one soon in Philadelphia.

"I just wanted to start a national magazine for people my age," he recalled not long ago. "But now I sometimes wonder if I've started a magazine or a movement."

Car-Hungry Russians Turn to You-Know-Who

By JAY AXELBANK
(Newsweek Feature Service)

MOSCOW — Ever since the Russian Revolution of 1917, the Soviet government has dismissed the automobile as an unnecessary frill and just another example of capitalist extravagance. For years, in fact, the massive Soviet economy has been producing far fewer cars than Canada or Japan.

But now, in an abrupt turnabout, the Kremlin has apparently decided that wheels might actually add to, rather than subvert, the glories of Communism. And with the singleness of industrial purpose possible only in a totalitarian system, the U.S.S.R. is rushing full force into the automotive 20th century.

Statistics help tell the tale. The auto industry is now receiving an unprecedented amount of state cash — $1.4 billion alone last year. And that sum is expected to be doubled within five years. Some 348,000 cars, moreover, are supposed to be produced this year, more than twice the number turned out in 1964 and nearly 10 per cent higher than the 1969 total.

But of all the evidence of the new Soviet auto boom, nothing has been so striking as the presence in Moscow during April of that prototypical American capitalist, Henry Ford II.

Desperate for better ideas, the Russians turned to Ford for help in building and operating a hugh truck-manufacturing complex 500 miles east of Moscow. (How much Ford will actually do depends on the sweetness of the deal offered, as well as on how much the U.S. government will permit.)

Why have the Soviets suddenly reversed themselves and joined the modern auto age?

There seem to be two main reasons. One is the increasing public clamor for cars. A recent survey taken in two large cities showed that almost all Russians, regardless of income or education, list cars right along with refrigerators as the most desirable consumer items.

As a government newspaper, Isvestia, stated flatly, "The desire of the people for automobiles is . . . irresistible." The longing is closer to passion than mere desire: Russians are willing to wait in line for years for the privilege of shelling out more than four year's total income, or about $5,500, for a small, 50-horsepower Moskvich.

A more compelling reason is the government's belated recognition that a country as huge and diverse as the Soviet Union cannot hope to distribute goods and raw materials entirely by air or horse-drawn cart. Many of the nation's major regional centres just aren't connected by land to railroad terminals and river ports, and consequently food distribution and industrial supplies have lagged badly. Cars and trucks are clearly needed.

Still, the Soviets' program to achieve automotive parity with the West is likely to be an uphill crawl. Technically, the Russians are currently eighth in the world in auto production, but since so few countries produce cars, the claim is meaningless.

The U.S.S.R.'s figure of 300,000 cars made annually are the stuff of which automobile graveyards are made. Only 80,000 of the more than one million miles of road are paved, and the best of those are two-lane strips, unlighted.

Most of the roads in Russia places the country at about the level of U.S. production in 1914. In all the Soviet Union today, there are fewer than 2 million cars (vs. 86.6 million in the U.S.).

Even if the Russians are destined to have a Ford in their future, production won't begin for several years. In the meantime, they are relying heavily on the $800-million Fiat plant started three years ago in Stavropol on the banks of the Volga River. The joint venture with Italy is expected to give the thrifty Russian consumer at least a fighting chance to own his own car when the first models appear this spring.

The Fiat 124 sedan will sell for about $4,500, as compared to $6,218 for a Volga, Russia's pride and joy since 1957, and $5,478 for the smaller Moskvich.

Even with its relatively few cars, Russia already has an appalling safety record. Traffic accidents claimed 16,000 lives last year in just one of the Soviet republics, the Russian Federation. In Moscow, which has a notorious alcohol problem, drunks are forever lurching out of dimly lit side streets into the paths of oncoming cars.

Mackasey Defends Multi-Nation Unions

OTTAWA (CP) — Growing numbers of Canadian workers are going to be organized within multi-national unions to avoid "victimization" by world-wide corporations seeking to rationalize their operations, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey predicted Tuesday.

Mackasey noted as an example of such rationalization the announced closing of a Dunlop Tire Corp. plant in Toronto involving the layoff of close to 500 workers.

Dunlop headquarters in London have explained that the electrical goods plant was being closed because of inadequate profits. The issue has aroused protests among English trade unionists.

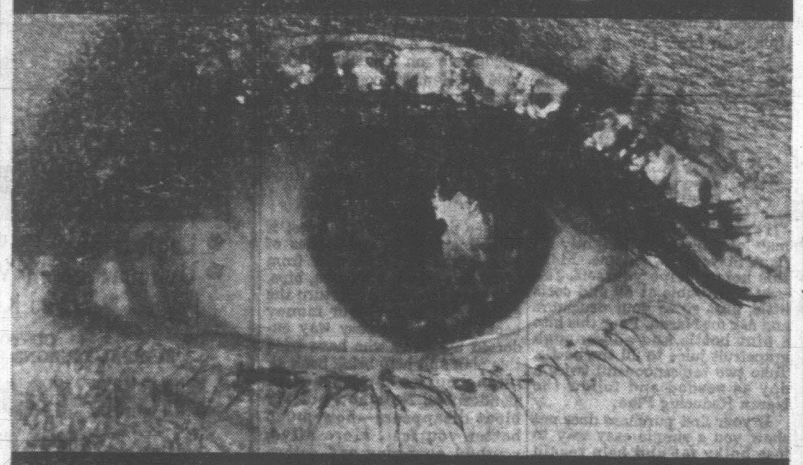

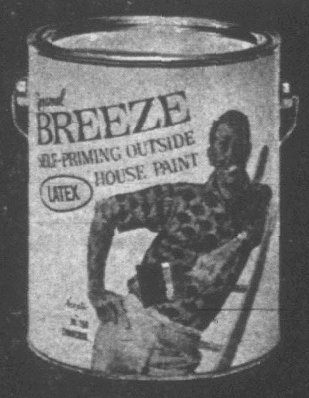

Appearing before the Commons labor committee, Mr. Mackasey refused to reassure uneasy members that the government plans any new legislative restrictions on the role of international unions in Canada.

Casual Users of Marijuana 'Healthy, Normal People'

By STUART L. AUERBACH

SAN FRANCISCO (WP) — Pot smokers aren't all alike, a team of Boston psychiatrists reported here this week.

The team found vast differences in the social adjustment, mental health and working abilities between casual smokers of marijuana and chronic users even though they all were of the same age, educational level, racial distribution, social class.

"Casual smokers," the psychiatrists said, use marijuana once a week or less and make up "the great majority" of pot users.

OTHER DRUGS

They are generally healthy individuals who smoke marijuana becasue of its "pleasurable effects." They have "good to excellent" work habits, normal relations with friends and few sexual hangups. Except for alcohol, they rarely use other drugs.

Heavy users, on the other hand, smoke marijuana at least once a day. Besides pleasure, they say pot gives them "enhanced insight, the wish for union with some cosmic force and a sense of harmony."

They have all experimented widely with drugs; half of them have taken at least 25 LSD trips. Most of them have troubles at their jobs and they work at menial or mechanical tasks below their intellectual ability. They have poor relations with friends and sexual problems.

PSYCHIATRIC

Oddly enough, the psychiatrists found, none of the 12 casual users or the 12 heavy users of marijuana have ever used heroin, rejecting a wildly-held law enforcement theory that marijuana smoking leads to heroin addiction. Alcohol was the first drug that all 24 persons used.

The psychiatrists — Drs. Steven M. Mirin, Leo M. Shapiro, Roger E. Meyer and Richard C. Pillard—concluded that personality defects make some people take drugs more often and switch from one drug to another.

"One wonders," the psychiatrists said, "whether the inability to get close to people or an escape from feelings of loneliness has provided the impetus for repetitive drug use."

The heavy drug users also show increased hostility — possibly because they are angry when psychiatrists question them about work and sexual and social adjustment.

Adding weight to the Boston report was a study released here about marijuana use at the University of Vermont.

DEEP PROBLEMS

It found that students who suffered personality disturbances from drugs were emotionally unstable before using them.

It also found that a student who uses marijuana only "has an intact personality and is grappling with a social problem." He is not different from non-users on the campus.

Multiple drug users, however, have deeper psychological problems.

Another study reported here by Dr. Lester Grinspoon of Harvard found possible medical uses for marijuana. This backs the conclusions reached in top-secret army biological warfare research at the Edgewood Md. Arsenal as long as 10 years ago, but not declassified until recently.

Grinspoon advanced the possibility that smoking marijuana may in fact protect some from serious mental illness by dulling "the impact of unbearable anxiety or an overwhelming reality."

He suggested that marijuana might be useful in treating some narcotic withdrawal symptoms, melancholia, insomnia, childbirth psychosis and migraine headaches.

"The clearest risk of the use of marijuana in this country," he concluded, is that of conviction of a felony or misdemeanor with its attendant permanent social and career damage."

Girl Arsonist Remanded

DUNCAN — Shirley Thomas, 18, of Duncan, pleaded guilty to arson in court Monday and was remanded to June 1 for presentence report.

She was charged with arson after Cyril Canute's house on Tzouhalem Road was destroyed by fire late Saturday night.

The house was unoccupied at the time of fire. Estimated damage to the house was $4,000. North Cowichan-Southend volunteer fire department answered the fire call.

Alberta Gas

The Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd. had net income of $1.94 million or 59 cents a share in the first quarter of 1970 compared with $1.87 million or 65 cents a share for the same period in 1969.

President J. C. Mahaffy said the decline in earnings a share was due to increased interest costs and an increase in the number of shares outstanding.

Included in net income was a gain of $169,000 on the purchase of first mortgage bonds and secured debentures for sinking fund purposes. Natural gas volume increased 21 per cent.

Killarney

The initial diamond drill hole on Marysville, N.B., property of Killarney Oil and Gas Development Co. Ltd. encountered a coal bearing zone at 1,145 feet and returned a total of 30 inches of bituminous coal at this depth.

The hole was drilled about 500 feet west of an oil test well which found the coal zone at 1,065 feet and was drilled from a site at an elevation of 78 feet higher than the test well.

Ross Loring, general manager of Killarney Oil and Gas said it appears the hole represents the outlining wall of a coal bed and that a major formation lies in the property. A second test hole is planned.

Peyto

Peyto Oils Ltd. of Calgary has made a bid to obtain control of Giant Reef Petroleums Ltd. of Vancouver.

Peyto has offered to exchange one Peyto share for 3¾ shares of Giant Reef.

Giant Reef directors have recommended that shareholders accept the offer, good until May 25 and subject to the condition that not less than 51 per cent of the outstanding shares of Giant Reef are tendered.

Superior

Canadian Superior Oil Ltd. reports a net loss of $160,063 or two cents a share in the first quarter of 1970, compared with net income of $507,301 or six cents a share in the first three months of 1969.

Gross operating income was $9.57 million compared with $9.3 million.

President A. E. Feldmeyer said in an interim report crude oil revenues increased 22 per cent and condensate and liquid petroleum revenues were up 15 per cent, but a continuing erosion of prices and lower exports reduced sulphur revenues by 78 per cent.

Hollinger

Hollinger Mines Ltd. net profit fell more than $2 million because of a mid-season iron ore strike, which also affected subsidiary Labrador Mining and Exploration Co. Ltd. earnings.

President A. L. Fairley Jr., expected improved earnings for both Labrador and Iron Ore Co. of Canada Ltd. in the 1970 season, perhaps equal to the record levels of 1968.

Hesa id 1969 profit was $9.9 million ($2.01 per share) compared with $12.3 million $2.50) in 1968.

Fairley also predicted white paper tax proposals, if adopted, will drive mining expansion from Canada to competing countries.

Labrador

Labrador Mining and Exploration Company Ltd had 1969 earnings of $6.9 million or $2.08 a share compared with $7.9 million or $2.38 a share in 1968.

President A. L. Fairley attributed the decline to a strike in the Labrador iron ore fields last year which halted production for more than three months.

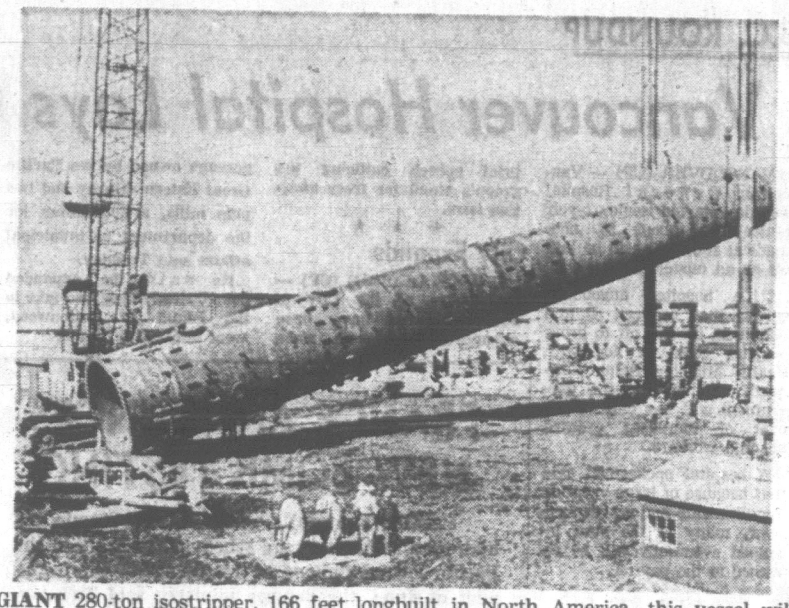

Neonex

Neonex International Ltd. reports consolidated net earnings of $127,000 for the first quarter of 1970, compared with 1969.

$438,000 for the same period in

Sales figures for the first three months of 1970 were $32.9 million, an increase of 8 per cent over sales of $30.46 million for the previous year. Earnings per share amounted to two cents this year with reported earnings in 1969 of seven cents.

The company said the drop in net earnings for the first quarter is primarily attributed to "a reduction in sales and one time costs."

Few Crumbs of Comfort In Latest Price Index

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer prices moved up last month by *the biggest spurt since last Nov*ember, but there were some crumbs of comfort for anti-inflation campaigners.

The consumer price index, a measure of retail rates calculated from a base of 100 points for 1961 prices, moved ahead to 129.7 points in April from 128.9 in March, Dominion Burueau of Statistics reported Tuesday.

The index shows in rough form that goods and services valued at $10 in 1961 had moved up in price to $12.89 in March and $12.97 last month. A year ago the price was $12.46.

Most components of the index contributed to the April increase, notably fruit, vegetables, mortgages, men's wear and dental fees.

In percentage terms, the April increase amounted to six-tenths of one per cent. That was the biggest monthly advance since the index rose at the same rate last November.

FLICKER OF HOPE

However, there are flickers of evidence among the statistics to suggest that the trend of price inflation is less rapid than it has been.

April prices generally are subject to an extra seasonal push, government economists say. Even at that, the percentage advance last month is only about half as strong as it was in April, 1969, about the same as it was in the previous April and less than in April, 1967.

Further, the increase in the index since April of last year is 4.1 per cent, the lowest year-to-year advance in any month since early in 1969.

The increase of 1.4 per cent since the beginning of this year is less severe than the 1.8-per-cent advances recorded both in the equivalent stretch of 1969 and in the middle of last year.

Indexes for May and June should show whether underlying signs of a slowdown in retail price inflation are genuine.

The slight deceleration indicated by the 4.1-per-cent yearly advance in April remains well ahead of the average annual increase of about 3.2 per cent since the base index year of 1961.

Increased Gas Exports To U.S. Given Approval

VANCOUVER (CP) — American regulatory authorities have approved import of up to 800,000,000 cubic feet a day of British Columbia natural gas, Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. announced Tuesday.

The authorization by the U.S. federal power commission, subject to approval by the National Energy Board, would cancel all previous export contracts and substitute for them a new contract providing for increased prices and revenue to Westcoast.

The U.S. permit authorizes Westcoast and El Paso Natural Gas Co. to carry out an agreement signed last October involving a 20-year export contract value at $91,000,000 a year.

Previous export contracts called for exports worth approximately $500,000,000.

Hearings before the NEB in Ottawa to implement the contract have already been conducted by Westcoast.

If approval is given, Westcoast said it will embark on a $135,000,000 construction program that will include 234 miles of 36-inch loops and new compressor horsepower.

TO EXPAND PLANT

It also calls for additions to its Fort Nelson, B.C., processing plant and construction of a 110-mile pipeline from Fort Nelson to the Northwest Territories.

The new sales agreement is the largest in Westcoast history. Currently, the company has authorization for export of 500,000,000 cubic feet a day under two previous contracts.

Weighted average price per thousand cubic feet now is 27.4 cents. Under the new agreement, the border price would be 32.6 cents in 1971 and rise to 35.01 cents in 1973, with further increases at five-year intervals.

The company's planned construction program would enable it to export 575,000,000 cubic feet a day by November, 725,000,000 by November 1971 and 800,000,000 by Nobember, 1972.

Boeing Loses Bid For Space Craft

SEATTLE (AP) — The Boeing Co. has lost out in its bid to build a space shuttle craft which is expected to be a big part of the major American manned spaceflight program for many years.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration notified members of Washington's congressional delegation Tuesday that finalists in the competition will be the McDonnell Douglas Corp., St. Louis, and North American Rockwell Corp., Downey, Calif.

Boeing, which had teamed with Lockheed on the project, and Grumman Arospace were eliminated in the competition for the next phase of the shuttle program.

McDonnell Douglas and North American Rockwell each was awarded 11-month contracts of about $8,000,000 for preliminary design studies of the space transportation system.

The space shuttle, a reusable craft to carry passengers to and from orbiting space stations, had been a major new business goal of Boeing's aerospace group. The system, planned to go into operation before 1980, is expected to involve more than $10,000,000,000.

The preliminary design studies will involve only limited, specialized manpower, so loss of the space shuttle will have no immediate major impact on Boeing empoyment. But officials said if Boeing had been the eventual winner the long-term manpower requirements would have been considerable.

Ginter Seeks To Gain Control Of Wine Company

KELOWNA (CP) — The president of Mission Hill Wines Ltd. announced Tuesday that Prince George industrialist Ben Ginter has made a proposal to purchase controlling interest in the wine company.

W. W. Stewart said if the proposal is carried through Ginter's Uncle Ben's Tartan Holdings Ltd. would assume controlling interest of Mission Hill, which would merge with Uncle Ben's Tartan Breweries.

Stewart said the proposal has been unanimously recommended to the shareholders by the directors of Mission Hill, which commenced operations at its plant in nearby Westbank in 1966.

Mission Hill is in need of substantial additional financing, Mr. Stewart said, and adequate additional funds will be made available to the company if the proposal is carried out.

Profile: what kind of man buys a car with an ornament like this?

Mercedes-Benz takes a close look at a different kind of automobile buyer. One who isn't swept off his feet by hood-scoops, fancy stripes, and chromium plate.

IT is very nearly impossible to fit the Mercedes-Benz owner within a particular socio economic group. He may be a school teacher, or a stock-broker. But when it comes to his basic attitudes, we can make some fairly accurate assumptions.

1. Our kind of man is a perfectionist and a seeker of quality. He regrets that the word "quality" has lost much of its true meaning in recent years through hackneyed use.

2. For that reason, our man generally dislikes puffed-up, showy advertising. He abhors attempts to manipulate his good taste and common sense. If his car has to have advertising, he wants that advertising to make sense.

3. A Mercedes-Benz owner usually feels closer to his car than does an owner of another make. His car is an extension of his personality. He feels that both his car, and himself, are comfortably above average.

4. By owning a Mercedes-Benz he can express his individuality, and status, without feeling or suggesting that he's a show-off.

5. How does our man feel behind the wheel? For one thing, he feels comfortable. He probably knows more about his car's superb engineering features than owners of other cars. He knows why he feels comfortable. The seats in his car were designed with the help of an orthopedic surgeon. And he appreciates their beautiful upholstery.

6. He feels secure, too. He knows that a Mercedes-Benz has non-fade disc brakes on all four wheels. An articulated rear axle designed to keep the wheels on the ground — no matter how hard he drives, or how rough the road. A collapsible steering column for safety. And a specially strengthened rattle-free body that could save his, and his passengers' lives, in a roll-over accident.

Now, how does the mantle of a Mercedes-Benz owner fit you? If you are still not absolutely sure, send for our illustrated brochure. And arrange for a test drive in one of our 1970 models on display at the Mercedes-Benz dealers shown below.

You may be one of the reasons why "our kind of man" is steadily increasing in numbers!

'Social Action' Plan Unveiled

EDMONTON (CP) — The executive of the 1,650,000-member Canadian Labor Congress is seeking authority to establish a special foundation to build community medical centres across Canada, CLC president Donald MacDonald said Tuesday.

MacDonald told a news conference that the CLC's 10-man executive committee will put the medical centre plan to the 30-member CLC executive council later this week.

19 PAPERS

The proposal is just one of several calls for increased "social action" by the CLC which are contained in 19 position papers being considered during four days of closed sessions by the committee and the council.

Once given executive approval, the proposals must go to the 1,600 delegates attending the CLC's biennial convention here next week.

The position papers, yet to be released, contain recommendations for increased CLC action in human rights, poverty, consumer affairs, housing and aid to the aged.

Protesters Force Campus Closure

CARBONDALE, Ill. (Reuters) — Thousands of angry students Tuesday night forced the indefinite closure of Southern Illinois University, where anti-war demonstrators clashed with state police last week.

Following an incident in which students smashed windows in the office of the president and staged a massive sit-down protest, chancellor Robert MacVicar announced the university, which has an enrolment of 24,000, "is closed for an indefinite period of time."

Vancouver Hospital Lays Off 50 Employees

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver General Hospital Tuesday started issuing layoff notices to about 50 non-medical staff who will be laid off as an austerity measure.

The hospital announced earlier that between 80 and 100 would be laid off to bring hospital costs in line with Health Minister Ralph Loffmark's ruling that the government will pay only 70 per cent of increases granted hospital workers.

A hospital spokesman said that because of large vacation requirements and a high turnover, many of the staff involved eventually will be returned to the payroll.

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Boundaries of the City of Prince George have been expanded to include some acreage owned by the Pacific Great Estern railway and two pulp mills, a spokesman for the department of municipal affairs said Tuesday.

He said the expanded boundaries, which also take in the island of Cottonwood, went into effect May 5.

One reason the island was included within the city was to enable the municipality to assist development on the island, which the spokesman described as a depressed area.

'NOT STRONG ENOUGH' CHARGE MPs

Bill to Hide Criminal Records Passes

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill designed to free former criminals from the stigma of their records was passed by the Commons Tuesday despite charges that it is not strong enough to be effective.

The bill would enable persons who had been imprisoned or put on probation to apply for a pardon, which would be approved by the National Parole Board on proof of good behavior.

Applications could be made two years after punishment had ceased in cases of summary convictions or five years after in cases of indictable offences.

Following a pardon, records would not be disclosed without the consent of the justice minister.

Arnold Peters (NDP—Temiskaming) said the bill would be misunderstood by the public just as last year's amendments to the abortion section of the Criminal Code were misunderstood.

In that case people had thought abortion regulations had been eased, when in fact they had been tightened.

SLATE NOT WIPED

In this case the public will think a man's criminal record can be expunged, when the bill would not accomplish that aim.

If the bill was honest, he said, it would forbid employers to ask a man whether he has a criminal record, and would make review for pardon automatic instead of making a man apply for it.

Asking for a pardon would trigger inquiries from police on a man's character which would reveal his record to those asked.

The Commons also passed a bill which would set up a national law reform commission.

Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) said he hoped the commission would not be used as a delaying mechanism whenever law changes are called for.

He also took the opportunity to dig at last year's Criminal Code abortion amendment—still topical in the House the day after 36 women were removed from the galleries for halting proceedings by chanting slogans in favor of abortion on demand.

ABORTION NOT EASIER

Mr. Woolliams agreed with Mr. Peters that last year's amendments did not make it easier to get a therapeutic abortion—in fact they made it more difficult.

Mr. Peters said that before the changes, one doctor in consultation with another could perform an abortion, but now a person has to apply to committees restricted to a few large hospitals.

Earlier, Speaker Lucien Lamoureux informed the Commons that women who had gained entry to the government and opposition galleries had done so with forged passes.

He said the incident was of justifiable concern to Canadians who did not want Parliament disrupted by such organizations.

But members should think carefuly before deciding to tighten security regulations. The question of the security of Parliament was referred to the Commons procedure committee.

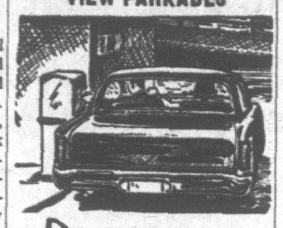

Ambrose H. Peddle (PC—Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador), one of the members whose name was forged, said he would ask the RCMP to investigate the case.

SONIC BOOM SHAKES PACIFIC NORTHWEST

VANCOUVER (CP) — A sonic boom heard as far south as Seattle and and as far east as Chilliwack, shook Americans and Canadians out of their beds early today.

The boom was caused by an aircraft breaking the sound barrier and was believed part of a large North American Air Defence exercise over western North America today.

Staggering Costs Part Of Staging Olympics

DRAPEAU ADDS NEW 'MIRACLE'

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau is a dreamer who started his municipal career as a crime buster and since has changed the character of Montreal with successes as a world's fair promoter, subway builder, and major league baseball fan.

Tuesday at Amsterdam, he added another "miracle" when he won the 1976 summer Olympic Games for Canada's largest city.

Jean Drapeau, who once dreamed of becoming a missionary, has always been guided by one basic principle—optimism — through good and bad periods. He's had plenty of both.

He once summed up his philosophy for the bilingual metropolis this way:

"We have accepted the vocation of Montreal to tackle great challenges."

Almost mystical in his sense of mission for Montreal, Mr. Drapeau, 54, thinks big, talks big. His milieu is the millions, but he provided an insight into another side of his vision with this bit of economic thinking:

"My own definition of propsperity is expressed in the terms of the speed with which $1 changes hands. If in one day the same $1 changes hands 100 times, that makes 100 people happy.

"Perhaps it comes back to the first spender. If the first keeps his dollar, there is no happiness and no prosperity."

Won't Be Spending Spree Claims Montreal Mayor

From AP Reports

In Los Angeles Tuesday night it was more like a wake than the celebration that had been planned. The city had lost to Montreal in a bid to stage the 1976 Summer Olympic Games.

In Amsterdam, there was bitterness in the voice of Los Angeles mayor Sam Yorty, who said by telephone that his city "was a victim of the cold war."

Yorty contended the International Olympic Committee "just refused to decide between Russia and the United States and took the easy way out" by granting the games to the Canadian city.

But the mayor added Montreal "was a very good city" and would handle the task well.

The Los Angeles bid emphasized that almost all the facilities needed were already built and ready for action. Also in the advanced planning stages was an Olympic village.

The Los Angeles delegation had made no secret they considered Moscow as its principal rival. Montreal was given almost no chance.

Said Canadian-born Jack Kent Cooke, owner of the Forum: "Oh, that's incredible: Montreal was the also-ran. They were the ones everyone downgraded."

In the surprise move, Montreal beat out Moscow and Los Angeles to bring the Olympics —held in Mexico City in 1968 and scheduled for Munich in 1972—to Canada for the first time. Denver in mountainous Colorado was selected for the winter competition—also surprising since the Winter and Summer Olympics will be on the same continent in the same year.

Montreal, aided by the super salesmanship of dynamic Mayor Jean Drapeau, who had brought a world's fair—Expo 67—and major league baseball to his Quebec metropolis for the first time in Canada, won over Moscow on the second ballot.

Moscow had a plurality on the first ballot but was eight votes shy of the required majority as it led Montreal 28 to 25, with Los Angeles third with 17. There were 70 IOC voting members.

With Los Angeles eliminated from the second ballot, nearly all of the California city's supporters switched to Montreal while Moscow did not gain any votes. Montreal finished with 41 votes to 28 for the Soviet capital. There was one blank ballot.

The Los Angeles delegation expressed disappointment, but the Soviet news agency Tass, smarting from the embarrassment of erroneously announcing the selection of Moscow based on its plurality after the first ballot, denounced the choice of the Canadian city as "contrary to logic and common sense."

SEE WESTERN MONOPOLY

The decision, it said, was a "blow to the Olympic movement and its ideals" and charged that "it can be concluded that some people in the IOC regard the holding of Olympic Games as a privilege of Western countries."

The 1972 Winter Games will be in Sapporo, Japan.

Drapeau, jubilant that his city of about 2,500,000 population had bested the Russian capital of more than 7,000,000, proclaimed that Montreal will put on the Games with "simplicity, dignity and in the great tradition of the grandeur of man." Montreal will not make an "astronomic" spending spree of the Games.

Drapeau ducked questions about how much might be spent on the Games, although the city obviously had spent plenty on its presentation to the IOC, including elaborate scale models of a proposed sports site around Maisonneuve Park in Montreal East.

Denver will play host in a year that marks the 100th anniversary of Colorado and the 200th birthday of the United States.

HITS COMMERCIALISM

But by that time, if the IOC clamps down on commercialism and professionalism in sports, two big drawing cards could be missing—Alpine skiing and hockey.

The IOC turned its attention today to a request by its 86-year-old chairman, Avery Brundage of Chicago, to eliminate Alpine skiing from Olympic competition.

Brundage wants skiing thrown out because of amateur skiers participating in commercial advertising for sporting equipment.

Super Salesman at Work

Bitter Soviets Say Rejection Strike at Ideals of Olympics

MOSCOW (UPI) — The official Soviet news agency Tass said Tuesday night the choice of Montreal as the site of the 1976 Olympic games was "surprising and strikes at the Olympic movement and its ideals."

In a first bitter reaction to the rejection of the first bid by a communist country for the games, the Soviets said the decision was adopted by the International Olympic Committee in Amsterdam "contrary to elementary logic and common sense."

Tass news agency reported an impression" from Amsterdam that "some members of the IOC proceeded not from the principle of expanding and consolidating the Olympic movement but from their personal political likes and dislikes."

Suggesting politics played a major part in the decision, Tass added the repection of Moscow's bid "cannot but be regarded as a blow at the Olympic movement and its ideals. It can be concluded that some people in the IOC regard the holding of Olympic games as a privilege of the western countries."

It also suggested the big advertising budgets lavished on their presentation by Montreal and Los Angeles left the Soviets at a disadvantage.

"Moscow candidature won support among the sporting public, among prominent sports officials and famous champions. Moscow took part in the competition honestly and in full conformity with the Olympic charter whereas both Los Angeles and Montreal were warned in February by the IOC executive committee in connection with big spending on advertising."

Moscow, in the opinion of westerners, had two factors going for it:

● It has a tremendous existing plant in the way of stadiums, playing fields, practice fields and arenas, and the whole power of the state to ensure any additional facilities including an Olympic village in the next six years.

● It was the first time a communist country, and one which soared in less than 20 years to the position of number one competitor to the United States, had felt confident enough to bid for the games.

Tass said Moscow "had clear cut and unquestionable arguments in its favor from the point of view of sport, economy and politics."

It added "Soviet sportmen, competing in Olympic Games since 1952, have made an undeniably weighty contribution to the Olympic cause."

Besides a possible lack of sophistication by the Soviets in competing with the high-powered glossy lobbying of the United States and Canada, and Montreal's previous try for the games, two factors were running against Moscow in the view of westerners here:

● The question whether, after 50 years of deep suspicion of foreigners, the Soviets could actually bring themselves to open their borders, issue visas freely, and abstain from such political profiteering as the protracted argument in earlier Olympics over such matters as the East German national anthem:

● The doubt whether the Soviets, while providing every facility for the athletes, could rise to the challenge of accommodating Olympic fans in tens of thousands, with their demands for comfortable rooms, appetising meals, prompt service, and after-hours relaxation.

SCHOOL RELAYS

Gordon Head Keeps Crown

Gordon Head captured the junior high school title for the second successive year before approximately 1,200 spectators, while Mount Douglas again won the senior high championship.

Richmond dominated the elementary division by nailing down the girls, boys and aggregate team trophies while Gordon Head swept its division in similar fashion.

HONORS SHARED

Claremont and defending-champion Mount Douglas tied for girls' honors and Mount Doug took the boys' title by one point over host Esquimalt.

Lake Hill, the defending elementary champion, failed to enter this year.

Records fell by the wayside with senior high school competitors smashing five marks, junior high athletes breaking four and tying two while elementary competitors snapped two records.

Mount Douglas established new records in the boys' 4x100 and 4x200-metre relays. Others were set by Pratt Heatherington of Shawningan Lake in the boys' shotput, Mike Hicks of Brentwood College in the pole vault and Oak Bay in the girls' 4x200-metre releay.

Pete Sivertson of Gordon Head and Cathy Verdrell of S. J. Willis both broke junior high shot put records while Oak Bay established a new standard in the boys' 4x200 and Gordon Head followed suit in the mixed 4x800 event.

Other junior high marks were set by John Hunter of Elizabeth Fisher in the pole vault and Colquitz girls in the 4x200 relay.

Elementary records fell to Richmond in the mixed 4x400 competition and to Shelbourne in the 8x50 event.

Brian London Quits Boxing

LONDON (AP) — Joe Bugner, Britain's rising heavyweight boxing star, punched Brian London into retirement Tuesday night with a flurry of right hands that stopped the former world title contender in five rounds.

The 20-year-old Bugner, taller and stronger than his 35-year-old opponent, controlled the scheduled 10-round fight. London promptly announced the end of his 15-year ring career.

Triumphs in Pairs Feature Track Meet

Competition in the senior boys' category produced the largest number of double victories Tuesday during the inter-house track and field meet at Royal Oak Junior High School.

All but one of the senior events were captured by Neil Thompson (100 and 220-yard dashes), Dave Redmann (440-yards, triple jump) and Bruce Handysides (high jump, shot put).

The pole vault was won by Steve Brossard.

With the exception of the senior boys' events, double winners were scarce Tuesday in the inter-house track and field meet at Royal Oak Junior High School.

Neil Thompson (100 and 220 yards), Dave Redmann (440 yards, triple jump) and Bruce Handysides (high jump, shot put) captured all but one of the senior events — the pole vault, won by Steve Brossard.

There were no double winners in the intermediate boys. Event winners were Wayne Tippett (100 yards), Peter Theodore (220 yards), Brad Moore (440 yards), Doug Nicholson (high jump), Dave Sharp (long jump), Greg Inouye (shot put), Kelvin Donahue (triple jump) and Gordon Welch (pole vault).

Kim Hodson was the only junior boy to win two events, taking the 100 and 220-yard dashes. Other winners were Eric Spice (440 yards), Alex Skinner (high jump), Andy Masters (discus), Jim Daw (triple jump) and Terry Painter (pole vault).

There was only one double winner in each of the girls' divisions; senior Jean Palfrey taking the 100 and 220-yard sprints, intermediate Susan Porter winning the 100 yards and long jump and junior Laura Dencni taking the 220 yards and long jump.

Other senior winners were Roseanne Kelpin (440 yards), Susan Taylor (high jump), Janice Loughney (discus) and Susan Callan (shot put.)

Intermediate winners were Leslie Pearson (220 yards), Gayle Stewart (440 yards) Debbie Stewart (high jump) and Debbie Salisbury (discus).

Junior events were won by Sandra Polson (100 yards), Suzanne Hiqueban (440 yards), Colleen Wright (high jump) and Debbie Trill (shot put).

House III took team honors with 389 points followed by House I with 347 and House II, 330.

Vancouver Burrards opened the 1970 Western Lacrosse Association season on a winning note Tuesday and Victoria Shamrocks are hoping for a similar start while visiting Salmonbellies in New Westminster on Thursday.

Co-coaches Ron Jay and Bert Bertoia of Victoria agreed that the Irish looked better in the shooting department during Monday night's practise session and if the squad could overcome its third-period slump — they should win Thursday night.

"After all," said Jay. "We've only lost this season by a couple of points."

In Vancouver, John Allen fired five goals in a losing cause as Burrards scored an 11-8 victory over Coquitlam Adanacs before 300 fans.

Adanac defenceman Doug Wallsmith was ejected from the game in the third period after leaping out of the players' box and punching referee Barry Balance in the face.

He drew an indefinite suspension pending action by league commissioner Tom English.

Adanacs, who won the league championship last season, but lost to New Westminster in the playoffs, jumped to a 4-2 first-period lead on three of Allen's goals and another by Paul Scriver.

But Burrards came back in the middle frame to outscore Coquitlam 5-2 and then fired three quick tallies in the third period to wrap up the victory.

Art Dickinson and Gord Frederickson each scored three times to pace Vancouver's attack while single markers were added by Brian Ainsley, Ron Flaten, Bob Trainor, Ross MacDonald and Bob Salt.

Bill McMurchy and Bill Bradley added lone goals for Coquitlam.

Stage Now Being Set For Battle of Yachts

NEW YORK (CP-AP) — The adventure of two sleek vessels battling the seas and each other for possession of the yachting world's greatest glory, the America's Cup, is still more than four months away. But already the stage is being set.

In about a month, the Americans will begin summer-long trials to select from three classy 12-metre specimens the speediest yacht to defend a Victorian trophy the United States has clutched tenaciously since 1851.

And beginning Aug. 18, "outsiders" who want to wrench it away—this year France and Australia—will hoist sails to determine who gets to challenge once again the boat-building supremacy and seamanship of the Americans.

Five contenders will become two by Sept. 15, start of the classic racing series over a 24.3-mile triangular course in waters of the Atlantic off picturesque Newport, R.I.

INTREPID WON CUP

In 1967, in the last America's Cup race, it was the Intrepid skippered by Emil (Bus) Mosbacher of White Plains, N.Y., that dashed off with the honors against an outclassed Dame Pattie, an Australian challenger.

This year, the Intrepid is facing a double-barrelled domestic challenge before the international competition gets under way.

Skating Queen Ends Competitive Career

BERLIN (AP)—World figure skating champion Gabi Seyfert of East Germany has retired from active competition.

The official East German news agency (ADN) says that "from now on she will be active as a trainer in her native city of Karl-Marx-Stadt."

Student Plans Locust Plague To Greet Cricket Springboks

COLWYN BAY, Wales (Reuters) — An anti-apartheid student here plans to wreck next month's South African cricket tour of England with an army of locusts.

David Wilton — Godberford, a 20-year-old biology student, says he already has 50,000 of the voracious insects ready to raze the cricket pitches. He plans to release up to 100,000 locusts on a particular field when the weather is hot enough for the locusts to perform well.

"They will ravage every blade of grass and green foliage," he said. "The greatest care will be taken to ensure that they are in the correct physiological stage.

"So that their insatiable appetite will not be impaired, they will not be fed for 24 hours before the moment of truth."

In a brick building behind his home, rows of small glass-fronted cages contain thousands of locusts, kept warm by the heat from electric bulbs. There are also scores of bottles containing eggs.

By the time the all-white South African cricket team arrives in Britain, he says that 500,000 locusts will be ready for release on to cricket pitches.

Ernie Gains 500 Plateau; Richie Reaches Upper Deck

By The Associated Press

The 39-year-old Banks banged his 500th career homer Tuesday in helping Chicago Cubs edge Atlanta Braves 4-3 in 11 innings.

Allen unloaded a 450-foot blast that carried more than 60 feet above the wall to lead St. Louis Cardinals to a 9-5 triumph over Philadelphia Phillies.

"I don't know about distance and all that," said Allen the once-unhappy Phillie, "but I will say there's nothing too good for the fans of St. Louis."

In other National League games Cincinnati Reds topped Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3, San Diego Padres edged San Francisco Giants 6-5, Houston Astros downed Los Angeles Dodgers 8-3 and New York Mets beat Montreal Expos 8-4.

In slamming his 11th homer of the season and third in three games, Allen joined four others who have reached the upper deck in St. Louis. Willie McCovey, Orlando Cepeda, Mike Shannon and Deron Johnson were others who accomplished the feat.

Allen, whose blast came with a man aboard in the fifth, gave the Cards a 6-5 lead after they had trailed 5-1. Joe Hague and Allen drove in four runs apiece while Lou Brock collected four hits in backing Chuck Taylor's four-hit relief pitching through seven innings.

Bank's homer came in the second inning off Pat Jarvis for his third of the season, putting him with eight others in the 500-club, headed by Babe Ruth's 714.

He admitted that the pressure to hit No. 500 was getting to him "I was thinking about it on and off the field almost all the time," said the man who socked his first homer on Sept. 20, 1953.

Son Santo's scratch single with the bases loaded in the 11th pulled the Cubs past Atlanta.

Billy Williams hit his 12th homer of the year to send the game into extra innings. The Braves' Rico Carty extended his hitting streak to 30, seven short of Tommy Holmes' league mark.

Orioles Cash In on Rigney's Gamble

With Minnesota runners on first and third and Harmon Killebrew at bat, the Twins had all the makings of a pat hand in the American League.

But when Twins manager Bill Rigney placed his bet, Baltimore Orioles scooped up another stack of chips.

Pete Richert, summoned from the bullpen in the midst of a ninth inning Minnesota uprising Tuesday night, stranded the tying run at third by wiping out Killebrew and Twins baserunner Rod Carew on one pitch to save a 5-4 victory for the torrid Orioles.

Richert fired a third strike past Killebrew, and Carew was doubled trying to steal second for the final out, giving the Orioles their eighth straight victory.

"I gambled they wouldn't strike out Killebrew," said Rigney, who had flashed the steal sign to Carew.

While Baltimore maintained its six-game lead in the American League East, the Twins slipped into second place in the West, one game behind California Angels, who rallied for the four ninth inning runs to nip Boston 6-5.

YANKS BEAT BREWERS

Oakland Athletics topped Washington Senators 5-3 in 11 innings; New York Yankees downed Milwaukee Brewers 9-5 and Chicago White Sox whipped Detroit Tigers 7-2 in other AL action. Kansas City was rained out at Cleveland.

Jim Holt launched Minnesota's ninth-inning bid by drawing a lead off walk and then beating the throw to second on Cesar Tovar's sacrifice bunt. Eddie Watt, working in relief of winner Mike Cuellar, went to a 2-2 count on the lefthand hitting Carew before being replaced by Richert, a southpaw.

Richert got Carew to bounce into a force at second. Holt took third on the play, but got no farther as the Twins' run-and-hit gamble backfired.

Frank Robinson and Don Buford each drove in two Baltimore runs and Elrod Hendricks collected four of the Orioles' 14 hits off loser Jim Perry and two relievers.

Billy Cowan capped California's ninth-inning flurry with a two-run single, giving the Angels their sixth victory in seven games. Tony Conigliaro hit a two-run homer for the Red Sox.

SKIER REACHES 94 MPH IN DASH DOWN EVEREST

KATMANDU, Nepal (Reuters) — A Japanese professional skier reached a speed of 94 mph in attempt to ski down the slopes of Mount Everest, it has been learned.

The Japanese, Yuichiro Miura, wearing an oxygen tank, opened a parachute from his back after five seconds to slow his descent.

Starting about 3,200 feet below the 29,028-foot summit, he raced down the mountain for two miles.

But a strong wind gust caught the parachute two minutes and 20 seconds after the start, throwing Miura over.

The general manager of the Japanese Everest skiing expedition, Taisuke Fujishima, said Miura suffered a bruised hip in the incident but was otherwise well.

Record Purse Padded

BALTIMORE (AP) — The addition of Hickory Tree Farm's Buzkashi Tuesday increased to 13 the list of starters for Saturday's $150,000-added Preakness and further padded the already record purse.

Trainer Woods Garth told Pimlico officials that Buzkashi, fifth in last Saturday's Withers Mile, would be in the starting lineup for the 1 1-16-mile Preakness.

With 13 starters, the largest field since 1928 when Victorian beat 17 rivals, the gross value of the race would be $201,800 with $149,300 going to the winner.

Mud Slows Cars On Dash to Andes

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters) — Rainstorms turned dirt roads into quagmires Tuesday as Mexico-bound drivers in the World Cup motor rally raced towards the forbidding Andes Mountains.

The mud was so thick on the first special high speed stretch in Argentina that many drivers could clock only 50 miles an hour although they had expected to make 80 to 90 m.p.h.

Malcolm Jock Wilson, driving a Mercedes 220 in company with Jim Walker, said he intends to complete the long race to Mexico City despite all setbacks. Wilson and Walker, Britons now employed as policemen in Brampton, Ont., were 48th among the 49 competitors to finish the first Argentine prime — or speed-trial.

Hannu Mikkola of Finland and Swedish co-driver Gunnar Palm, in a British Ford Escort, were in first place after completing the second Argentine prime.

The bad conditions knocked out one of the four women's teams — Pat Ozanne and Katrina Kerridge from Cambridge, England, and Bronwyn Burrell, a 25-year-old New Zealander. They arrived at the Spartillar control point too late and were disqualified.

The drivers are due to finish the 16,000-mile rally in Mexico City on May 27, four days before the World Cup soccer matches begin.

Twenty-six of the original 96 starters were knocked out in the 5,000-mile European leg. Fewer than 50 of the cars which set off from Rio de Janeiro on the Latin American run last Friday are still in the race with the worst stretches through Bolivia and Peru still to come.

Darkness Leaves Teams in 1-1 Tie

Denford Electric and Langford Drywall were stymied by darkness Tuesday in an attempt to break a 1-1 dadlock in a Victoria Major Men's Softball League game at Central Park.

The game, called after nine innings, will be completed before the regularly-scheduled tussle between the clubs on May 25.

Canadiens Retain Title With Four-Game Sweep

MONTREAL (CP) — At the beginning of this junior hockey season, people were wondering whether Montreal Junior Canadiens could repeat as Memorial Cup champions after losing eight players from their 1969 team.

Their questions were answered Tuesday night as the Junior Canadiens captured their second consecutive national junior hockey title by defeating Weyburn Red Wings of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League 6-5 to win the best-of-seven final series 4-0.

"They were a good team and we had to work to beat them," said Canadiens coach Roger Bedard.

"I'm glad this thing is finally over. After a while it is tough for players to get up for games. It's about time the season ended."

Bedard and general manager Phil Wimmer were both doused with champagne, and Bedard and a few reporters were given free showers by the jubilant Montreal players.

The Red Wings spotted Montreal a 2-0 lead in the first period of Tuesday's game and then came up with four consecutive goals in the second period to grab a 4-2 lead.

But before the second ended, Montreal tied the score 4-4 and went on to grab a 6-4 lead by 14:16 of the third period.

CAME TOO LATE

Red Wings' John Rogers made it 6-5 with 2:50 remaining in the final period, but it was too little, too late.

The Canadiens became the ninth OHA team to win the Memorial Cup in the last 11 years and the third team to win the cup two consecutive years.

Oshawa Generals in 1939 and 1940 and Toronto Marlboros in 1955 and 1956 were the other double winners. Both are members of the Ontario Hockey Association.

"Winning the Memorial Cup is a once-in-a-lifetime chance," commented Canadiens defenceman Ian Turnbull. "We've won it now. I'm glad it's over. Now I can relax a bit."

FINISHED FOR SEASON

Wimmer said his club was not interested in a three-game series with Flin Flon Bombers, who suggested the series after winning the Western Canada Hockey League final with a four-game sweep over Edmonton Oil Kings.

"We are not interested in any more games," said Wimmer. "We're finished for the season."

Police Insist Attache Was Not Kidnapped

By PAMELA DIAMOND
The Manchester Guardian

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — The disappearance of Marine Lt.-Col. Walter R. Limbach, the American attache who vanished here last weekend — and reappeared 20 hours later—is still a mystery.

While the police insist they are satisfied Col. Limbach, the U.S. naval attache at the Cape Town American consulate, was not kidnapped, the Americans insist he was.

And Col. Limbach, who flew to Pretoria Monday for discussions in connection with his week-end disappearance with the American ambassador, William Rountree, is reported to be distressed by the conflict over his story that he was kidnapped.

QUESTIONED

Col. Limbach vanished on Friday about 7 o'clock after he had gone to the consulate-general following a round of golf. On Saturday afternoon, he walked into a local police station with the simple words: "I am Limbach."

He was taken immediately to the consulate offices where he was questioned by a group of top police officers.

Later, the commissioner of police, General J. P. Gous, issued a statement saying: "The matter is now closed." General Gous that the matter future, the public should not be so quick to "jump to conclusions about kidnapping."

Meanwhile, H. W. Burrows, U.S. acting consul-general, backed by the American embassy, is sticking steadfastly to the statement he issued on Saturday that Col. Limbach had been kidnapped.

In Pretoria, an embassy official asked to comment on that statement made by Gneral Gous that the matter was closed said:

"As far as we at the embassy are concerned, the matter is still quite open. We have no evidence supporting the theory that he was not kidnapped."

Hooper added that American authorities were still in "active consultation" with the police over the incident.

. . . But Americans Still Insist That He was . . .

Since his reappearance, Col. Limbach has avoided any meetings with the press and has remained closeted at the consulate-general apart from one evening spent at home with his wife.

But Mrs. Megan Limbach, who drove her children to school in Wynberg Monday morning rather than let them travel by train, remains convinced that her husband was kidnapped.

BLINDFOLDED

According to her, his assailants blindfolded him and tied his wrists after intercepting him at the consulate on Friday evening. He managed to throw his keys into the offices. The finding of the keys started a city-wide search by police and consular officials.

Mrs. Limbach believed that his assailants then began to have second thoughts. She said they probably released him when they realized they were abducting a prominent member of the diplomatic corps and had set off a wide police search.

Mrs. Limbach, at this point, refused to give any further information to the press. Cape Town police were also tight-lipped about the affair.

But even American spokesmen concede that Col. Limbach's physical condition is excellent. Nobody at the embassy had noticed the marks on his eyes and wrists mentioned by Mrs. Limbach.

STUMBLED

Mrs. Hazel Dicker, catering manager of a bowling green clubhouse into which Limbach first stumbled exhausted before reporting at the police station, also failed to notice any marks on his wrists or face which would indicate he had been bound and gagged. Questioned Monday, she described him as looking "dull-eyed and exhausted."

"I didn't know who he was till later," she said. "I thought he might be drugged. But he didn't look as if he had been beaten up."

Theories that have been advanced about the motivation for the "kidnapping" range from a student prank to a serious attempt to discredit South Africa in world circles.

FIGHTER PILOT

Col. Limbach, who has been in Cape Town for about 2½ years of his three-year tour of diplomatic duty, has had a distinguished career as an American jet fighter pilot. He holds ten air medals as well as the medal of honor for extreme courage and valor.

When President Kennedy and the Russian premier, Nikita Khrushchev, were confronting each other over the missile issue in Cuba in 1962, he was flying fighter missions over the island.

He went to Vietnam later and flew more than 150 missions over South Vietnam and 37 missions over North Vietnam.

Guess Where Mao's Been?

By STANLEY KARNOW

HONG KONG (WP) — China experts here have finally figured out Mao Tse-tung's whereabouts during his recent long absence from public view. He was secretly ensconsed in the White House, advising President Nixon to send American troops into Cambodia.

The circumstantial evidence to support that intelligence is reflected in the fact that nobody has been displaying greater delight at the widening war in Indochina than the Chinese Communists.

Mao and his associates are not crazy. On the contrary, they are tough, shrewd and, despite their apparent adherence to rigid doctrines, extraordinarily flexible.

Most of all, they are patient enough to have played a cautious waiting game in the hope that Nixon would accommodate them by stumbling into Cambodia.

For the conflict now spreading throughout the Indochinese Peninsula serves their cause in several ways. And, barring the unlikely prospect of its spilling over into China itself, this welcome development is costing them next to nothing.

In terms of their own strategic ambitions, the Chinese have interrelated objectives in Southeast Asia.

First and foremost, they want to oust American military power, partly because they are concerned with their security and partly because a U.S. presence thwarts their other aims in the area.

Second, they want to curb the influence in the region of the Soviet Union, which they also see as a potential military threat as well as an ideological rival.

Third, they want a future Southeast Asia composed of frail states that pose no challenge to Chinese hegemony but, as in centuries past, pay tribute to the rule of the "Middle Kingdom" in Peking.

Observing the present Indochina crisis and its fallout, then, the Chinese believe that these three objectives are gradually moving closer to attainment.

The American involvement in Vietnam, they perceive with obvious pleasure, has bogged down the U.S. in a situation it cannot win and refuses to lose. Therefore, they calculate, any extension of the conflict will only drain U.S. resources further.

Besides stirring dissent in the U.S.—and thus fulfilling their dogma that the "masses" inevitably rise against their "fascist masters" — the Indochina mess also appears to the Chinese to be an opportunity to "isolate" America internationally.

By no coincidence, consequently, they have invited a French cabinet minister to visit China this summer for the first time since France recognized Peking in 1954. Moreover, they are improving their ties with Britain and Yugoslavia and progressing towards diplomatic relations with Canada and Italy.

In the meantime, just as Mao wished, the spectre of a bigger Indochina war is weakening the Soviet position in the area as the Russians waver between trying to promote the moderation they really prefer and backing Communist escalation in order to assert their revolutionary credentials.

One sign of Soviet confusion has been apparent in the Kremlin's delay in recognizing Prince Sihanouk's government in exile.

Meanwhile, with no indication from Washington that they can expect to gain anything from 25 years of struggle, the Vietnamese Communists are settling down to "protracted war."

Again, this suits Peking's long-range dreams, since it augurs an exhausted Vietnam that the Chinese are convinced they can eventually dominate.

In an unusually candid talk with an American some time ago, a Hanoi official stressed this point. "You think you are blocking China by fighting us," he said, "but in fact you are destroying a barrier to Chinese expansion in Southeast Asia if you destroy us."

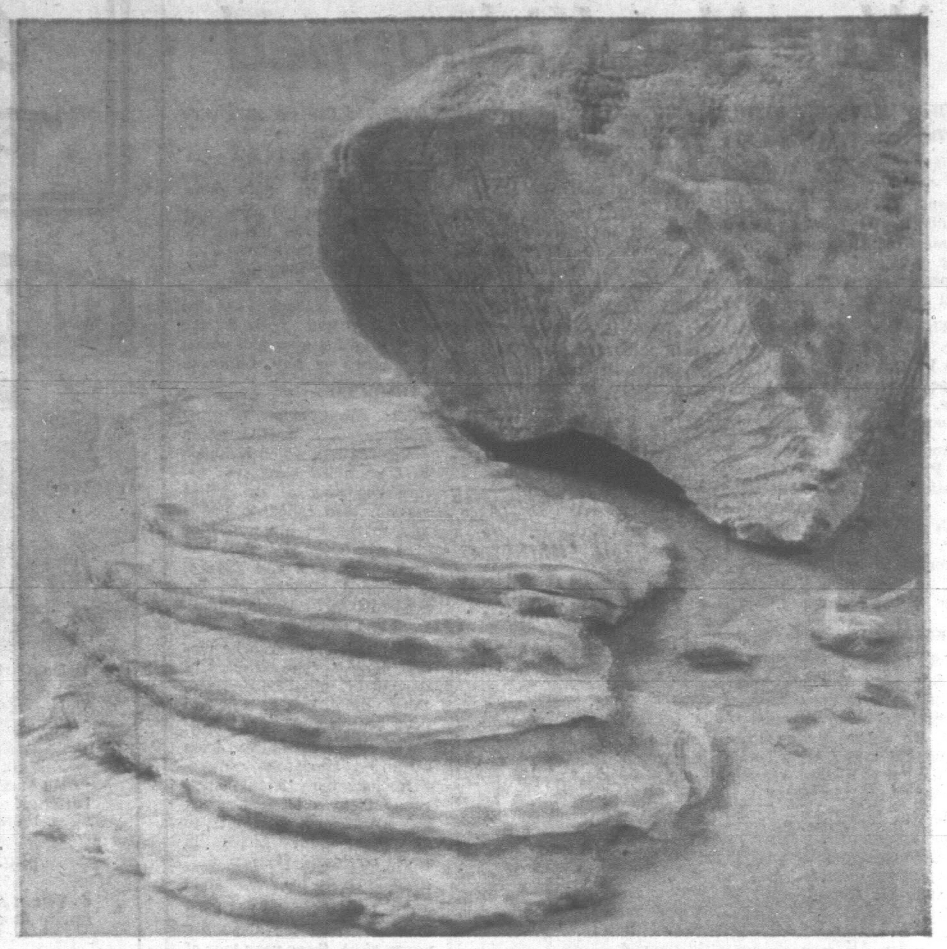

Mao himself emphasized a similar point when, a few years back, a Japanese visitor to Peking apologized to him for Japan's aggression against China in the 1930s.

"The Japanese invasion inspired the Chinese people to rise and fight," Mao reportedly told his visitor. "Our army grew by a million men, and our support grew to include 100 million people.

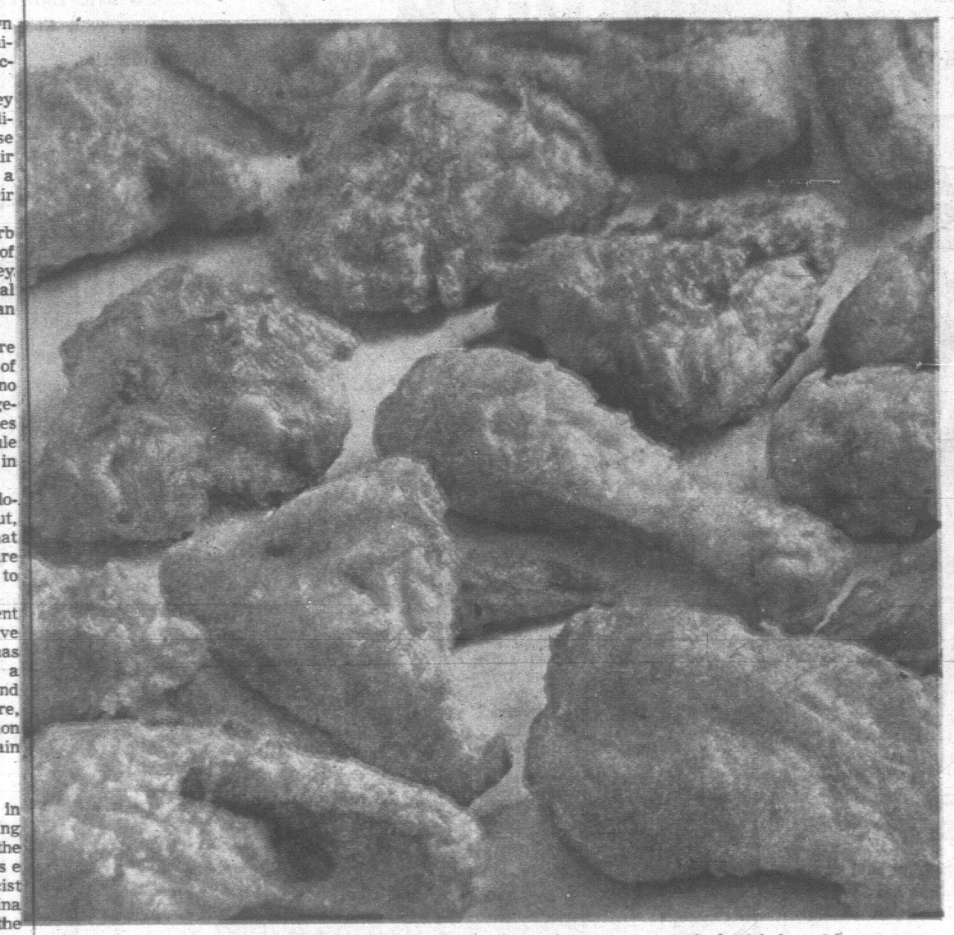

"So, instead of your apologizing to me, Perhaps I should thank you."

Rich Nations Must Control Birth Rates

By JEFFREY D. ALDERMAN and VICTOR L. SIMPSON

Population experts say such a family tree is dangerous and that the world population will double to 7,000,000,000 human beings by the year 2,000.

The experts, including many in government, are calling for a reassessment of traditional attitudes toward the institution of marriage, woman's role in society and family size.

Scientists say growing populations of developed countries may have more serious implications than those of underdeveloped countries because of the consume huge amounts of the world's resources.

Many governments, including the United States, are thinking about national population policies. Robert Finch, U.S. secretary of health, education and welfare, said American parents should limit themselves to two children.

Some scientists have raised the possibility that governments may be forced to use coercive methods to stem population growth.

EXPLAINS CHOICES

"Basically, there are only two kinds of solutions to the population problem," says Dr. Paul Ehrlich, Stanford University biologist and population control crusader.

"One is a 'birth rate solution,' in which we find ways to lower the birth rate. The other is a 'death rate solution,' in which ways to raise the death rate—war, famine and pestilence—find us."

For years the experts have been warning about the rising birth rate in Latin America, China and India, where population growth rates are the highest and millions die of starvation annually.

But now the experts are pointing at growing populations in developed countries.

With their voracious appetites for new cars, appliances, disposable bottles and even throw-away diapers, Americans who represent six per cent of the world's population are estimated to consume 35 per cent of the planet's annual production of raw materials. Not to mention the legacy of polluted cities and waterways.

"Rich people occupy more space, consume more of each natural resource, disturb the ecology more, and create more land, air water, chemical and radioactive pollution than poor people," says Jean Mayer, special consultant on food problems to President Nixon. "So it can be argued that. from many viewpoints, it is even more urgent to control the numbers of the rich than it is to control the numbers of the poor."

MEANS AVAILABLE

Governments who are starting to place higher priorities on the population problem have the tools to do the job. Available are an assortment of contraceptive devices including the condom, diaphragm, interuterine device, and, now in its ninth year of use, the pill.

Two other methods, abortion and sterilization, have found little acceptance among world governments. Though some have legalized abortion—England, Japan and Hungary among them—most generally prohibit it.

The U.S. government and private industry are working toward developing new contraceptive techniques including injections.

But Alvaro Garcia-Pena, vice-president of the Population Reference Bureau in Washington, says governments not only have to answer how to get the tools to the people but how to get the people to accept the tools.

Ghana has planned what experts say is the first true population control policy any nation has had.

Adopted in March, 1969, the policy noted that the country's population of some 8,500,000 probably would at least double by 1985.

IMPOSES PENALTIES

To discourage "the unrestricted growth of families," the government is the first one to impose penalties for large families. The government limits maternity leaves of government employees to three. Allowances for children of government workers are also limited to three as are travel expenses paid for children.

Ghana called for wider employment and education for women as well as a wider range of non-domestic roles for women.

Since the policy is only a little more than a year old, it is too early to measure its success.

Family planning was not introduced at the government level until as recently as 1952 when, according to the United Nations, India proclaimed an official family planning policy to control her population.

By mid-1969, the UN counted 27 developing countries with a family planning policy. Yugoslavia last year became the first developed country to adopt that aim.

Last July, President Nixon called population growth "one of the most serious challenges to human destiny in the last third of the century."

Individual countries have moved forward in the area, the UN says. France enacted laws in 1967 and 1969 to permit the sale of contraceptives and Canada amended its criminal Code last year to permit their sale and advertisement.

But the Population Reference Bureau notes that an average of 3.9 babies were born every second in 1969. That's 199,000 a day, 1,300,000 a week and 72,000,000 a year, while 40 years ago the rate was about 20,000,000 annually. By the year 1980, in the underdeveloped countries, there will be twice as many women in their prime childbearing years—20-30—as there were in 1965.

In Kenya, as in many countries, a man's success often is measured by the number of children he has. Daughters can bring large dowries and sons make good workers. The latest census showed Kenya's population has doubled in 21 years to 10,800,000.

"The pressures to reproduce are tremendous," says Dr. Carl Schultz, director of the U.S. department of health, education and welfare's Office of Population and Family Planning.

WANT GRANDCHILDREN

"Parents want to be grandparents. We have to make the alternatives sufficiently attractive to be acceptable."

Dr. Roger Revelle, director of the Harvard Centre for the Study of Population, says society ought not to consider marriage a necessity. Women, he says, should be given more opportunities for alternatives to careers as mothers.

For underdeveloped countries, where the birth rates are much higher than the U.S., Dr. Revelle suggests social legislation and improved health services to reduce infant mortality. He says that in many of these countries a couple will have six or seven children in hopes that two or three will survive.

Nationalism is also an obstacle to halting population growth. A UN report noted that several countries which had liberal laws on contraception and where fertility reached low levels in the mid-'60s changed their laws in recent years.

The Roman Catholic Church bans contraception of any kind but there are signs of a lessening of resistance among its clergy.

CAUSES STARVATION

It is clear that overpopulation is felt by underdeveloped countries, as exhibited in widespread starvation and malnutrition. But what about developed countries such as the U.S.?

Dr. Ehrlich says: "They (Americans) feel it in their lungs in big cities. They feel it in increased death rates from lung and heart disease and cancer, in increased crime rates, increased mental illness, detriorating schools, rising taxes, rising food costs and a general deterioration in the quality of their lives."

Dr. John B. Calhoun of the National Institute of Mental Health has documented in the laboratory the effects on crowding animals together. Such crowding produces, he says, measureable ills—ills that could develop in man with increased crowding.

Calhoun's studies show:

—Among males, homosexuality is common.

—Females lose their nest-building capacity and ability to care for their young.

—Members of both sexes withdraw from society, emerging from hiding when the others are asleep.

Those dealing with the population problem on a day-to-day basis are optimistic that man will somehow endure the population explosion. What they are concerned about is the quality of the world that man is creating through his unprecedented breeding habits.

Last Spike To Open Museum

DUNCAN—Opening ceremonies of the Cowichan Valley Forest Museum Saturday will consist of driving the last spike on the railway extension which has just been completed.

David Williams, president of the museum, said that "this will lengthen the run of the narrow guage railway to a distance of 1½ miles.

One of the unusual features of the new railroad extension is the diamond crossing, similar to that which existed for many years at the diamond crossing at Ladysmith.

The railroad extension was made possible by the acquisition in 1969 of additional property on the highway and to the south of the original site of the museum.

The spike-driving ceremony will take place at 3 p.m. Saturday and then the forest museum will be open daily from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Truck Accident Kills Telephones

LAKE COWICHAN — Lake Cowichan and area residents were without telephone service for over two hours Tuesday afternoon after a truck bumped and tore a cable in half approximately four miles east of here.

Jim Hawthornwaite, B.C. Tel's supervisor of customer service at Duncan, said the mishap occurred at approximately 3:45 and complete service to Youbou and Lake Cowichan districts was not restored until 8 p.m.

"Two radio trucks were stationed in Lake Cowichan for emergency calls while the lines were down," he said.

Ratepayers Support Pullout—Haywood

DUNCAN — Cowichan school board has been assured of ratepayer support since it announced its decision to pull out of Malaspina Regional College Thursday.

"I have checked with members of the board and they have had nothing but support from ratepayers in the district," said board chairman David Haywood.

He said if people do disapprove they should call trustees and advise them instead of telling just anyone who happened to be in the area.

Haywood was referring to statements made by Jack Whitlam of Nanaimo, former chairman of the college council, who said he was just visiting the Duncan area Tuesday and a number of residents and business people told him they did not like the board's action because they felt it was a disservice to parents and students.

NO QUESTION

Haywood said it is the responsibility of elected trustees to take action when a situation becomes critical.

"Ratepayers will have the opportunity to show their disapproval or support in December when members of the board are up for re-election. I know one issue does not determine an election. From what I have heard from ratepayers there is no question that they are behind the board."

Whitlam said Tuesday that the school board should discard its "dog in the manger" attitude and take a realistic look at "the great advantages" which the college has to offer.

Although he is no longer on the college council, Whitlam said "I am still on the college's citizens' committee and I am deeply concerned with Mr. Haywood's statements."

Whitlam said he objects strongly to Haywood's statements when he uses figures for comparison, such as comparing 1969 figures with 1970, giving the impression of a large increase in costs without explaining that 1969 figures were for four months of operation with the projected enrolment of 400 students.

"The 1970 figures are for a 12-month period with the projected enrolment in the last half of the year of nearly 1,000 students," Whitlam said. "To suggest that the Cowichan district should have a lower share in relation to students is unrealistic."

Hayward said the board has never indicated anything else but that the comparisons were for different periods of time. "As previously reported the figures are in complete agreement with what Whitlam said," stressed Haywood.

Haywood said a full year at the college is two semesters. "The college only operates eight months of the year for regular fulltime students."

When Haywood announced the withdrawal from the college he said Cowichan's share in the costs for 1969 was $45,613.

"In december there were exactly 58 Cowichan district students attending the college," he said. "The districts expense per student for one semester was $786. The expense for 1970 for a full year, based on an average of 60 students, would be $2,650 per student. We pay the same amount whether there are 10 or 100 pupils from out of the district attending."

JUST CONJECTURE

Haywood said in 1969 Cowichan district paid 28.24 per cent of the college's district operational costs and had less than 10 per cent attendance.

He said that Whitlam's figure of 1,000 students attending the college is just a conjecture.

Whitlam had said that a large student influx at Malaspina College from the Cowichan area was expected later this year.

Federalists Plentiful In New Quebec Cabinet

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa, who won a landslide victory for his Quebec Liberal party on a platform of administrative efficiency, federalism and sound economic policies, Tuesday introduced a cabinet that relies heavily on businessmen, administrators and federalists.

The 36-year-old economist-premier reserved the finance portfolio for himself, and placed the sensitive intergovernmental affairs portfolio in the hands of Ferard D. Levesque, a staunch federalist who also is minister of industry and commerce.

Mr. Bourassa, previously elected in the 1966 general election but without cabinet experience himself, is the youngest premier the province has known. His cabinet, with an average age of 41.4 years, has the same distinction.

Only four of the 22 ministers have previously served in a cabinet.

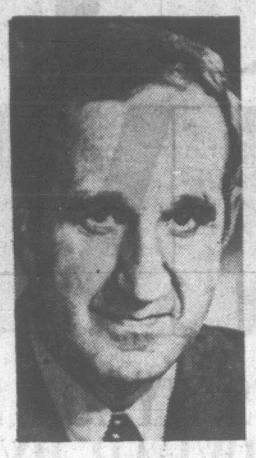

Mr. Bourassa dismissed suggestions this is a handicap, telling a news conference that he sought administrative ability and not parliamentary experience in choosing his ministers.

TO SHUFFLE SOON

The premier also said he plans to shuffle his cabinet soon, likely in the fall, to lighten the load of five ministers who carry two portfolios.

The cabinet includes eight lawyers, two economists, two accountants, an actuary, an engineer and three doctors, one a psychiatrist. Four others, without specific professional training, have wide administrative experience.

Mr. Bourassa named Jean-Noel Lavoie, 42-year-old notary

—Kevin Drummond, 35, Montreal businessman, lands and forests;

—Gerald Harvey, 42, accountant;

—Claude Simard, 31, Mr. Bourassa's brother-in-law, assigned to the industry department; with 10 years parliamentary experience, as Speaker of the new Quebec national assembly.

—Robert Quenneville, 48, a doctor from Joliette.

In keeping with his electoral promise to bargain hard with Ottawa while maintaining a federalist approach to Canada, he suggested a new constitution is needed. Four years should be enough to negotiate it, he said.

Mr. Bourassa chose his cabinet from among the 72 Liberals elected April 29. There are 108 seats in the national assembly.

The premier passed over former provincial secretary Bona Arsenault, 67, who has won five federal and four provincial elections.

FOUR WITH EXPERIENCE

Ministers who served in the Liberal administration of Jean Lesage between 1962 and 1966 are:

—Former municipal affairs minister Pierre Laporte, 49, now minister of labor, manpower and immigration;

—Former roads minister Bernard Pinard, 47, again assigned to the roads portfolio;

—Former industry minister Levesque, 44, who was given the industry portfolio as well as intergovernmental affairs;

—Former transport minister Levesque, 44, who was given the industry portfolio as well as intergovernmental affairs;

Icebreaker's Crewman Dies

OTTAWA (CP) — Vincent Jones, 54, of Halifax, assistant purser aboard the icebreaker Louis St. Laurent, died May 9 while being flown to the hospital at Frobisher Bay after being stricken by an unknown illness, the transport department said today.

The ship's purser, Arthur M. Goodyear, 51, of Dartmouth, N.S., is recovering in Frobisher Bay hospital.

Mr. Jones was first taken from the ship to Resolute hospital before it was decided to fly him to Frobisher.

An autopsy has been ordered. It is expected to be performed in Ottawa. The body will be taken to Halifax for burial.

Red Cross Head Re-Elected

J. R. M. Wilson of Toronto was returned as chairman of the national executive committee.

Everyone Agrees U.S. in Crisis

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The most terrifying aspect of Senator William Fullbright's statement that the United States today is facing the gravest constitutional crisis since the Civil War is the absence of contradiction.

Certainly there is no lack of evidence that the U.S. is a country divided—what remains to be assessed is the depth and breadth of the division.

Although the student youth, planning a protest march on Washington Saturday, and the Republican administration of Richard Nixon are the obvious major combatants, it is more than a struggle between youth and maturity, iconoclast and the establishment.

Even within the cabinet there is dissent, as indicated by Interior Secretary Walter Hickel's rather sensational "heed youth" letter to Nixon as he plots strategy for dealing with the national protest against his conduct of the war in Indochina.

Perhaps even more significant throughout many of the country's universities is the recent conversion of a growing body of faculty to the causes of their students.

SAID PROTESTORS 'BUMS'

Within the administration, Toby Moffett, 25, has angrily resigned as director of the Office of Students and Youth, blaming "irresponsible statements" by his boss. The president had termed some student protestors "campus bums."

The irony of the present state of massive dissent, opposed by the strident voice of Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew, is that Nixon came to power pledging to "bring us together" and urging Americans to lower their voices.

In the 16 months of his administration, he has staked his presidency on the vast grey area between right and left, between the extremes of liberalism and conservatism—on the constituency that has become known as Middle America, the "silent majority."

UNITY IN URGENCY

But the increasing campus violence—including a student body count of four at Kent State University in the very heart of Middle America—has cast a shadow on his calculations and opened to skepticism the allegation that unrest is the work of a mad minority alone.

No one doubts that full-time radicals who want a cause, not a solution, are at work. But in the eyes of many observers the recent unity of many disparate elements on campus and elsewhere would not be possible without a common sense of urgency.

Perhaps as much as expansion of the war into Cambodia and the tragedy on the Kent campus, the thing that has aroused moderate Americans is the uncharacteristic aura of confusion and doubt within the decision-making strata of the Nixon administration.

The president himself did an about face on the Cambodian issue only days after assuring the country in a television address that the end of the Vietnam war was in sight. It was also only days after State Secretary William Rogers had told congressmen that if the U.S. moved troops into Cambodia "our whole Vietnamization program is defeated."

"One hopes and one prays," says a Washington Post editorial, "that the administration has not misjudged the situation in Southeast Asia as disastrously as it has misjudged the situation at home—especially regarding the youth."

SPOKE FRANKLY

Of all comments, none is more surprising than the frank language in Hickel's letter—which he did not intend to become public—warning Nixon that "youth in its protest must be heard."

The warning seemed to run counter to the mood of the administration as Agnew kept up a drumfire of criticism aimed squarely at youth, and also at just about anybody who does not agree with administration policy. But Nixon promised Thursday, in a meeting with university heads, that he would halt such hostile comments from within his administration.

However, it cannot be dismissed that, aside from the liberal press and the students, Agnew has received high public praise from the "silent majority" for his stands.

Although the war and the reaction to it hold the nation preoccupied, this is but one of many dividing influences at work in American society today.

MANY ISSUES

The environment, and the role of big business in polluting it, has the young and many politicians on the war path; the Negro, Indian and Mexican-American are demanding a voice in government and policy-making role in their lives.

So many among the more than 200,000,000 Americans apparently have yet to choose sides that the balance is impossible to detect.

The weekend's demonstration may provide the best indicator yet on how broadly based is the general dissent.

Nixon's plight, as thousands of Americans go on the march for one cause or another as never before in the country's history, has already moved one television commentator to recall the appropriate words of India's late Mohandas Gandhi:

"There go my people. I must hurry and catch up with them, for I am their leader."

Withdrawals Protest War

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

War protesters in Palo Alto, Calif., and Madison, Wis., have cashed $31,000 in U.S. savings bonds to express their displeasure with developments in Southeast Asia.

In Palo Alto several dozen students, businessmen and housewives cashed more than $12,000 worth of savings bonds Monday.

In Madison, a group of about 18 persons led by Mrs. Milton Leidner cashed $19,000 worth of bonds.

"We decided we wanted to voice our objection to the war in a sane and sensible manner," said Mrs. Leidner.

The students in Amherst advised the three banks in advance of their plan to take their money out today.

"We figure for every dollar withdrawn about $5 will be removed from war resources," said Dr. Gerald Gruman, associate professor of history at the University of Massachusetts.

Crisis Keeps Risky Homes

By DON VIPOND

The Greater Victorian Metropolitan Board of Health debated its paradoxical position on private hospitals again Tuesday.

On the one hand, the board's staff has found some hospitals so inadequate they should be closed down. On the other, the shortage of beds for chronic patients, elderly for the most part, is so severe the board has urged the provincial government to extend some private hospitals' interim operating permits.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, the senior medical health officer, repeated warnings he made six months ago — some local private hospitals are "quite dangerous" and should be shut down as soon as there is somewhere else for their patients.

He did not specify which of the 17 private hospitals in the area or how many should be closed. But he did say his staff's annual inspections showed one of them should have been shut down six years ago.

Another source said inspections showed eight are substandard.

Pressed by Victoria Ald. Tom Christie to specify what is wrong with the inadequate hospitals, Whitbread said they are dangerous from a sanitation, accident and care-of-patient point of view.

"They are not able to give the kind of care these patients should get."

Many of the private hospitals were old homes converted at a time when there were no standards for private hospitals, said Elwood Gropp, the board's director of sanitation services.

Now they don't meet standards established by the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

Dr. Donald Shorting, who represents the Greater Victoria school board, said he sees a further backup of chronic care patients into acute care hospitals because of the shortage of accommodation for the long-term patients.

There are people in the acute hospitals fit for discharge six months ago but still there because there is nowhere else to put them, he said.

Shorting said the health board must continue to exert pressure towards breaking the "stall" that is delaying construction of more hospital beds.

The board asked Whitbread to conduct a survey showing the number of patients in sub-standard private hospitals, how many chronic care patients are occupying the more expensive acute care beds, how many people are waiting admittance to private hospitals and the state of boarding home accommodation which provides a degree of nursing care.

Deluge Gun Readied in Harbor Blaze Battle

Four Firemen Hurt In Dockside Blaze

Four city firemen were injured when flames destroyed a warehouse alongside Victoria's vulnerable Inner Harbor Tuesday evening.

Firemen turned out again early today to battle a house fire on Jackson Street which caused about $10,000 damage and was preceeded by a mystery explosion.

Fire Chief Eric Simmons said today both fires are still under investigation and declined comment on the possibility of arson. Several recent weekend fires have been blamed on arsonists.

WAREHOUSE

The harbor fire destroyed an almost empty building on Songhees Road alongside a grocery store called The Warehouse. Both are owned by businessman Henry Eng who said today he had not estimated the loss.

The only material in the burned-out building was some waxed cardboard cartons. Eng said the warehouse had not been used for several years. He had planned to convert it to a restaurant this year and wasn't sure if it was insured.

Three pumper and two aerial trucks with a crew of 20 men turned out for the alarm, reported by an employee of The Warehouse shortly after 6 p.m.

30 FEET

Flames jumped 30 feet above the building at the height of the fire and dense brown smoke swept east across the Inner Harbor as far as Oak Bay. It took about three hours to douse.

The injured:

Acting Capt. Edward Ball, who suffered a spike wound in the foot, returned to the fire after treatment.

Lt. Roy Boothroyd, hit on the back by a falling metal plate, he was X-rayed at hospital and sent home.

Fireman Ross Cameron, who suffered a crushed hand when it got jammed between a hose and a wall, was treated and released.

Fireman Don Irish, whose hand was burned by scalding water running off the burning building, was treated and released.

Striking towboat officers picketing nearby Island Tug and Barge were quick to keep a promise of help in an emergency. They manned the company's fireboat and hosed vehicles parked near the burning building.

EVACUATION

No one was injured in the fire at 3112 Jackson which broke out about 2:30 a.m. but tenant Mrs. Emily McMaster, her daughter, Koma, 2, and three visitors were forced to evacuate the house.

Neighbors reported an explosion when the fire started. When firemen arrived the empty carport and roof of the house were ablaze. Most of the damage was caused by smoke.

Expropriation Urged For Belleville Impasse

By JIM HUME

Ald. Ove Witt wants Victoria city council to use its powers of expropriation and go ahead and build the Belleville Street extension between Blanshard and Vancouver.

Plans for the road link, designed to siphon heavy James Bay traffic off Government and Douglas during rush hours, have been sidelined for several months because city, hospital and provincial government officials have been unable to reach agreement.

NO EXTENSION

Consulting architects have stated that they can design a hospital around the road link without exorbitant costs. And they have pointed out that a road must exist in the middle of the site either as the Belleville extension or as a service road.

CITY REPLY

To date, Loffmark has remained adamant: Plans for a new hospital will remain shelved until the city agrees to re-route highway plans around the proposed hospital site.

The city's reply is that such a rerouting would cost $2 million and create traffic problems rather than solve them.

Witt says the minister could be forced into decisive action one way or the other if the city took a strong line on expropriation.

"The city has the power to take that portion of property on what is now the site of a private school," Witt said this morning. "I think we should expropriate that property right now, push the road through and let hospital officials and the minister adapt themselves to the facts of life."

NO CONTROL

Loffmark has the power to prevent expropriation proceedings on the hospital side of the proposed extension, but has no control over the St. Ann's Academy property.

"The Sisters of St. Ann must have had the Belleville Street extension in mind when they granted the city an easement to install underground services," Witt said. "All the experts tell us the extension is feasible and would create no major problems.

"I say let's get on with the job."

City manager Dennis Young said the city is well aware of its powers of expropriation but was always reluctant to use that power.

"It has always been our policy to sit down and try to negotiate agreement rather than just move in," Young said.

Young said any decision on expropriation would have to be made by city council.

"In the past moves to expropriate property have always been viewed with extreme concern," Young said. "It's an action council takes rarely and with great reluctance."

Freeway to Nowhere May Go Somewhere

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Victoria's freeway to nowhere may some day go somewhere.

That day, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis told a public meeting Tuesday night, will be decided by the provincial government.

He had been asked, at the meeting organized by Saanich Chamber of Commerce at Doncaster Elementary School, when some action will be taken to connect Blanshard Street in Victoria with Douglas Street.

NOT THE CASE

The city-built freeway now ends at the Saanich-Victoria boundary behind Mayfair shopping centre.

Curtis said some people think it was Saanich which failed to connect the last part with Douglas Street but this was not the case.

In a municipal district, such as Saanich, the provincial government is responsible for constructing certain highways. This was not the case for cities, such as Victoria.

PURELY GUESS

The provincial government had "not seen fit" so far to pay for the construction of a link. But while Saanich was "pretty upset about it," the decision was taken at a high level some time ago.

The questioner then asked Curtis when the provincial government will take action.

"Any answer I would give would be purely a guess," he replied.

But he believed — and he emphasized it was only a belief — that the province recognized this problem and that it could not continue.

Fifty persons attended the meeting which lasted just over two hours. Most of the questions had been answered publicly at various times in the past.

NO DECISION

They were told no decision has been made, and that a committee is to be established shortly — including residents — to go into this. The 1967 recreation referendum provided $260,000 for a "community centre" at the property but did not spell out what it would contain.

School Board Appoints ... 10 Principals in Area

Greater Victoria school board today announced appointment of 10 principals, including two newcomers, to district schools.

David Voth, principal of Gordon Head Junior for the past year, will become principal of Oak Bay Senior, succeeding John Wallace who retired this spring because of ill health.

FROM UVIC

Claude Campbell, now superintendent of the North Island and Ocean Falls districts, will come in as principal of Cedar Hill Junior (the present Gordon Head Junior to be relocated next fall in the Mount Douglas building). Campbell is a former Uvic education faculty member.

Norman Hoadley, currently principal of an elementary-secondary school in Chetwynd, will become principal of Highrock Junior (the present Esquimalt junior).

Elementary appointments:

Bank Street principal D. G. Henderson will transfer to Hillcrest Elementary.

Hillcrest incumbent Wilfred Durrant transfers to Craigflower.

OFFICES CLOSE FOR HOLIDAY

The provincial government offices will be closed for observance of the Queen's birthday and the Victoria Day holiday, Monday.

The Provincial Museum will be open to the public during the holiday weekend as follows: Saturday from 10:00 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.; Sunday from 1:00 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Monday from 10:00 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.

COMMUNITY COUNCIL ISSUES DIRECTORY

The Community Council of Greater Victoria has issued a revised community services directory containing a complete list of public and private health and welfare, youth and recreation agencies in the capital region.

Information includes address, phone number, office hours, title of chief executive, area served, source of funds and a summary of services provided.

"Every effort has been made to ensure that the directory is as comprehensive and as accurate as possible," said Community Council director Garth Homer.

Copies may be ordered from the Community Council, No. 307, 895 Fort, for $1.50 each.

Drug Centre Plan Same as Mayor's

The recently-opened Victoria Drug Dependency Centre has announced plans for a youth drop-in centre, similar in concept to the one proposed Monday by Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock.

Haddock said Monday he would like to see such a centre included as an integral part of any civic complex or convention centre built in the city. He said he wanted the young people of Victoria to submit their ideas as to what a youth drop-in centre should include.

The executive director of the drug centre, Bill Ogston said today his organization is in complete agreement with the mayor's concept and said that their youth centre would operate independently of the drug centre itself.

He said the drop-in centre would be located in space above the drug centre's offices at 1290 Gladstone with an area of 5,000 square feet. The estimated cost of redecorating the second storey and setting up the youth centre would be about $8,500, he said.

"What we need now is young people to come down and plan, with us, how this thing can be fully utilized. The program of the youth centre would be decided upon by a council of young people."

Some of the things Ogston would like to see include dances with local rock bands, coffee house activities, guitar lessons and a place where the kids can just sit around and talk.

"The functions, though, would be decided upon by the kids themselves, who would also be responsible for policing the place and running the canteen facilities."

Ogston said he has spoken to City Hall officials about the idea and said they were enthusiastic.

Bay Pavilion To Re-Open

Royal Jubilee Hospital plans on transferring the first patients into the renovated Bay Pavilion next Tuesday, a spokesman said today.

The pavilion is the hospitals's former psychiatric wing but has been empty since the Eric Martin Institute of psychiatry opened early this year.

The pavilion will now be used in part to house convalescing patients who no longer need the more expensive services surrounding acute care beds. The change will increase the hospital's capacity by 22 beds.

All Boats May Run Under Sun

Powerboats of any capacity may use Elk, Beaver and Prospect lakes in Saanich at any time between sunrise and sunset, Saanich Ald. William Noel said today.

The restriction, added Noel who is chairman of parks and outdoor recreation committee, is that in designated areas — mainly shoreline and swimming parts — all power boats must not exceed five miles an hour.

Noel said he made a mistake Monday when he said boats with engines under 10 horsepower may use the lakes between sunrise and 10 a.m. and over 10 horsepower between 10 a.m. and sunset.

Arthur Mayse...

IF AGE IS RELATIVE, the gentle Oblate Father who lay dying in a Bulkley Valley hospital was a young man still. He had merely outlived his body, a machine grown old which had failed him all of a piece.

He had spent much of his life among Indians, and fought hard to better their condition. Life had spared him no time for aging, and he made it plain that he regarded death as no more than an interruption of his work.

A man with his quality of spirit isn't easily forgotten. I remembered him years later, when a chronologically young man who was his extreme opposite fell to talking about his chief concern in life.

His job didn't interest him. He did what he was told, and took no chances that could have gained him promotion but might also have exposed him to blame. But he entertained a dream, and if a conversation lasted long enough, he would get around to it. His sights were set on a distant target: the day when he would retire from the company on pension.

When I met this eager candidate for retirement, he was in his early twenties. A few years later, on another job in a different city, I ran into a friend who had worked in that office.

We had a good deal of catching up to do. Sure, Al the dogman still kept beagles, and had surrounded himself with quite a little pack. Bert had gone to Ottawa, and so on through the list.

Finally I asked about Gene, who lived for his pension. Fate, or perhaps the jealous gods had come between him and his plan. He had died in a traffic crackup a couple of years earlier.

I suppose a moral lurks there, for anyone diligent enough to search it out. But I've never bothered to do so, and will only suggest that youth and age are delusive terms at best.

We tend to bracket ourselves into one category or the other, with a third state called middle age sandwiched between.

This arbitrary labelling provides convenient handles for the stages of man. I suppose we need them; but they make for rigidity and brittleness where none should exist.

I have never been able to define those terms satisfactorily, and it amuses me to note that the angry young American who attempted a definition of sorts merely succeeded in manufacturing a future awkwardness for himself.

"You can't trust anyone over 30," he declared from a stance in his twenties.

He is now 30, and I doubt that he is more or less trustworthy than he was when he framed that catchy epigram.

Trustworthiness, like wisdom or the lack of it, is confined to no one human category. Also, we live in an age that is tough on the easy definition and the sweeping generality.

A man is free as ever to state his beliefs. But if he declares them as absolutes, he can expect to be challenged on them.

This can be dreadfully hard on those who have fallen victim to the fossilization that the Oblate Father escaped, but to which the yearner after retirement and pension fell victim.

It is this lack of viability in United States' President Richard Nixon that defeats him even where his intent is good.

He came to the presidency a man set in a mould. His tragedy is rooted in his inability to comprehend what so many of his countrymen are trying to bring home to him.

There is nothing in the reports of his predawn visit among protesters gathered at Lincoln memorial to indicate that he brought with him a will to understand the deeply moral urgency which had fetched them there. What sticks in my mind is that when he learned some were from California, he made small-talk about surfing.

. . . . As if they were children, and himself a determinedly indulgent grandfather!

An accumulation of years doesn't necessarily bring wisdom. This is another of the comfortable platitudes that will no longer bear leaning upon. What the years should bring is a willingness to re-examine even long-held convictions.

I have never felt that inward growth is the prerogative of any age group. The men and women I most admire are still growing, still appraising, still capable of accepting change and weighing the new on merit rather than against prejudice.

What marks them out is a quality easier to feel than to define. Perhaps a kind of agelessness.

Prairies Can Expect Ottawa Help In Solving Major Regional Problems

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — The Prairies have a right to expect Ottawa to make a major contribution to solving regional problems, Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand said Tuesday.

The federal cabinet minister was speaking at a banquet during the One Prairie Province conference sponsored by the Lethbridge Herald and the University of Lethbridge.

He declined comment on the one-province proposal, but said a nation will not survive unless all its parts can see their problems and their solutions in a national context.

And he called on Prairie dwellers to reject parochialism in favor of regional co-operation and nationalism.

His address ended the third day of the four-day conference, which is discussing the possibility of merging Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta.

Earlier, three economists expressed qualified support of the merger while one, Ralph Hedlin of Toronto, said other measures were preferable.

CONSIDER OTHER WAYS

He said if Western Canada does not like Ottawa's economic policies it should prepare some alternatives, perhaps through a beefed-up Prairie economic council and through a new "major Prairie policy foundation."

Mr. Hedlin also suggested the Senate should be replaced with an elected body which would act as a voice for regions and could be restricted to solely economic matters.

But T. K. Shoyama, assistant federal deputy minister of finance, said the proposed merger could provide positive economic gains for the area and at a national level.

"Once consolidated, the overall provincial finance system would be of major proportions by Canadian standards and provide a basis for stimulus to economic advance."

Dr. Stephen Peitchinis, a University of Calgary economist, said the government of one large Prairie province probably could influence the federal government's external trade policy much more than the existing three provinces can.

Eric Hanson, a University of Alberta economics professor, said union would provide a much-needed opportunity to revamp local government structures.

"And a united Prairie province could give the Prairie region a more effective voice in the national affairs than now is the case."

Mr. Marchand said the legal form is not so important.

"I do urge you in the policies you support to be Prairie regionalists and Canadian nationalists."

Poor Quality of Quebec French May Decide the Language's Fate

MONTREAL (CP) — The poor quality of French spoken in Quebec may be the real threat to the language's survival in Canada, a member of the Gendron commission inquiring into the status of French in the province said Tuesday.

Mrs. Madeleine Royon-Ferland made her statement in a debate with a French-speaking youth who had just submitted an error-filled brief.

"I can see by your brief that your French is weak, your vocabulary and your grammar both poor," Mrs. Royon-Ferland told Gaetan Couturier, a 19-year-old junior college student.

"And yet you seem content with your language."

"It's my language," Mr. Couturier replied. "It's the way I express myself. Maybe it could be better."

In his brief the student called for the establishment of French as the only official language in Quebec and demanded an end to what he called the privileged position of the English-speaking minority.

DEFENDS GRAMMAR

In defending his grammar, he told the commission his working class background had taught him the "joual of the people of Quebec", not the precise international French of the educated classes. (Joual is a common expression for bad French.)

"That's no excuse," Mrs. Royon-Ferland snapped back. "You've had everything you need to develop your language, you have schools and libraries, everything.

"If that is the kind of unilingualism you want, how can you expect French to survive in Quebec?"

Mr. Couturier protested that "without a unilingual policy we will be assimilated by the English."

Mrs. Royon-Ferland replied that "if you can't speak French properly it won't be difficult to assimilate you. If we speak French like you the language will certainly die."

When Mr. Couturier suggested that the commission is failing to communicate with "the mass of the Quebec population," Chairman Jean Denis Gendron said:

"What is the population? It's just the people, some educated some not, and we try to communicate with them all and now we're trying to communicate with you."

BLAMES SCHOOLS

Commissioner Aime Gagne then said: "What we want to know is why your French is poor."

"The vast majority of Quebec students speak joual," Mr. Boulanger said, "but most of them want to improve."

Another brief warned that a unilingual Quebec would cut off the province from the vast flow of technical data which pours into the province every day from the U.S. and the rest of Canada.

Wives to Join Old Sweat Meet

Wives of the "Old Sweats" of the 15th Brigade (C.F.A.) Association will attend the 54th reunion being held on Saturday, May 16, in the Queen Victoria Inn. It will be the first time women have been invited to a function of this nature. It will take the form of a luncheon and start at noon.

"We have decided to change from a dinner to a luncheon owing to the advanced age of our members," said Archie H. Wills, president of the association. "None of us are under 70 and some are over 80 and heading for 90. In our younger days these parties went on until the early hours of the morning but night driving has begun to bother us."

RUM PARADE

When "Fall In" for the rum parade is sounded at noon it is expected that at least 40 of the survivors of this artillery unit will be present. Time is rapidly thinning their ranks.

It was a bright Sunday, May 28, 1916, when 500 artillerymen marched from Fort Macaulay to board the transport Princess Charlotte on their great adventure. This was the largest group of gunners to leave Victoria during the First World War.

They had trained in the forts guarding Victoria, Rodd Hill, Duntze Head, Macaulay and Belmont, and composed the 62nd Battery and the 15th Brigade Ammunition Column.

They proceeded to Petawawa, the artillery firing range in Ontario, where they joined the other batteries which formed the 15th, the 59th of Winnipeg, the 60th of Regina and the 61st of Lethbridge.

In England the artillery was reorganized from four-gun to six-gun batteries and the 58th Battery from New Brunswick and the 51st from Ottawa, were incorporated into the major unit, which proceeded to France and engaged in considerable action.

READ HONOR ROLL

Wills will preside at the luncheon, where grace will be said by his brother, Rev. Percy Wills, who will also read the honor roll of fallen comrades.

The toast to "The Brigade" will be proposed by Judge J. B. Clearihue and the response given by Dr. William Newton. Dr. Ralph Smethurst, of Walla Walla, Wash., will propose the toast to the ladies" and Mrs. Henry Jarvis will reply.

The chorus of the brigade's theme song "O Petawawa" will be heard often during the luncheon but the saucy verses have gone into the archives.

Ralph D. Cruickshank, secretary of the association, has attended to the details and says there will be members here from Edmonton, Kelowna, Seattle, California and Walla Walla. One member who lives in Montreal had intended flying from Florida for the reunion, but, business is detaining him. He sent a cheque to take care of the rum issue and other trimmings.

Anyone wishing further information may phone Cruickshank at 382-1862.

CLANS MEET FOR HIGHLAND GAMES

The 33rd annual gathering of the clans will take place Sunday at Royal Athletic Park as the Victoria Highland Games get under way.

This year's Games will be officially opened at 1:30 p.m. by the newly crowned Miss Victoria.

During the afternoon, drill teams, bands, a gymnastic display of the Y.M.C.A. and dancing will be featured.

Flings, swords, reels, hornpipes and jigs will be performed by finalists in the Western North American highland dancing championships at 2:30 p.m.

A pipe band competition, massed band display and presentation of awards will climax the day.

Master of ceremonies will be John Dunbar.

Spanish Defence Men Here May 26

Thirty-seven members of the Spanish Defence College, including members of Spain's foreign ministry, will be in Victoria May 26 and 27 as part of a tour of Canadian armed forces bases.

The group arrives in Canada Tuesday, spending two days in Ottawa, where they will meet Defence Minister Leo Cadieux.

The college members will visit military bases at North Bay and Toronto May 21 to 23, Cold Lake, Alta., and Edmonton May 24 and 25; and Valcartier, P.Q., May 28 and 29.

They will sightsee in Quebec City May 31, returning to Madrid via Montreal that evening.

The Spanish defence college is the senior war college in Spain and its students are of the rank of general or colonel as well as senior civilian specialists in defence.

Liquor Inquiry Report Sales Average to Date

About 800 copies of the British Columbia Liquor Inquiry Commission report have been sold in the 1½ months since the 165-page volume went on sale.

Sales are about "average" for the report, a spokesman for the provincial Queen's Printer office said.

The grey, soft-covered document calls for sweeping reform of provincial liquor laws. It is still officially under study but Premier Bennett said last month he thought the government had "gone far enough" with reforms for the time being.

Lowering of the drinking age to 19, one of the commission's 70 recommendations; is the only liquor law change implemented to date.

The report was handed to the provincial government in March about one year after the commission's first public meeting. Members were Judge C. W. Morrow, Archbishop M. M. Johnson and labor leader Ed Lawson.

Help for the Banks Swells

"The phone never stopped ringing," said Mrs. Baarda, organizer of the drive to help the Banks.

"We received clothes, chairs and a table, a stove, a chesterfield and a bed and mattress."

Mrs. Baarda said most important items now are bedding, kitchen utensils and money. She said the drive will continue until "we get what we need."

Further donations may be sent to Vic West Elementary, or Mrs. Baarda's home at 818 Russell.

Sweet Ride Over for Star Of Surf-Song Movie Epics

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Whatever happened to Frankie Avalon?

Remember the man from Beach Party and half a dozen other surf 'n' song epics which swept North American movie houses in the early 1960s?

The surf 'n' song wave is over, but Avalon, who was riding high on it, is back, with his first big hit—Venus.

Avalon has been performing in the Metropole Supper Club, a Windsor night spot which has seen better days, but he is certain his career, which has been somewhat dragging in the last years, has got going again.

Venus was a success. He has a new record out—C'mon Back To Me Baby—and a new movie, Horror House, which has been breaking records in Los Angeles. He also has plans to produce two movies.

He isn't the least bit concerned about what the Metropole is or isn't or, for that matter, about the sometimes sparse audiences.

STILL LEARNING

"It's a matter of getting out to see faces and not just the camera," he said in a recent interview. "I'm a veteran but I'm still learning. I've been in this business for nearly 15 years—a lot of years and a lot of work.

"You're always looking for a hit record or a hit picture, but now I'm looking for something else—I'm looking for something where people will stop and say: 'Hey, he's good.'"

Discussing his beach and surf career, he says: "I've never had the greatest voice in the world, but the kids could identify with me. I was the little guy who wore sweaters and was never above the kids. The songs I sang were the songs the kids were singing."

However, he says, all that has changed. "We weren't in the same situation then as we are now."

As for the '70s, Avalon doesn't know. "I live from month to month and year to year. I've made money and could live comfortably if I retired tomorrow."

More Beer Drunk

LONDON (AP) — Britons are drinking more beer than ever since the government raised the price by twopence a pint last year, the National Federation of Licensed Victuallers reported. Consumption had risen by well over 1,000,000 pints a day in the first two months after the price was raised to two shillings (26 cents) a pint.

LANSBURY . . .
. . . 'just an apprentice'

Broadway Changed Her Image . . . Now She's a Disney Witch

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — For 20 years Angela Lansbury played a host of secondary roles in Hollywood films, including so many floozies that she almost became known as the queen of tarts.

Broadway changed all that. After a six-year absence, she is back on the Hollywood stages for a Disney role that could do for her what Mary Poppins did for Julie Andrews.

She's starring in Bedknobs and Broomsticks for the same Mary Poppins team producer Bill Walsh, director Robert Stevenson, writers Walsh and Don DaGradi, and the songwriting Sherman Brothers.

"I play a witch," Miss Lansbury reported between scenes with David Tomlinson, another Poppins alumnus. "Not a witchy witch. Sort of an apprentice witch. She studies up on witchcraft, not knowing whether she can exercise her powers."

Bedknobs, she admitted, is unlike any other of the 30 movies she has made. She is astounded by the Disney brand of witchcraft.

"So much of the photography is trick stuff," she said. "Like flying around on wires, or playing against an eerie yellow screen—the animation characters are put in later. One scene has me watching a football game in which David Tomlinson is the only human player; all others are cartoon figures. I sit in the grandstand conversing with a tiger."

SINGS FIVE TUNES

She has five musical numbers in the film. One of them is called Substitutiary Locomotion. "I sing it to get inanimate objects to move," said Miss Lansbury. "The idea is that we should send guns and planes off to fight the wars alone, and let the soldiers stay home. Not a bad idea."

Angela Lansbury has been playing character roles since her first film, Gaslight, which won her an Academy nomination for supporting actress in 1944. She has had two other nominations, The Picture of Dorian Gray and in 1945 and The Manchurian Candidate in 1963, but Hollywood never could see her as much more than a highly serviceable character actress.

Then came Mame.

She took Broadway by storm May 24, 1966, when the musicalized Auntie Mame opened at the Winter Garden. The Tony for best musical performance was hers.

After a lengthy run, she followed with Dear World, which wasn't the same kind of smash.

"We managed to squeeze a six-month run out of it," she said, "but the audiences hated it. They simply didn't want to see me play an old woman. The men, especially."

Sources Shielded

NEW YORK (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller has signed into law a bill guaranteeing a reporter the right to keep his sources of information confidential. He said "recent attempts by the federal government to require disclosure of confidential information" showed that the danger of being held in contempt of court "is a real and imminent threat" to reporters.

Two Movies Planned For Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — A young English producer is planning to shoot two major movies in Toronto this summer.

Terry Dene, who came to Toronto via Hollywood, said his Canadian crew will begin work on a movie entitled Heart Farm May 26. Dene also plans to film The Rabbi Slept Late on Friday, based on a novel by Alex Jacob.

Heart Farm, which will star Sandy Dennis and two other American actors, is described as a semi-science-fiction film about a wealthy man who builds a medical research laboratory and staffs it with potential donors.

The budget for each film is estimated at $600,000. Dene has not applied for money from the Canadian Film Development Corp. because he is not a Canadian and says his films make no effort to be Canadian.

Last summer he filmed Homer in nearby Schomberg. Homer is being re-edited for release in the fall after a sneak preview in Toronto.

THIEF INSISTS ON HELPING

CARBONDALE, Ill. (UPI) — Mrs. Lillian Settlemoir told police she had carried a sack of groceries from a supermarket to her car when a man asked if he could help her carry her groceries.

She said no, but the man drew a gun and said, "Lady, I mean business. I want to carry your groceries." The man grabbed a bank money bag containing $64 from her grocery bag and fled.

Mrs. Settlemoir said the man may have seen her put the money bag in the grocery sack inside the store.

By JUDI FREEMAN

The urge to "see the ocean and meet new people" brought six young women to Victoria for the summer.

Ocean-gazing may seem a fit occupation for the lazy season but chances are these girls won't get much of a view of the briney deep.

They are spending their days in the Royal Jubilee Hospital's kitchen, putting into practice what they learned in university home economics courses.

The girls, who come from Alberta, Saskatchewan and New Brunswick, are in the hospital's dietetic intern program, an integrated course which leads, after three summers to qualification as a hospital dietitian.

They and Ilene McLeod of Meadow Lake, Sask., who is in the second phase, will work in different sections, learning the basics of food production, service to the patients, cafeteria service, special catering and therapeutic diets. Administration duties are also involved.

The hospital kitchen produces 2,300 to 2,400 meals a day, many of which involve detailed and complicated diets. Miss O'Brien heads a dietetic staff of three full-time and three part-time dietitians.

The remaining intern, Rosemarie Otrhalek of Lethbridge, is a home-ec graduate from the University of Alberta, Edmonton.

She'll be completing her second 15 weeks of training in August and will remain in Victoria to join three Montreal graduates in the third and final phase to begin in September.

The interns receive $225 a month.

The Royal Jubilee Hospital will graduate its first dietitians in January, 1971.

"Phase three concentrates on research, diets and teaching student nurses and patients," said Miss O'Brien.

In addition to the daily routine of feeding patients and employees in the large city hospital, the dietitians spend a large part of their time teaching patients such as diabetics, what they can and cannot eat once they return home.

"Diets today are so complicated that it becomes a very important part of our dietitians' work," said Miss O'Brien.

As research continues into dietetics, careful teaching will become even more important.

Tony Toriglia, head cook at Royal Jubilee Hospital, checks over the contents of one of the kitchen's huge vats as dietetic interns watch and learn. Ilene McLeod at left, of Meadow Lake, Sask. and Lois Myshrall of Fredericton, N.B., are two of six home-ec students who are spending their summers training to be hospital dietitians.

Three Phases

The Jubilee is the only hospital in B.C. which offers the integrated program.

It is also the first year all three phases of the course will be offered, said head dietitian Mary O'Brien.

Since 1960, home-ec students have taken their first 15 weeks of training at the Jubilee, then completed their dietetic training at other hospitals.

The Vancouver General Hospital alo offers a dietetic program but operates on a year of internship following university graduation.

"We had a fairly good spread of applications for internship from 12 of the 17 universities which have home economics faculties," Miss O'Brien commented. "None were from the University of British Columbia, though. The UBC girls want to go East for their training."

In contrast, the Eastern girls want to come West.

The Other Ocean

For Lois Myshrall of Fredericton, N.B., attending Mount Allison University, it was a chance to see what Victoria and the other ocean" were like.

Miss Myshrall, along with Lorraine Montgomery and Bonnie Sykes of Saskatoon and Sharon Davey of Calgary are in the first phase of their training.

Asparagus stalks hold the attention of dietetic interns, Sharon Davey of Calgary and Lorraine Montgomery of Saskatoon. Born in Victoria, Miss Davy returned to take her internship because, "I love it here." For Miss Montgomery, it was the urge to see the ocean which drew her away from the Prairies. Hot Asparagus Sandwiches

BAKED ASPARAGUS-CHEESE SANDWICHES

Fresh asparagus has often been extolled as the aristocrat of vegetables and its short season brings the desire to serve it frequently. Its color, shape and flavor continue to delight the discriminating diner.

But have you ever tried it in a sandwich? The home economists of the Canada Department of Agriculture have used fresh asparagus in various combinations to make different styles of hot lunch-time sandwiches. Each sandwich starts off with stalks of cooked asparagus.

Choose straight, bright green, firm stalks with closed tips. Very thin or crooked stalks are apt to be tough.

Store, unwashed in the refrigerator, and use in a day or two. The number of stalks in a pound will vary because of the difference in thickness and length in the stalks.

One pound of asparagus will provide three or four servings if served for dinner along with two other vegetables and meat or fish.

The amount used in sandwiches depends upon the other ingredients.

Too cook asparagus, wash, using a soft brush. Break off each stalk as far down as it will snap easily. Remove any scales if sand has collected under them.

Tie asparagus loosely into bundles according to size and boil in two or three inches of salted water in a covered pot tall enough for stalks to stand upright, usually the top of a double boiler or a coffee pot.

The cooking time will vary from 6 to 12 minutes depending upon the thickness.

BAKED ASPARAGUS-CHEESE SANDWICHES

1 lb. asparagus
12 slices buttered bread
12 slices process Swiss cheese
3 eggs, beaten
2 cups milk
2 tbsp. chopped green onion
¾ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper

Cut asparagus in halves and cook in boiling water for 5 minutes. Drain.

Remove crusts from bread and arrange 6 slices on bottom of greased baking dish. Cover with 6 slices cheese and bottom halves of asparagus spears. Repeat with remaining bread, cheese and asparagus tips.

Combine remaining ingredients and pour over sandwiches. Bake at 350 deg. F. until custard is set (about 45 minutes). Serves six.

ASPARAGUS-BEEF SANDWICHES

1 lb. minced beef
4 hamburger buns, split and toasted
Butter
Prepared mustard (optional)
Salt and pepper
1 lb. asparagus, cooked
8 slices process cheddar cheese

Form beef into 8 patties and broil until medium rare (about 3 minutes each side).

Spread buns with butter and prepared mustard. Place a beef patty on each half bun and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cut asparagus spears in halves and arrange a few spears on each patty.

Top with a slice of cheese and broil until cheese melts (about 2 minutes). Makes 8 sandwiches.

ASPARAGUS WESTERN SANDWICH

3 cooked asparagus spears
1 tbs. chopped onion
1 tbs. chopped green pepper
2 tbs. chopped cooked ham
1 egg, beaten
1 tbs. milk
Dash salt and pepper
1 tbs. grated cheese
1 slice buttered toast

Cut asparagus into ½-inch pieces. Add onion, green pepper and chopped ham. Combine egg, milk and seasonings. Add to asparagus mixture.

Pour into greased fry pan and cook over low heat until set and lightly browned on under side (2 to 3 minutes).

DEAR ABBY . . .

Brother a Bully

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my 16-year-old brother. He treats our mother terribly. Just today he pushed her into a wall and made her cry. He curses her, and even hits her with his fist. It's the same with the rest of the family. He is always hitting me and my younger sister. Dad knows my brother is mean, but he doesn't know how mean he really is. Dad has an awful temper and we're afraid of what he'd do.

Last night my mom told my brother not to go out (my dad wasn't home), but he told her to shut up, and he went out anyway. Please don't recommend a doctor because he wouldn't go. I really feel sorry for my mom.—Worried.

DEAR WORRIED: Your brother is out of control and it will take more than a letter from Dear Abby to straighten him out. I'm sorry for your mother, but no parent loses authority all at once. Your brother must have been allowed to get away with his bullying tactics some time ago, until finally he has the while family terrorized. This matter is too far gone for the women in your family to handle. Tell Dad and let him handle it!

DEAR ABBY: On a couple of those late television shows where guests come on and talk, I've seen some transvestites.

Transvestites, I understand, are people who dress up in the clothes of the opposite sex, right? Now I have a question to ask you.

When a transvestite is dressed up in clothes of the opposite sex, which restroom does he use? — Wondering.

DEAR WONDERING: If he's dressed up like a lady, he uses the ladies' room. If she's dressed like a man, she used the men's room. (But they're very careful.)

DEAR ABBY: Loved your advice to the lady whose problem was nosy-bodies who bluntly asked her age.

Pointed personal questions are always embarrassing, and create resentment. Recently I underwent an operation on my tongue, which left me with a slight lisp. Thoughtless people often ask me about this impediment, implying that I am putting them on.

Q. "Where did you get that lisp?"

A. "It is medically known as a partial lobectomy, an operation of the tongue."

Q. "Really? Gee, you're lucky it wasn't cancer!"

A. "It was."

One friend of mine who went through this routine was so embarrased he said, "If I had my teeth in, I'd bite off my own tongue. . . ."

Your advice to people, often peppery, is a delight to me. I love to listen to your radio program, and I "read you" in more ways' than one. — Cordially, Juliet.

CONFIDENTIAL TO DREAMER: Dreams are nothing to be ashamed of. "The mind is its own place, and in itself can make a heaven of hell, a hell of heaven." (Thank you, John Milton.)

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get if off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Mary Quant Designs Shoes for All Hemlines

Shoes that go with any length of hem were featured in the spring and summer line released recently by British designer Mary Quant.

Designer Invades Canada

By MARGARET NESS

MONTREAL (CP) — Designer Elvia Gobbo has reversed the usual trend: The 28-year-old American-born designer invaded Canada to start a fashion boutique. She felt there was a big gap in the Canadian market for fashionable sophisticated clothes.

Three years ago she made the big leap to the wholesale trade, form a new company called Luv Originals with a partner from another dress house to look after the business end.

Elvia says a firm like Luv must project farther ahead in fashion thinking and trends than the average company. So while most houses are predicting the midi length won't arrive before fall, Elvia already has 30 midis in her summer collection.

Born in a small upstate New York town, Elvia has a background of northern Italy. She claims the great Titian as an ancestor, and several of her uncles are artists. She loved clay modelling as a child but soon decided she wanted to be a fashion designer.

At the famous Traphagen School of Fashion in New York she took illustration design and studied the history of costume for two years. And it was there she met the young Montreal designer known as Lionel.

After graduation, when she won first prize for the best design, she worked as illustrator and assistant to Anne Fogarty, one of the best-known New York designers of smart young clothes.

While Elvia was designing for Mr. Mort, also of New York, Lionel suggested they open a boutique in Montreal. The idea, to provide a new designing image, appealed to Elvia.

The boutique, on fashionable Sherbrooke Street, was a success, but soon Elvia saw the wider possibilities. Luv Originals has more than justified her faith. In less than three years it has become a million-dollar business.

Not only is Luv sold across Canada but it is bought by such New York stores as Lord and Taylor, Bonwit Teller and Bloomingdale's. Last year Luv negotiated a tie-in with a California company to produce and carry some 20 styles from the Luv line.

Improper Hiring Charges Rejected By Gaglardi

Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi Tuesday rejected a charge by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett that the Provincial Alliance of Businessmen is still hiring staff outside the Civil Service Commission.

Barrett referred to a Cariboo Observer newspaper report of April 18 in which Social Credit MLA Alex Fraser was quoted as saying he would announce the name of a new PAB official for the Quesnel area shortly.

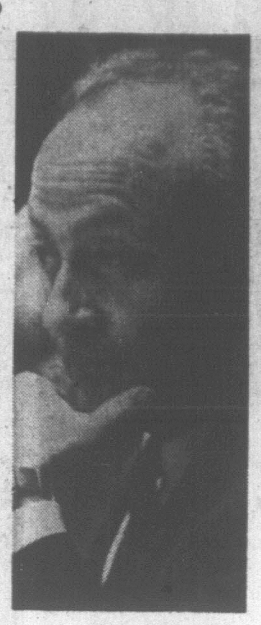

"This was evidence that the job-finding agency is still "undermining" the hiring practices of the CSC, Barrett said, recalling opposition criticism of Gaglardi for "pork barrel politics" during the legislative session.

NOT ANNOUNCED

But Gaglardi said later the appointment in question has not been announced and any new PAB jobs that are filled will be under the CSC.

Barrett said he had checked with the CSC and had been told no executive positions with the agency had been referred to it for job classification or competition.

The agency, set up under Gaglardi last summer when he was a minister without portfolio, initially hired staff outside the commission. It came under the commission April 1 after it was attached to the welfare department.

Sports 'Classic' Misses Festival

PORT HARDY — It somehow failed to make it into the B.C. Festival of Sports lineup, but the third annual Pothole Golf Tournament goes off as scheduled near Coal Harbor this weekend.

Teams from across the north end of Vancouver Island will tee off on a rocky stretch of road at 11 a.m. Sunday.

The event, kicked off by a Saturday night banquet and dance at the Port Hardy Airport, was originally conceived as a way of drawing attention to the area's bad roads.

Roads have improved considerably in the district since 1968 but organizers of this year's event — the Chambers of Commerce of North Vancouver Island — say the new course will challenge golfers armed with "shillelaghs" as much as it frightens motorists armed with their tire jacks.

The game, played with crooked tree branches, is won by the team taking the lowest number of strokes to drive a ball one mile or so on the road. The aim is to avoid the potholes.

The tournament, which also features prizes for the best-dressed team, will be followed by a picnic at the official opening of the new Cheslakees campsite near the Nimpkish River by the Canadian Forest Products Co.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, MLA for the area and traditional tournament leader, will miss this year's event. He's in a Victoria hospital where he underwent an operation this week.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Car Theft Brings Three-Month Sentence

A 20-year-old man before being sentenced to three months in prison for stealing an auto told Judge William Ostler Tuesday it may be a good idea if some of his friends could read his presentence report.

Warren William MacTier, 3286 Weatherby, said they might be able to learn something from it.

Ostler agreed, if it could help those involved in the drug culture who persist in using numerous drugs. The presentence report is prepared by probation officers on the request of the judge when an individual has been convicted of an offence.

The report is a confidential document that is read usually by the judge, the prosecutor, defence counsel and the defendant before sentence.

Ostler said it was unfortunate that MacTier seemed hooked on drugs but the accused stated that he felt he could get away from them.

"I admire your confidence," Ostler said but pointed out persistent use of marijuana, hashish, LSD, speed, mescaline and heroin would eventually produce addiction.

MacTier pleaded guilty April 28 to stealing a car the day before from the Strathcona Hotel parking lot. He was apprehended in the vehicle in Oak Bay several hours later.

INDUSTRIAL GIANTS CURB CLEAN AIR WAR

WASHINGTON (AP) — Giant corporations have thwarted United States government efforts to cleanse the atmosphere of deadly pollutants, a team of Ralph Nader's investigators said Tuesday.

The failure of federal and state programs has permitted the atmosphere to become so fouled that the health of most city dwellers is impaired by the air they breathe, the investigators said.

In a massive document, the group under the sponsorship of the Centre for Study of Responsive Law cited the auto-makers, coal, oil and natural gas producers, and several manufacturing industries as the chief obstacles to cleaner air.

BOMB SQUAD NOT NEEDED

80 Young Men And Dr. Lotta

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Round-robin letter from Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, director of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, came to me the other day.

She titles it "Jottings from India" and in it she writes "there is much peace in my heart tonight. The problems and fund-raising difficulties were faced in the past to obtain sufficient support in Canada for our pilot demonstration program in child care and training have born fruit. I have seen ample proof during these past many days."

Forbes

This proof came to the indefatigable Dr. Lotta when she attended, as patron-in-chief, the first anniversary meeting of the founding of an old boy's association in Madras. More than 80 young men from many parts of India were there for a one-day reunion.

"I found it difficult to recognize them, for now they are men and no longer my growing sons, as I knew them when they were supported by foster parents in Canada," Dr. Lotta writes.

Once a year, when they were foster children, she interviewed them. Now, each one is on his own.

They were eager to tell her success stories. She includes some of this information in her letter.

For instance, there is Avi, who now works in the United States Information Service office in Madras and makes over $100 a month "a tremendous salary for someone less than 30."

There was also S. Mani and Subramaniam. A few days earlier Dr. Lotta had gone to a little side alley-way near the airport in Madras, off the main road, to cut the ribbon and light the holy lamp in their new shop.

They had waited to open it until she could perform the ceremony with flowers, the breaking of a coconut and the burning of camphor.

Of them she writes, "they are hard working young men with a real business sense."

She tells of another Mani (this time with the initial "K") who is now a truck driver with an English electric company. He travels to Bombay and Calcutta on regular runs and is responsible for the safe transport of heavy, expensive machinery.

Tallest boy they ever had in the guild of service school was Sriramulu. When he entered he was "a spindly, frightened, thin, withdrawn little fellow ... and craving for love and care."

Today this same Sriramulu is with the Madras police traffic department.

Leaving Madras, this diminuative ambassador of good-will for Canada travelled on to Tanjore where she met some of her other "sons" grown to manhood, and who once were cared for in Tanjore's USC boys' home.

Among them was Mannikam, "whom I remember as the first boy admitted to the home ... there was something moving and beautiful about him even then. Today he is radiantly happy."

His Canadian foster parent put him through school and then through college "and today he is an elegant young man of 27." He teaches general sciences to 14 and 16 year olds at the government high school "and handles his job well."

Proudly he told Dr. Lotta he has already over 600 rupees (about $80) in his bank account and that he will keep depositing 50 rupees from his salary every month.

Blushingly he confided that he wishes to get married to a 17-year-old girl, a distant relative, living in his home village. Her parents have agreed to the match, but he decided to wait Dr. Lotta's arrival, in order to have her blessing and that of his Canadian sponsor.

This round-robin letter should make many Canadian foster parents, including those in Victoria, very proud. As Dr. Lotta says their efforts have born fruit. Today, many young men and women in India prove it.

THREE ROUTES are being looked at by U.S. oil firms to carry oil from Alaska's North Slope to markets and each one of them is causing some concern to Canada. The pipeline from Prudhoe to Valdez has raised fears in Victoria because the huge tankers loaded in Valdez would be passing through the Strait of Juan de Fuca to refinery in Puget Sound. (AP Photo).

Quiet Showdown Between Neighbors Being Forced by North's Black Gold

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada and the United States share the world's longest unarmed border, and the friendship between the two North American giants is widely noted.

But the increasingly apparent onslaught against the world's environment by modern industry may be setting the stage for a quiet showdown between the friendly neighbors.

Canada, with a wary eye toward American oil prospecting in Alaska and proposed oil shipping routes past thousands of miles of Canadian shoreline, has mapped out plans to put into effect a 100-mile offshore pollution protection zone.

A note from Canada to the U.S. government defended the proposed 100-mile limit, taking the view that a danger to a nation's environment constitutes a threat to its security.

IT'S DIFFERENT

The proposed legislation "is of a different order from unilateral interference with freedom of the high seas," External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the House of Commons in a discussion of the note to Washington.

Sharp added that the United States had repeatedly interfered with free use of the high seas. "The atomic tests carried out by the U.S. and other states, however necessary they may be, have appropriated to their own use vast areas of the high seas and constitute grave perils to those who would wish to utilize such areas during the period of the test blast, Sharp said.

If the legislation is put into effect in Canada, American oil companies would be put on notice that their plans to use supertankers to carry oil through the Northwest Passage will be subject to keen scrutiny.

SECOND LOOK

Recent events in Washington may have the effect of making oil companies take another look at Canada for shipping their black gold to the United States.

Much of the oil from the vast resources of the Prudhoe Bay area in northern Alaska was to have been carried by an 800-mile pipeline to the sleepy southern Alaska port of Valdez, a town of 1,200 on the shore of the Gulf of Alaska.

But ecologists have been concerned that the pipeline would cause grave damage to the delicate balance of the Alaskan environment. They fear that the pipe, with oil flowing inside at temperatures up to 180 degrees, may melt some of the ice formation in the Alaskan permafrost.

If this happens, they say, parts of the permafrost would disintegrate with serious erosion. And that might leave sections of the pipe unsupported, which could lead to its breaking under its own weight.

Secretary of the Interior Walter J. Hickel delayed issuing a permit for the proposed pipeline across federal lands, but said it would be all right to begin construction on a 390-mile road that was to go along with the pipe.

However, a United States District Court judge in Washington issued an order prohibiting Hickel from issuing the permit for the road until court cases being pressed by various environmental protection organizations are decided.

The action in Washington reopened serious consideration of an alternate route for a pipeline, one that would carry the oil eastward across northern Alaska into Canada, and then south through Canada to Edmonton, which is the northern terminus of a pipeline network into the United States.

With Canada on the verge of sharply limiting the right of U.S. oil companies to ship oil by water past her shores, it was not clear how America's neighbor to the north might react to piping it across some 2,000 miles of her territory.

Film Board Seeks Language Balance

OTTAWA (CP)—The chairman of the National Film Board Tuesday told the Commons broadcasting committee the board has proposed "an approach to parity" between its English and French productions, and underwent an attack on the policy from opposition MPs.

Hugo McPherson, board chairman, said the NFB had made the proposal in a report to State Secretary Gerard Pelletier submitted "in the past few weeks." The report was part of a departmental review of government film policy.

The board has "decided as policy that we would like an approach to parity between French and English production," Mr. McPherson said.

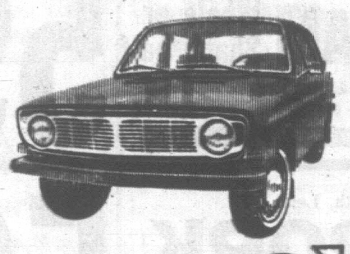

But after a vigorous attack from NDP and Conservative MPs, Mr. McPherson said he would change the term "parity" in the report to "flexibility and balance" between French and English content.

Hell Hath No Fury . . .

ROME (UPI) — Twenty spectators filed fraud charges Tuesday against the Canadian "hell drivers" who staged a display of driving skill at Rome's Borghese Gardens Saturday.

The spectators, who paid up to $3.20 for tickets, said the performance was not thrilling enough for their money and lasted only 20 minutes instead of the promised two hours.

Enraged spectators stormed into the arena Saturday, burned one car, smashed others and tore up seats. Police arrested several persons and held three of them in jail pending trial.

Streamline Cabinet, First Job in P.E.I.

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Premier Alex Campbell has returned to his office after a day's absence to celebrate his overwhelming victory in Monday's Prince Edward Island general election.

His Liberal party took 27 of the 32 seats in the legislature—a victory he said indicated a public mandate to carry on with his comprehensive development plan.

The $725,000,000 plan, toward which the federal government will pay $225,000,000 over 15 years, was the major election issue. It is designed to improve the provincial economy by upgrading fishing, farming and tourism, the island's three main industries.

It was the second provincial election victory for the 36-year-old premier, who led the party to a 17-15 win over the Progressive Conservatives in 1966.

Mr. Campbell spent Tuesday at his summer cottage near Summerside where he had said he would study the Nemetz report on reorganization of the provincial government.

WOULD CUT CABINET

The report recommends streamlining the administration, including a cutback in the number of cabinet members. In the last government there were 10 ministers, seven of them holding two portfolios each.

The study was headed by Donald Nemetz of the Chicago public administration service.

"I propose to establish a treasury board, which is one of the Nemetz report's recommendations," the premier said.

The premier also said he would be working on the makeup of his new cabinet and would announce it in about a week.

The legislature would be called into session "on or about June 2" and the budget, introduced one day before the house dissolved March 26 for the election, would be brought in again, with minor changes made for election expenses.

OPPOSED BUDGET

It was the budget, including appropriations for the development plan program, which precipitated the government's calling of the election. The 15 PCs in the house and Keir Clark, former Liberal health minister who crossed the floor to sit as an independent, indicated they would vote against money bills for the plan.

This would have defeated the government, which, with the Speaker in the chair, had only 15 voting members.

Mr. Clark, who left the party because he could not support the plan, was not a candidate in his Kings 4th seat. He said Tuesday it was the premier's personality which led the Liberals to their lopsided win.

The Conservatives, led by 39-year-old freshman George Key, campaigned heavily on a promise to renegotiate the plan. Mr. Key was defeated in his own Prince 2nd riding.

BOOBYTRAP GETS WRONG RABBIT

NANCY, France (UPI) — Jules Denis, 37, rigged up an anti-burglar boobytrap in his garage consisting of a trip wire and a double-barreled shotgun loaded with rabbit shot.

Today, entering the garage to get his car for work, he shot himself in the stomach. Doctors said his condition was not serious.

MOONWOMEN HIS BIG HOPE

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Speaking for his fellow astronauts, Col. Thomas P. Stafford says they hope women join them soon in the exploration of the moon.

"But not until our wives say it's OK," Stafford said. He spoke to the Herbert Hoover boys club Saturday.

There'll Be Surprises Among New Senators

By JOHN MIKA

OTTAWA—Prime Minister Trudeau may well disorient politically-staid Canadians a few days after he returns from the Far East late this month.

He's expected to throw in several exotic names among the dozen or so appointments he is planning for the Senate in June.

Would you believe Senator E. Davie Fulton?

Or Senator E. C. Manning?

Or Senator Robert Bonner?

There's considerable doubt that any of these men would agree to accept appointment but some sources here have little doubt that making the offer is under serious consideration.

And given the circumstances, there are reasons that argue powerfully in favor of a Liberal government considering retirement from active politics as a former Tory justice minister, a former Social Credit premier and a former Social Credit attorney-general, as excellent credentials for seats in the Upper House.

Mr. Ttudeau proclaims himself a pragmatist who, eschewing political labels as irrelevant, believes deeply that a structure of "countervailing forces" is necessary for a dynamic form of government capable of changing with the times.

So Tory and Socred should not be scare words to him and a strengthened role for the Senate — which will require vigorous and experienced men of varied persuasions in both the government and opposition sides of the Red Chamber — could be in the cards.

It must be apparent throughout Canada by now that the Senate of Trudeau's administration is different from those that have gone before.

The cornerstone of this difference was his choice of a passionate and clever competitor, Paul Martin, as his first appointment with the office of government leader in the Senate.

Senator Martin pledged that he would strive to revitalize the Senate.

Since then, the Senate has spawned more important discussion in its special committees — on poverty, the Benson White Paper, the news media, government expropriation powers — than even the lower chanber has managed with a larger and younger group.

There are now 15 vacancies: five in B.C. (where only Senator John Nichol remains); three each in Manitoba and Quebec; two in Nova Scotia; and one each in Alberta and Ontario.

With little likelihood of an early rewriting of the constitution, with some of the existing vacancies going back three and four years and with the substantially increasing workload, the rumors here that Mr. Trudeau will announce his appointments in early June are entirely credible.

He is, as many of his predecessors have been in the past, expected to fill only some of the appointments, leaving him room to manoeuvre in this area. The consensus appears to settle around a dozen seats.

It also appears likely — indeed it would not be in character otherwise — that his choices will be men of executive performance, many faintly Liberal (Victoria's former mayor R. B. Wilson and well-known conservationist Roderck Haig-Brown have been rumored in B.C.) and some of partisan gusto (for instance, Manitoba's retired Liberal leader Gildas Molgat has been mentioned as a probability).

But the fairly strong rumors that Fulton, Manning and Bonner might be approached will seem incredible — except against the background of an unconventional prime minister attempting to refashion the various areas of government into credible instruments.

To resurrect the Senate as a viable partner of power (an effort which began with the first serious proposals of Senate reform only seven years after the bicameral system was adopted in the 1867 Confederation), it is necessary to end a century's undermining of public esteem.

It began with Sir John A. Macdonald, who appointed a total of 117 senators during his regime, all of them Tories except two personal friends.

And 99 years later, when then-Prime Minister Pearson appointed the last dozen senators of his administration, no less than a prominent Calgary Liberal official was moved to publicly condemn the batch as making the Senate "a political garbage can, a depository for those political leftovers whose credentials could only be called shabby.

"There has been no prime minister who has been as guilty as Mr. Pearson in making the Upper Chamber the political joke it is today," the outraged G. Alex Jupp concluded.

Selecting the eminent among the eligible produced

FULTON

by other political parties would be an obvious method for Mr. Trudeau to avoid such corrosive accusations.

But there is a much stronger reasons for seeking opposition members of quality for the Senate. It is Mr. Trudeau's theory of countervailing forces.

If the plan is to re-establish the Senate as a functional, instead of ceremonial, arm of the governing process then it becomes essential that the Senate itself have a healthy political balance. That can't be said of its present composition: 60 Liberals, one Independent-Liberal, two Independents and only 24 Conservatives (with 15 more potential Liberals filling the vacancies).

Yet there is an even more important, and specific, reason why Socreds and Tories could be considered as desirable appointees for the western provinces.

And it would seem likely to impress itself strongly on a prime minister who takes an unemotional view of federalism as a logical mechanism for governing a huge and diverse country like Canada, provided some of its cogs and gears have not been stripped by partisan jamming.

A month ago, at a little-noted ceremony in the Centre Block to unveil portraits of 19 former Senate leaders, the prime minister was called upon to address a few perfunctory words to the small assembly of Senators, friends and onlookers.

Among his remarks was this significant passage:

"Speaking for myself, I should say simply that I have every respect for this institution (Senate) and that I hope it mill remain firmly established in our parliamentary traditions.

"I repeat, I believe that this bi-cameral system is a very important part of Parliament, especially in a federal form of government, and

MANNING
. . . are they willing?

I am sure it will continue for many years to perform its very vital functions."

Notice the stressed "especially in a federal form of government."

Historians, and the documents, agree that a prime reason why the bi-cameral system was adopted by the Fathers of Confederation was a desire to have one house to represent the people and the another to represent provincial interests in a federated state.

That's why Quebec, Ontario and the Maritimes were treated as regions and given an equal number of seats — 24 each — in the Senate. Later, when the western provinces joined Confederation, they were treated as a region and divided a further 24 seats to keep the formula consistent.

The provincial governments have always exprssede inerest in reforming the Senate to give it more power as their instrument.

Quebec, for instance, has always contended that the Senate could not be changed without its consent — recognizing that to some degree it provides it with a measure of security for the French-Canadian fact.

To satisfy this need, it was only necessary to appoint a predominance of French-speaking senators for Quebec and the fact was assured of a substantial voice in the Upper House no matter what representatives Canadians who live between Ontario and the Maritimes elected to the Commons.

Western Canada too has been afraid of being crushed between the Tory-Grit nutcrackers wielded by the more populous central Canada which controls the elected Commons. But the Western Fact has never been given voice in the Upper House.

So the West developed radical parties — the Progressives, CCF, Social Credit — to express its special aspirations and peeves in Ottawa but this multi-voiced babble was ineffective, and the West had voluable power only temporarily in John Diefenbaker.

This frustration helps explain one interesting footnote of our parliamentary history: why Quebecers have always jealously protected the Senate while most of the abolitionists have come from the West (Stanley Knowles' latest bill to abolish the Upper House was defeated only last December).

No one who speaks this 'radical' tongue of the West has been appointed to the Senate yet. That really didn't matter when a Senate seat was a sinecure. It does if those seats are to be upholstered with power.

It would be surprising if Mr. Trudeau, who knows all the historic arguments for federalism, was unaware of the deep satisfaction the West would experience if it's native political movements were finally acknowledged by appointment to the Upper House. And he wouldn't overlook its value, however small, as a countervailing force against the increasingly vocal separatists of the West.

So there are reasons to the rumors that Mr. Trudeau will call on Mr. Manning, Mr. Bonner and Mr. Fulton (who, although true-blue Tory is serving the B.C. government as its appointed chairman of the Law Reform Commission) to re-enter public life — this time for the good of their whole country.

'Canadians Don't Assert Own Values'

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said Tuesday that much of the radical literature of Canadian universities and high schools is as Canadian as Kentucky fried chicken.

He told a group of high school students that he is disturbed that renewed Canadian nationalism "seems to be against the values of the United States rather than an assertion of values of our own."

Many young Canadians condemned American policies but often adopted the rhetoric and tactics and even the causes of the youth protest of the United States.

If Canadians spent their limited resources in protest of other countries' policies, such as Vietnam, "we may not have enough to develop our own response to the problems directly in our realm."

Mr. Stanfield said separatism, both in Quebec and Western Canada, is a growing threat to the possibility of establishing a distinctive and strong Canadian nationality.

Canadian identity would come only with Canadian accomplishment.

"We will be known by what we do, or not at all," he said.

"Our great challenge, our fundamental opportunity, is to establish a standard of community in which different men can live together and live well."

GUIDED BY COMPASSION

A growing number of Canadians were guided by compassion and social conscience in selecting national goals.

But "if we spend our energies in condemnation of other countries, we could lose the chance to build a better country of our own."

"It is as Canadian as Kentucky fried chicken," Mr. Stanfield said.

"It is not enough to be a Canadian nationalist simply be cause you do not want to be a citizen of the United States.

"A dynamic country must be more than a refuge."

Canadian nationalism could be positive and productive, bringing Canadians together to achieve goals in response to urban and social problems and thereby offering an example to the world.

Mr. Stanfield said there is encouraging evidence that some younger Canadians are prepared to accept personal responsibility to improve conditions in the communities in which they live.

But he had found among some high school students a hard line against programs to break poverty, intolerance and other cultures and indifference toward urgent social questions.

Border Protesters Called Scum

Canadian demonstrators who marched into the United States at the Blaine border crossing Saturday are "scum" who speak only for a tiny minority of British Columbians, a Social Credit MLA said Tuesday.

He said Canadians can speak through diplomatic sources rather than with "some flower children's demonstration that turns to violence."

"The very thing those people went out to protest they were guilty of themselves."

Meanwhile, two B.C. councils on the lower mainland have voted to apologize for Saturday's protest invasion, which broke up with fighting and vandalism.

Surrey and New Westminster councils Tuesday night tendered aplogies to the city of Blaine.

New Westminster alderman Doug Stout said he was deeply ashamed of the "so-called Canadians who invaded American soil and desecrated the American flag."

Surrey Mayor Bill Vander Zalm said he hopes to deliver a personal apology to Blaine city council.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

ENGELBERT HUMPERDINCK. 7:30 p.m., Channel 8; 10 p.m., Channeel 4. Liberace makes a guest appearance tonight, along with singer Fay McKay and comedian Allen Drake. Songs include Cabaret, The Good Life, There's No You and Release Me by Engel, Raindrops Keep Fallin' On My Head and There'll Be No New Tunes on This Old Piano, by Liberace, Bill Bailey by Fay, and Cement Mixer by Fay and Lib.

★ ★ ★ ★

THEN CAME BRONSON. 10 p.m., Channel 5. "A Pickin' an' a Singin' ". (Repeat). Some fine tunes make this hour a pleasant one. Bronson teams up with an eager songwriter (Michael Burns) to make a demo record, and it looks as if the young man is about to embark on a highly successful career. There are a few complications, but hardly anything to get fans of this casual show uptight.

SPECIAL. 9 p.m., Channel 5. "America's Junior Miss Pageant." Live from the Municipal Auditorium in Mobile, Alabama, host Jimmie Rodgers introduces the 50 "ideal high school senior girls," one from each state, who are competing for the title, "America's Junior Miss for 1970." One of the most attractive features of this competition is its accent on scholastic achievement in addition to physical fitness, poise and creative talent, all of which are awarded separate college scholarship prizes on local and state levels.

JOHNNY CASH SHOW. 9 p.m., Channel 4. Grand lineup of country stars finds two Country Music Hall of Fame winners, Roy Acuff and Tex Ritter, joining Johnny Cash, along with Marty Robbins, Danny Davis and the Nashville Brass, and even Johnny's mother, Carrie Cash. Fans get a passel of songs like "Great Speckled Bird" (Acuff), "Boll Weevil" (Ritter), "I Walk the Line" (Cash), all winners, as well as "Don't Worry" and "The City" (Robbins) and a segment in tribute to Luther Perkins, Cash's late lead-guitarist who was helpful in building our host's career.

HAWAII FIVE-O. 10 p.m., Channel 12. (Repeat). This is one of those cases where a relative is dissatisfied with the police work and plays detective on his own. The premise works fairly well whan a young kid, recently married, is murdered over a dishonest poker game, and his brother becomes irked by McGarrett's progress. The resulting tension gives actor Jack Lord someting to bite into and it keeps the action going. Guest actors John Colicos, Julie Gregg, and Jack Soo don't hurt either.

DAVID FROST SHOW. Channel 11, 8:30 p.m. Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew is the special and only guest of David Frost's show tonight.

THIS "MONKEY SUIT" is no tuxedo. Edward Allen, a tailor in Berkeley, Calif., and technician James Pierce measure one of the monkeys from Automated Primate Lab for a new flight suit. When asked to make "100 monkey suits" Allen declined the order because he thought the customer wanted that many tuxedos. He changed his mind when he found out it meant tailor-made flight suits for the animals, used in space flight projects. (AP Wirephoto)

NO PROBLEM, SAYS TOWN

BILBOROUGH, England (UPI) — Robert Wynbrants says he has been assured by town authorities that a right of way through the middle of his house shown on a new map will not cause any problems. He says he just discovered the house was built on what was once a public footpath.

Air Traffic Controllers Ask Curbs

MONTREAL (CP) — Air traffic controllers passed a resolution Tuesday that could allow them to refuse to handle aircraft from countries harboring known terrorists.

The resolution, passed in the second day of the annual convention of the International Federation of Air Traffic Controllers Associations, was seen as a step toward curbing air piracy.

It was expected to be discussed further at a meeting of the International Civil Aviation Organization here next month.

Meantime, John-David Lyon, president of the Canadian Air Traffic Controllers Association, said Tuesday Canada will have to improve its use of regional airports.

"This would take the pressures off major centres while assuring equally good service to both large and small air carriers," he said.

Mr. Lyon said Canada's chronic shortage of controllers is being helped by a massive training program at the Ottawa training school. He expected the 1,200-man force to increase by 1,000 in two to three years.

At present, he said, some controllers at busy terminals work streaks of nine consecutive days with one day off, spending nearly their full eight-hour and 15-minute shifts at their control instruments.

Fee-Happy Lawyers Feared

OTTAWA (CP) — A vision of lawyers as fee-hunters who might assess potential clients on their ability to pay was presented Tuesday to the Commons finance committee.

D. J. Lawson of Victoria, chairman of a committee of the Law Society of British Columbia which studied Finance Minister Edgar Benson's white paper on taxation, told the Commons committee members that the taxing system proposed for professional people in the white paper could alter the traditional relationship between lawyer and client.

The white paper proposes that, instead of the cash-income basis now used for professional people, taxes be on an accrued-income basis which would also tax both work in progress and bills sent out to clients but not yet paid.

The proposal has brought a succession of professional groups to Parliament Hill to register objections. Tuesday was the legal profession's day and four organizations—the Law Society of Upper Canada, the Bar of the Province of Quebec, the Law Society of British Columbia and the Canadian Bar Association—were on hand to protest and to answer questions.

Lawson said at one point that the introduction of the accrued-income basis could mean that many lawyers will want a commitment in advance from prospective clients, since they will be taxed on the assumption that the client will pay.

TAX RETURNS

The Canadian Bar Association brief said 6,200,000 of the 8,100,000 Canadians who filed individual tax returns in 1967 were on a cash-income basis. The Ontario society found that "accrual accounting is not suited to the determination of income from the practice of law."

Lawson said he knew of one B.C. firm, not identified, which had adopted accrual accounting. The firm's employees spent so much time calculating accounts receivable and work in progress, and they and the tax inspectors become so confused, that the revenue department ordered them to return to a cash-income system.

Tea Tasters Stay

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration has reappointed the board of tea experts after legislation was introduced to raise the tea import tax to cover the costs of tea-tasting. The president announced several weeks ago that he would save $125,000 annually by eliminating the board that meets once a year to establish taste standards for tea quality and purity. The tea industry said Nixon could not abolish the board without repealing the Tea Importation Act of 1897.

HOME GARDEN

Moving House Plants Outdoors

By HILDA BEASTALL

Potted house plants are likely to find themselves put out to pasture when spring housecleaning lays its spell on the homemaker. Lucky are the plants whose custodians can resist the siren call of turning the home inside out. Some house plants thrive under garden conditions during the warm summer months, others would get such a shock they might never recover their original good looks.

Hilda

Tougher plants which ordinarily grow outdoors here anyway (such as chrysanthemums, azaleas and Easter lilies) will do better if planted into the garden soil.

This can be done now, though common-sense suggests putting the plants outside for a few days to get use to it, and taking them in for the nights.

Remove the pot, and set the plant at the same depth into a spot of compost enriched soil. Chrysanthemums like a sunny spot, as do azaleas which will want dampened peatmoss mixed in.

Easter lilies will bear deeper planting for the bulbs are stem rooting. Put them where the flower stem will come up into sunshine, but where other plants will shade the soil surface.

Don't put out any of the thin leaved tropical house plants such as dieffenbachia, nor even philodendrons and rubber plants.

Later, for July and August, a mostly shaded corner out of wind might be suitable for a philodendron.

I have had success with putting out large specimen cactus plants for June, July and August.

The pots were arranged within a square of 12-inch boards as a precautionary measure to keep visitors from touching the plants.

Cacti have fatal attraction for some people, they want to handle them, and will do so in spite of repeated warnings.

I found the 12-inch high board square a sufficient deterrent. Within it, the pots were arranged with large chunks of rock and pieces of weathered wood, making a sufficiently interesting desert scene.

If anyone has an aspidistra these days, put it out in a shaded place for summer and watch it grow. I will enjoy having its leaves washed frequently with the hose, and their color will improve to a rich dark green. But keep it out of the sun, or they will become blotched and browned.

Cast-iron-plant may be an old name for it but it was earned by its acceptance of dark dingy lighting rather than of sunshine.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

The deal diagrammed today features a recurring type of situation, in which the nonexpert usually goes wrong because he plays mechanically. The expert, on the other hand, has been over the same road on numerous occasions, and has learned to handle it with consummate ease.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

South's opening bid of two no-trump was a slight overbid, but he didn't want to run the risk of North having exactly five points, with which he would have passed an opening bid of one club.

West's spade lead was captured by South's queen, after which a low club was led, dummy's jack winning when West followed with the deuce. East discarded a heart.

The South hand was then entered via a heart, and another low club was led. East put up the nine, and the board's queen won the trick.

A diamond was played next, and South's king won the trick when East followed suit with the seven-spot. To attempt to establish the club suit was pointless, since West possessed two club winners (the A-10, so he played another diamond, following with a low one from dummy in the hope that East had been dealt the doubleton A-7. When this hope failed to materialize, all declarer could come to where eight tricks: two spades, three hearts, one diamond, and two clubs.

Declarer's worry from the outset should have been that West had the four outstanding clubs. If the adversely held clubs were divided 2-2 or 3-1, no matter how South played the club suit, he would always bring home four clubs. And if East happened to possess the four clubs, he would always win two tricks in that suit.

At trick two, declarer should have laid down his king of clubs. West would take this with his ace, as East failed to follow suit. A spade return would then be captured by South's ace. The eight of clubs would now be led, covered by West's nine, and taken by dummy's jack.

A heart lead to South's queen would then be followed by another club, and West's remaining 10-2 would be entrapped by dummy's Q-7. South would now have four club tricks and his contract.

Neuralgia Used As Catch-All Term

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Hundreds of people have asked me about neuralgia: what it is, and what do you do for it? In Greek, neuro refers to nerves, and algia means pain; hence neuralgia should mean pain in nerves.

Unfortunately, it has come to be a sort of catch-all term, used by many an overworked and too-busy physician who hasn't the time to sit down and talk to his patient and take a good history. Actually, in many a case, on careful study the "neuralgia" in an arm or leg looks more like a pain in a muscle or a bursa (a tiny bag of fluid), or in a joint, or perhaps in a tiny area in the brain, or in two vertebras, or bones that make up the spine, or perhaps in a diseased gallbladder.

Many a time when a patient has come in asking me to cure his "neuralgia," I have quickly seen that the trouble was not a neuralgia, because it did not follow the distribution of any one nerve. Also there may have been no weakness or numbness such as might result from a diseased motor nerve or a diseased sensory nerve; also the pain may have been behaving like that of a rheumatic pain, in that it was bad when the patient got out of bed in the morning, but soon went away after a hot bath or after some walking. The pain might then be due to a lifelong tendency to fibrositis, which is like a mild form of arthritis.

To give my readers some idea of how a doctor makes a diagnosis of disease involving nerves, I will compare him with a telephone repairman. One day when my telephone misbehaved in a peculiar way, and the repairman heard what had gone wrong, he said, "That means that the trouble is not here in the phone but in the wire that comes into your office. Was a carpenter working around here recently?" and I remembered that the day before an electrician had been working on the baseboard. When the telephone repairman pulled out a nail, my telephone worked well again.

It is the same with a doctor; he knows the patterns of nerves and like the telephone repairman, he can track down the trouble according to those patterns.

I am not here accusing my medical brethren of making inexcusable mistakes; what I might complain about is the tendency to use a "catch-all" term, rather than taking the time to track down what is really troubling the patient.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Many Developments During War of 1812

By BOB BOWMAN

In 1813 Britain was fighting Napoleon with one hand and the United States with the other. Napoleon had planned to recapture Canada for France by sending an expedition up the Mississippi River from the Gulf of Mexico, but he gave that up in 1803. Then the U.S. was determined to capture Canada and Britain's struggle with Napoleon seemed to be the ideal opportunity.

Yet during these crucial times important events were taking place in parts of the continent that were destined to become parts of Canada. In May, 1813, the Selkirk settlers were getting established in present-day Manitoba, and their leader, Miles Macdonell, was planting wheat and potatoes. Peter Fidler, arrived with a bull, cow, and heifer, the beginning of a great settlement although turbulent days were ahead.

On the Pcific coast, the North West Company was trying to establish a chain of fur-trading posts through the Rockies. Its territory extended as far south as Fort Astoria, near the mouth of the Columbia River. That river might be "the St. Lawrence of the Pacific" today if a British naval captain had not "captured" the fort which had already been bought by the North West Company.

A good fur-trading route was needed between the Rockies and Fort Astoria, and John Stuart was asked to find one. He had been Simon Fraser's second-in-command during the daring trip down the Fraser River in 1808. He left Fort St. James, north of present-day Prince George, on May 13, 1813, and travelled down the Fraser River to Soda Creek. Then he used horses for 150 miles to get to Okanagan Lake, leading south to the Columbia River. It was really the commercial route for which Alexander Mackenzie had been looking when he became the first man to cross the continent in 1793.

Other events on May 13:

1707 Large New England force sailed to attack Port Royal, N.S.

1861 Queen Victoria proclaimed strict neutrality during U.S. Civil War.

Develop Community Programs, Cable TV Operations Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Harry Boyle, vice-chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, urged cable TV operators today to strive to develop community - program channels before it is too late.

Mr. Boyle told the annual convention of the Canadian Cable Television Association that community channels on cable TV systems are one of the greatest methods for promoting understanding among Canadians.

"We hope community channels on CATV (cable systems) will allow access for people to become re-acquainted with each other and with their locality before it vanishes in a smothering mass of pollution and waste," Mr. Boyle said.

The four-day convention, which began Monday, is concentrating on the issues of electing a permanent president, community programming and recently-announced proposals for governing the future growth of the industry issued by the CRTC.

The proposed guides for cable TV issued by the commission in April, would restrict the numbers of American channels carried by cable systems in some circumstances and force cable operators to black out non-Canadian programs for a week before and after they are shown by local TV stations.

'NOT FINAL WORD'

Mr. Boyle told the convention the proposals are not intended as "the final word." They would be the subject of a CRTC public hearing in the fall and all views would be carefully considered.

He said the commission has been insisting for some time that cable operators develop and show programs that reflect the life of their communities.

This type of programming can supplement that shown on regular channels because of the relative lack of pressure that cable operators work under to achieve a mass audience and advertising.

"Just the chance—that's all—not sophisticated just the chance—perhaps primitive but with freedom—time for expression—and not the fractured, splintered bits of concern on videotape and film we so often get now.

"You know the kind of thing I mean—instant empathy knit into a slick documentary under direction of producers hounded by the necessity of achieving mass audience if the series — or themselves—are to survive."

Mr. Boyle, a former journalist and broadcaster, said the CRTC is not demanding great expenditures from the cable operators for local programming

"We simply appeal for the people to have an opportunity to use modern technology for dialogue and understanding."

Young people had an almost "desperate desire to institute communication at its root—the beginning—in the process of relating to each other—in communities where there is a true interdependence, and if this can be nurtured why can't we in turn find the way to relate nationally."

Mr. Boyle implored the cable operators to keep in mind that the CRTC is simply enforcing the requirements of the Broadcasting Act aimed at development of a distinct Canadian broadcasting system.

"We are dedicated to co-operations within, of course, the boundaries of the mandate given to us by Parliament. What we do is no more—no less—than what any of you would do in a similar situation."

There had been charges that the commission was promoting a strident type of nationalism and anti-Americanism, Mr. Boyle said. This was not the case.

But all Canadians wanted to feel an identity of their own and it was this desire that the commission hoped, to some extent, to fulfil.

"I love the identity of being in this country because it's me. We all must have—we all want —a Canadian cradle."

Negro In Runoff In Newark

NEWARK, N.J. (Reuters) — Kenneth Gibson, a black civil engineer, today began his campaign for a run-off mayoral election after defeating the incumbant mayor of this scandal-scarred city by more than two-to-one in voting Tuesday.

Gibson easily outpolled Mayor Hugh J. Addonizio, who is under indictment for extortion and is charged with Mafia connections, but failed to get the necessary 50 per cent plus one for outright victory.

He and Addonizio face each other in the run-off June 16.

Gibson finished with an unofficial total of 37,666. Addonizio had 17,925. White vigilante leader Anthony Imperiale, who ran on a "law and order" platform, was eliminated with 13,904 votes.

With a population of 405,000, the city is 60 per cent black or Puerto Rican. But the voter registration rolls are predominantly white.

TANGLES WITH LAW

The major campaign issue was Addonizio's tangle with the law and charges of city corruption.

The federal and state governments managed a total of more than 70 indictments against politicians, judges, and alleged Mafia racketeers. Besides Addonizio three city councilmen were indicted, one municipal judge, one councilman candidate and the city counsel.

Addonizio was charged with conspiracy to commit extortion and income-tax evasion. The charges result from the letting of city contracts.

He is scheduled to go on trial in Trenton two weeks before the runoff election.

He also was prominently mentioned in tape recordings of conversations between Mafia leaders who discussed their alleged control over politicians, not knowing the federal government was eavesdropping.

Former fire director John Caulfield, who was fired when he decided to run against Addonizio, came in fourth with 11,752 votes. State Senator Alexander Matturri, the only Republican in the election, had 4,752.

Brody Arrested

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael J. Brody, the oleomargarine hier who set off a publicity stir last winter when he said he was giving his fortune away, was arrested and charged with possession of marijuana. Police went to Brody's East Side apartment after he began throwing ashtrays and other small items of furnishings out the window.

RADIO CONTENT FACES NEW LIMIT

VANCOUVER (CP)—Regulations governing the amount of Canadian programming on television and AM radio stations are expected to be announced next week by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

The regulations, which many observers predicted would be announced earlier this month, are believed to have been delayed while the commission weighed political opposition to the proposals in Ottawa.

When announced, the regulations will be based on a series of proposals put forward by the CRTC in February aimed at increasing Canadian content on TV stations to 60 per cent of total schedules and requiring AM radio stations to play a minimum of 30 per cent Canadian music.

Sources said Tuesday the regulations will differ considerably from the proposals but the objective of raising the level of Canadian programming will remain.

Language Barrier a Terrible Burden For Immigrants Inside Australia

By VINCENT MATTHEWS

CANBERRA (CP) — They are the silent minority of Australia, often lonely, sometimes frightened, ever insecure.

They are the victims of the language barrier, the immigrants who have come to Australia to seek a better life and brighter future but who are burdened because they cannot speak English.

No one knows for sure how many there are, but more than 700,000 at one time or another have enrolled in adult language classes in English. A survey in New South Wales showed that one in three of the immigrant school children in that state was handicapped by not knowing English.

This disability of communication is not confined to children. Thousands of housewives spend many lonely hours at home as what one social welfare worker called "virtual prisoners," afraid to go outside their homes, to go shopping.

Now the Australian government has acted. Immigration Minister Phillip Lynch, in a major statement to Parliament, announced that in the next four years $16,000,000 will be spent on a crash program to teach immigrants English.

Most of the money will go for paying salaries for special teachers, and on modern equipment and teaching aids.

"The government believes it is a matter of national importance that migrants — both adults and children — should be given every opportunity to learn English," Lynch said.

"The government intends to reduce, and as far as humanly possible eliminate, this barrier to the equality of opportunity."

By treating as a matter of national importance the plight of non-English-speaking immigrants, the government is recognizing the importance of non-British migrants in the country's immigration program and reaffirming the governments' intention to pursue that program enthusiastically.

More than 180,000 immigrants will settle in Australia in the year ending this June — 5,000 more than the target figure.

This has been achieved at a time when it is increasingly difficult to persuade Europeans to leave their relatively high living standards for the unknown ones of a new country.

Lynch will leave in June on a five-week world trip to boost immigration, especially from Britain. The figure from Britain was 3,000 short of the target this year.

Twin Bombs Shake IOC

(Times sport columnist Bill Walker is holidaying in Europe this week and was in Amsterdam when the International Olmpic Committee met to make its decisions on the sites for 1976 Olympics and Winter Games. He telephoned this exclusive account of the politics behind the votes and the reaction.)

By BILL WALKER

AMSTERDAM—Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, thought he had a neat little atom bomb for the committee to juggle here this week. He obviously didn't know what they knew.

The IOC delegation had one in return.

Last week Brundage asked the committee to study professionalism in Olympic sports, particularly hockey, skiing and basketball. The committee began that study today.

But last night they brought down their own shocker. The surprise was wrapped in two packages.

First one opened was the real bomb.

Montreal had been awarded the 1976 Olympic Games.

The second one was labeled "Sop." That was for Denver, which got the 1976 Winter Olympics.

Site Awards Set Precedent

This marked the first time in Olympic history that North America had been elected as the site for both events, also the first time that Canada had ever been elected.

The Montreal victory completely shook the large gathering. Moscow and Los Angeles has been considered the prime candidates. And there was a long silent moment of disbelief before the Montreal contingent erupted with screams of delight. Meanwhile, Moscow's delegates huddled briefly, rose from their seats and walked out of the hall.

But if the gathering was surprised at this turn of events, the Vancouver-Garibaldi delegation was stunned.

"Oh, No!" Father David Bauer, a member of the committee and a former Olympic hockey coach, was heard to mutter. "Now there's no way," he said.

For this vote had killed Garibaldi's chances and even the most optimistic delegate, although refusing to concede, ruefully admitted they had lost.

Leak Confirms Elimination

And sure enough.

For shortly after the IOC voting group had reconvened to determine the site of the Winter Olympics, there was a leak from the committee room that said that Garibaldi had received only nine votes on the first ballot. Denver had 29; Sion, Switzerland, 18 and Tampere, Finland, 12.

Garibaldi had been eliminated. The final vote on the third ballot, Denver 39, Sion 30.

The Montreal victory came unexpectedly as another "leak," which was later confirmed, had Moscow winning the first ballot 28 votes to 25 for Montreal and 17 for Los Angeles.

On the second ballot all the Los Angeles votes went to Canada except for one. This was considered significant by the delegation as it indicated the solid stand against Russia as host for the Games.

There was no comment from the mayor of Moscow for the vote. "Nyet" was his only word.

No communist nation has ever been host to the Olympic Games.

The Montreal triumph and Garibaldi's defeat gave a bitter-sweet touch to the situation. On the one hand, the eastern Canadians were laughing and gay. The Garibaldi smiles were evident, too, but they came through clenched teeth.

Drapeau Man of the Hour

Montreal mayor Jean Drapeau was the man of the hour. And why not? He had just completed an impossible double in international politics. He had parlayed the name of Expo 67 into worldwide fame. Now he had the Olympics for his beloved city.

This was Montreal's third try for the Olympics and Garibaldi's first.

Drapeau was also surprised at the Montreal decision, and was so excited that he declined to answer the television announcer's queries immediately. However, he quickly regained his aplomb, and hurried to the podium to accept the '76 Games for Montreal and Canada.

He promised dutifully that Montreal would host the event in the true spirit of the Olympics and with humbleness, simplicity and dignity.

It was definitely a personal triumph for Drapeau. The Montreal delegation was the first to admit this. He himself admitted it was a low-key approach that had won it for Montreal, compared to high pressure tactics and the commercial overtones that had accompanied the Moscow and Los Angeles bids.

The numbness has started to wear off the Garibaldi delegation today, but some were still in a state of confusion.

They had come so close, only to lose — in effect — to another Canadian city. This was the consensus and this made the heartbreak a little harder to take.

First, because they had been told that technically they had the best site for the Winter Games. The presentation to the IOC had been extremely well received. Mayor Tom Campbell of Vancouver almost, but not quite, openly predicted victory for Garibaldi on the second ballot.

A telegram of 105,000 names of Vancover and Victoria residents offering their support of the bid had been an instant hit with the committee.

And then Brundage himself had stood up to say that he too had recieved "a foot-high stack" of telegrams from Vancouver. He said the Vancouver-Garibaldi Olympic committee obviously had the support of its people.

But it was not to be, not after Montreal's victory, or as James Worrall, Canada's voting delegate later said:

"It was obvious the committee was not going to give one country both events."

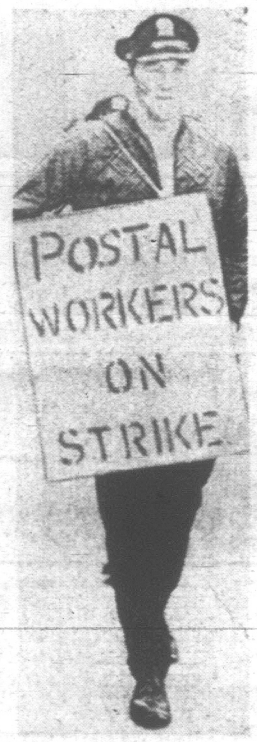

Worrall did suggest, however, that it was his opinion that in the future that one country should bid for one event.

WAR FUND CUTBACK EYED BY SENATORS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Senate is ready to begin a debate on the war in Southeast Asia, a debate likely to continue for the announced duration of U.S. operations in Cambodia.

U.K. Looks to Canada For Major Army Base

LONDON (CP) — The British army is considering the possibility of taking over a large military base in Canada or some other country for training purposes, a spokesman said today.

He emphasized that the question of finding large training areas abroad is in the early stages of study and no details could be provided now.

"Obviously Canada is among the areas considered," he added. "We also are looking at Australia."

The need to find vast new ground results from withdrawal of British troops from Libya where large ground and air exercises had been undertaken from time to time.

Canada provides areas for training of British troops each year but these have been mainly on a battalion scale. The British army appears to be looking for major installations where perhaps a bridgade could exercise in combined training with a number of British air squadrons.

BIG BASE

The Canadian defence deapartment is reported to be gradually closing its big base at Rivers, Man., in line with the government's decision to restrain defence spending. Last week a defence spokesman at Ottawa suggested that Rivers is one of the bases the British army is exploring.

A defence department spokesman in Ottawa said it is possible that training of British forces in Canada will be expanded but it was too early to say to what extent.

A number of locations are being considered but no decision has been made, said the spokesman.

It "Could be" that Rivers, Man., is one of the bases under consideration. The future of Rivers, has been in doubt for some time. It is known to be one of a number of Canadian forces bases the government is considering closing for economy reasons.

Defence Minister Leo Cadieux indicated last week that the decision on Rivers may be announced within a few weeks.

Some observers doubted that Rivers is roomy enough for British army training purposes. It is primarily an air base, with a drop zone for training paratroopers.

Wilson Party Leads by 7%

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Wilson's Labor government showed a 7.5-per-cent lead today over the Conservatives in the latest Gallup poll.

Anthony Shrimsley, Sun political editor, called the swing to labor sensational and predicted Wilson will call a general election in June.

Viets Begin Major Drive

Cambodia Capital Target

Times News Service

SAIGON—South Vietnamese forces, with U.S. advisers, have launched a major land offensive along Highway One leading to the capital of Cambodia.

Associated Press correspondent David Rosenzweig reported that a South Vietnamese armored column accompanied by U.S. advisers pushed up Highway One from the provincial capital of Svay Rieng to Kompong Trabek, 25 miles to the west.

The armored column linked up with South Vietnamese marines driving up the Mekong River, then engaged about 600 Communist troops three miles beyond Kompong Trabek in heavy fighting.

The announced purpose of the drive was to clear Highway One for the repatriation of Vietnamese in Cambodia.

Earlier this week 30 South Viet gunboats escorting barges, made the run to the capital of Phnom Penh. This action was described by Saigon as a means to repatriate Vietnamese living in the capital.

The U.S. command announced that the first American troop withdrawal from Cambodia was completed but informed sources in the South Vietnamese capital said the withdrawal affected less than 2,000 men.

The command first announced that elements of the 3rd Brigade, 9th Infantry Division, had been withdrawn from the Parrot's Beak section of Cambodia about 45 miles west of Saigon.

Later, headquarters reported the withdrawal of one-third of the 4th Division force operating more than 200 miles to the north in the Se San base area of Cambodia, about 50 miles west of Pleiku City.

"The remainder of the task force will continue to operate along with elements of the South Vietnamese 22nd Division," a spokesman said.

Israeli Forces End Campaign

By REUTERS

Israel said the last of its tanks which took part in Tuesday's raid on Arab guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon returned to their home bases today, 32 hours after the first tank rolled across the border.

Contradictory accounts of the operation in the rugged foothills of 9,000-foot Mount Hermon came from the Israelis and the Arabs.

In Beirut, Reuters' correspondent Ian MacDowell reported that Palestine-Arab commandos celebrated what they hailed as a victory in the battle against the powerful Israeli armored force.

SAY FEW WOUNDED

Despite Arab claims to have inflicted a heavy toll on the raiders, the Israelis reported only 11 wounded, 10 of them slightly.

Military spokesmen also denied Arab claims that there had been direct clashes between Israeli forces and the Lebanese army.

The Israelis said that during the raid the Israeli troops occupied six villages, blew up 40 buildings and took 11 prisoners. An undisclosed number of guerrillas were reported killed.

A spokesman said Israel stood ready to repeat the land and air invasion into Lebanon.

BEHIND SCHEDULE

The Israeli plan, which originally provided for the raiding force to be pulled out by sunset, ran behind schedule.

Early today, Egyptian planes went into action against Israeli positions in the northern sector of the Suez canal.

NOL REGIME AID REFUSED

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary William P. Rogers, appearing at a surprise news conference today, ruled out any United States military support for the government of Premier Lon Nol in Cambodia apart from limited arms aid.

"We don't intend to become involved militarily in support of the Lon Nol government," Rogers said.

Bourassa Cabinet Debates Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — The optimism of negotiators provided a hopeful note in the strike by 25,000 Quebec construction workers today as Premier Robert Bourassa and his cabinet prepared to discuss the strike.

After two days of hard bargaining, Andre Desjardins, chief negotiator for the Quebec Federation of Labor-affiliated unions, said management "is really doing its best" and half of the outstanding issues could be settled today.

DONNING MAORI costume and head band, Prime Minister Trudeau was declared by the tribe to be a kotuki revengatahi — white heron in single flight—and was to be a friend forever of the New Zealand native. The Maori ceremony was the highlight of his first day in New Zealand.

'We Did Condemn'

WELLINGTON (CP—Reuters) — Prime Minister Trudeau told New Zealand students today that Canada had "very recently" condemned United States bombing of Cambodia but had not called for the withdrawal of U.S. and allied forces from the Southeast Asian kingdom because "if we did, it wouldn't matter a whit."

Appearing before a student audience at Wellington's Victoria University, Trudeau was asked whether he would demand the "immediate withdrawal" of American and allied troops from Cambodia. He replied: "No. We wouldn't demand it— and if we did, it wouldn't matter a whit.

"Other people have demanded the United States do this, and they haven't done it. Other people have demanded that the North Vietnamese withdraw beyond their borders, and they haven't done it either.

Trudeau who arrived in New Zealand Tuesday at the start of his six-nation Asian tour, was greeted outside the university by a small group of polite placard-bearing students.

Trudeau, who displayed an easy control over his questioners, also said Canada believes negotiations for the recognition of China will be successful.

Campus Strikes Hit 266 Colleges in U.S.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Student strikes and demonstrations have continued to surge and subside on the campuses in the United States. At the University of South Carolina, 100 persons were arrested during student-police clashes.

The arrests Tuesday night at the 13,000-student campus in Columbia, S.C., were made after students threw bottles, bricks and firecrackers at city and state police, backed by troops, who were imposing a 9 p.m. curfew.

Law enforcement officials used tear gas and clubbed several students. Two soldiers suffered minor injuries.

The student strike information centre at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., reported today that 266 colleges and universities were on strikes of indefinite length.

Strikes at many of the 1,500 four-year colleges and at other educational institutions began last week to protest Nixon's decision to send American combat troops into Cambodia and the deaths of four Kent State University students shot as National Guard troops attempted to quell a disorder.

Unofficial student strikes and protests have continued on many campuses with impacts of varying degrees.

BANS GASOLINE SALES

Michigan Gov. William Milliken declared a state of emergency in Ypsilanti following two days of disorders by Eastern Michigan University students. The emergency order sets a curfew and prohibits the local sale of gasoline in containers. The college has 14,500 students.

Striking students engaged in a variety of anti-war activity, including demonstrations, leafletting, lobbying, withdrawing money from banks, urging workers to strike for peace and cashing in U.S. savings bonds.

The New Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam announced in Washington that soldiers at 22 U.S. military bases will stage anti-war demonstrations this weekend to coincide with Armed Forces Day Saturday. The announcement said organizations at 43 military installations would participate.

In New York city, the City-Wide Work Stoppage Committee, an organization of students and workers set up recently to promote a general labor strike against the war, said 300 workers met with an equal number of students to discuss strikes for peace.

"Everyone at the meeting was for a general strike to demand immediate withdrawal from Southeast Asia," a committee spokesman said. "The question is when."

The Ohio National Guard disclosed what it suggested was new evidence of sniper fire at Kent State at the time the students were killed May 4. Guard spokesmen have maintained that troops opened fire after a sniper began shooting.

The guard spokesman said nearby construction workers heard a shot before the killings. He also said a .32-calibre revolver had been found in a nearby river.

Gravel Pit Favoritism Denied

Resources Minister Ray Williston today denied a charge of favoritism in the awarding of a gravel contract to Delta Rock Ltd. May 8.

The charge was made Tuesday by Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver-East) who said taxpayers suffered because no free bidding was allowed for the 185-acre gravel site at Treat Creek on Jervis Inlet.

Williston said the reason Delta Rock Ltd. didn't have to put up a certified cheque for $692,174 like the others wishing to bid, was that the company owned the facilities already located on the site.

These include an office building, two bunkhouses, two powerhouses, a wharf, water supply and sewer system and seven conveyors and a rock crusher.

The minister explained that Delta Rock Ltd. had moved in and begun a gravel operation under a deal with a logging company which had a special use permit for logging only.

FOR LOGGING ROADS

He said the initial use of gravel on the property was understood to be for logging roads only, but before the government could move in, a gravel pit was in operation and the facilities installed.

Since Delta Rock owned the facilities, it was decided to get an appraisal on their value and require other biders for the gravel rights to in effect buy them if they wanted the gravel rights.

Macdonald charged that the cash requirement effectively discouraged other bidders, leaving Delta Rock free to bid the minimum amount.

"Now Delta Rock is rewarded for making off with the gravel before the public auction by being set up as the only possible bidder," Macdonald said.

"This is straight out of Gilbert and Sullivan," he said.

Williston said the appraisal was a lower value than might have been put on the assets because factors such as the time invested by the company in site development were not allowed as part of the value.

Williston rejected Macdonald's call for a public inquiry into the matter, saying all the facts are now available to the public.

Ambassador To Visit

Mohamed Choueri, Egypt's ambassador to Canada, will begin an official visit to Western Canada when he arrives in Victoria Tuesday, May 27.

Choueri will stay at the Empress until his departure May 29.

The ambassador will visit Premier Bennett and Lt.-Gov. John Nicholson. During his tour, Choueri will discuss the Middle East conflict from an Arab viewpoint.

He will also spend time in Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton and Winnipeg before returning to Ottawa June 5.

. . . OLYMPIC GAMES

Minister Without Portfolio Grace McCarthy was distraught.

". . . and we so much thought we had it won," she said.

"It's a long way to come for such a big disappointment," she added.

Other members of the Garibaldi team echoed similar sentiments. President Jean Brusset said, "I think we should try again, but for me another four years is a long time."

Vice-president Sid Young said he wasn't about to take "no" as a final answer.

"We know we did a good job, we know we couldn't have done any better. The Montreal decision beat us. Nothing else."

Father Bauer was more critical of the committee than he was of the defeat for Garibaldi.

"A most incredible decision," he said of Denver's victory. "We had the backing of all the winter sports federations. They didn't and they won."

In that regard there was a suggestion later that the winter federations might challenge the IOC decision. But this was considered highly unlikely although feelings were running high.

Denver, it was implied, had won because of Olympic politics. This was appeasement because LA had lost.

CHEQUES DELIVERED

A Victoria post office spokesman today confirmed reports that old age pension cheques for June have been received early and are being delivered.

Old age pension, youth and family allowance cheques for May were also received early by the post office and delivered last week.

The cheques are normally not delivered until June 28. Ken Darlington, president of the Victoria local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said this morning early delivery of the cheques indicates the government expects a strike.

PREPARED

He repeated his union's position that members are prepared to make emergency deliveries of pension, youth and family allowance cheques should a strike occur.

Darlington said negotiations between the government and postal workers unions have been resumed, but a strike vote is still set for Tuesday, May 19.

Postal information officer in Victoria Ken Stofer said he did not know whether June's family and youth allowance cheques would be received early. He would not comment on whether early delivery of pension cheques indicates the government is expecting a strike.

Melvin Laird said in Washington earlier that several thousand American troops already had been withdrawn from Cambodia.

Sources said the 9th Division unit had secured Ba Thu, about a mile inside Cambodia, after the North Vietnamese base area had been seized by South Vietnamese. U.S. Losses during the week of occupation were reported as four killed and 20 wounded.

The U.S. command said today that all U.S. losses in Cambodia totalled 101 killed and 427 wounded.

Official sources have said 14,000 to 16,000 U.S. troops and 18,000 to 20,000 South Vietnamese troops are operating inside Cambodia on more than a dozen fronts on both sides of the Mekong River.

Headquarters said American and South Vietnamese forces have killed more than 6,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops and seized nearly 10,000 weapons and hundreds of tons of ammunition in Cambodia since the drive began two weeks ago.

In action inside Cambodia Tuesday, a column of South Vietnamese tanks pushing North from Svay Rieng met resistance in the tow of Kompong Trach on Route 24, about 80 miles northwest of Saigon.

The South Vietnamese called in air strikes. Several buildings were destroyed or damaged, field reports said.

The South Vietnamese drove the Communist forces from Kompong Trach today and joined up with South Vietnamese marines who had been fighting along the Mekong River.

Douglas Park Bike Climb Damaged

Considerable ground damage has been done in the motorcycle climb area on the south slope of Mount Douglas Park in Saanich, it was reported today.

Saanich Ald. William Noel said some trails have been badly cut up in wet weather.

Noel, chairman of the Victoria-Saanich Mount Douglas Park Committee, said the damage will be "thoroughly investigated" and a meeting will be held of the committee within a few weeks.

Victoria is involved in the committee because the 365-acre park is held in trust by the city. Maintenance costs are split evenly between Saanich and the city.

HILL CLIMB

Noel said motorcycle hill climbs have been permitted on the south slope for nearly 50 years — the first one was held Boxing Day, 1920.

The current problem, he said, is aggravated by the popularity and increasing use of trail bikes — modified motorcycles with high crankcases.

"From preliminary discussion with officials we expect to receive the full co-operation from organized motorcycle clubs and it is hoped the large number of individual riders will respect privileges now enjoyed," he said.

Many motorcyclists remove mufflers which, Noel said, is not permitted even off a highway.

Mount Douglas was a large park and "with due care and consideration of others should be enjoyed by all without enforcement of unnecessary restrictions," he said.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Most areas in southern B.C. were free of frost overnight with only Williams Lake and Cranbrook reporting freezing or near freezing temperatures. Showers persisted in a few regions.

Cloud cover will be quite variable today with a few showers persisting along the coast and afternoon showers or thundershowers developing in the interior.

The next Pacific disturbance will bring rain to the exposed coast late tomorrow. A decrease in shower activity and cloud cover is expected in most other regions.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

More people get sunstrokes than you would think. As long as we insist on going out in the heat of the day when the sun is shining fiercely from overhead, we can get too much sun. When that happens, the victim suffers what is known as a sunstroke.

Desert travellers and explorers in Africa and the jungles of South America aren't the only people who get sunstroke. Long-distance runners, golfers, hikers, bricklayers and even people in a boat or a canoe out on a lake can get a sunstroke.

When the wonderful thermostat inside the brain signals changes to the body when the buildup of body heat is too great blows out and the body can't change its temperature, the victims is in danger from sunstroke. People die from it, too.

Crisis Keeps Risky Homes

By DON VIPOND

The Greater Victorian Metropolitan Board of Health debated its paradoxical position on private hospitals again Tuesday.

On the one hand, the board's staff has found some hospitals so inadequate they should be closed down. On the other, the shortage of beds for chronic patients, elderly for the most part, is so severe the board has urged the provincial government to extend some private hospitals' interim operating permits.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, the senior medical health officer, repeated warnings he made six months ago — some local private hospitals are "quite dangerous" and should be shut down as soon as there is somewhere else for their patients.

He sid not specify which of the 17 private hospitals in the area or how many should be closed. But he did say his staff's annual inspections showed one of them should have been shut down six years ago.

Another source said inspections showed eight are substandard.

Pressed by Victoria Ald. Tom Christie to specify what is wrong with the inadequate hospitals, Whitbread said they are dangerous from a sanitation, accident and care-of-patient point of view.

Another source said inspections showed eight are substandard.

Pressed by Victoria Ald. Tom Christies to specify what is wrong with the inadequate hospitals, Whitebread said they are dangerous from a sanitation, accident and care-of-patient point of view.

"They are not able to give the kind of eare these patients should get."

Many of the private hospitals were old homes converted at a time when there were no standards for private hospitals, said Elwood Gropp, the board's director of sanitation services.

Now they don't meet standards established by the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

Dr. Donald Shorting, who represents the Greater Victoria school board, said he sees a further backup of chronic care patients into acute care hospitals because of the shortage of accommodation for the long-term patients.

There are people in the acute hospitals fit for discharge six months ago but still there because there is nowhere else to put them, he said.

Shorting said the health board must continue to exert pressure towards breaking the "stall" that is delaying construction of more hospital beds.

The board asked Whitbread to conduct a survey showing the number of patients in sub-standard private hospitals, how many chronic care patients are occupying the more expensive acute care beds, how many people are waiting admittance to private hospitals and the state of boarding home accommodation which provides a degree of nursing care.

Deluge Gun Readied in Harbor Blaze Battle

Four Firemen Hurt In Dockside Fire

Four city firemen were injured when flames destroyed a warehouse alongside Victoria's vulnerable Inner Harbor Tuesday evening.

Firemen turned out again early today to battle a house fire on Jackson Street which caused about $10,000 damage and was preceeded by a mystery explosion.

Fire Chief Eric Simmons said today both fires are still under investigation and declined comment on the possibility of arson. Several recent weekend fires have been blamed on arsonists.

WAREHOUSE

The harbor fire destroyed an almost empty building on Songhees Road alongside a grocery store called The Warehouse. Both are owned by businessman Henry Eng who said today he had not estimated the loss.

The only material in the burned-out building was some waxed cardboard cartons. Eng said the warehouse had not been used for several years. He had planned to convert it to a restaurant this year and wasn't sure if it was insured.

Three pumper and two aerial trucks with a crew of 20 men turned out for the alarm, reported by an employee of The Warehouse shortly after 6 p.m.

30 FEET

Flames jumped 30 feet above the building at the height of the fire and dense brown smoke swept east across the Inner Harbor as far as Oak Bay. It took about three hours to douse.

The injured:

Acting Capt. Edward Ball, who suffered a spike wound in the foot, returned to the fire after treatment.

Lt. Roy Boothroyd, hot on the back by a falling metal plate, he was X-rayed at hospital and sent home.

Fireman Ross Cameron, who suffered a crushed hand when it got jammed between a hose and a wall, was treated and released.

Fireman Don Irish, whose hand was burned by scalding water running off the burning building, was treated and released.

Striking towboat officers picketing nearby Island Tug and Barge were quick to keep a promise of help in an emergency. They manned the company's fireboat and hosed vehicles parked near the burning building.

EVACUATION

No one was injured in the fire at 3112 Jackson which broke out about 2:30 a.m. but tenant Mrs. Emily McMaster, her daughter, Koma, 2, and three visitors were forced to evacuate the house.

Neighbors reported an explosion when the fire started. When firemen arrived the empty carport and roof of the house were ablaze. Most of the damage was caused by smoke.

Drug Centre Plan Same as Mayor's

The recently-opened Victoria Drug Dependency Centre has announced plans for a youth drop-in centre, similar in concept to the one proposed Monday by Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock.

Haddock said Monday he would like to see such a centre included as an integral part of any civic complex or convention centre built in the city. He said he wanted the young people of Victoria to submit their ideas as to what a youth drop-in centre should include.

The executive director of the drug centre, Bill Ogston said today his organization is in complete agreement with the mayor's concept and said that their youth centre would operate independently of the drug centre itself.

He said the drop-in centre would be located in space above the drug centre's offices at 1290 Gladstone with an area of 5,000 square feet. The estimated cost of redecorating the second storey and setting up the youth centre would be about $8,500, he said.

"What we need now is young people to come down and plan, with us, how this thing can be fully utilized. The program of the youth centre would be decided upon by a council of young people."

Some of the things Ogston would like to see include dances with local rock bands, coffee house activities, guitar lessons and a place where the kids can just sit around and talk.

"The functions, though, would be decided upon by the kids themselves, who would also be responsible for policing the place and running the canteen facilities."

Ogston said he has spoken to City Hall officials about the idea and said they were enthusiastic.

All Boats May Run Under Sun

Powerboats of any capacity may use Elk, Beaver and Prospect lakes in Saanich at any time between sunrise and sunset, Saanich Ald. William Noel said today.

The restriction, added Noel who is chairman of parks and outdoor recreation committee, is that in designated areas — mainly shoreline and swimming parts — all power boats must not exceed five miles an hour.

Noel said he made a mistake Monday when he said boats with engines under 10 horsepower may use the lakes between sunrise and 10 a.m. and over 10 horsepower between 10 a.m. and sunset.

Bay Pavilion To Re-Open

Royal Jubilee Hospital plans on transferring the first patients into the renovated Bay Pavilion next Tuesday, a spokesman said today.

The pavilion is the hospitals's former psychiatric wing but has been empty since the Eric Martin Institute of psychiatry opened early this year.

The pavilion will now be used in part to house convalescing patients who no longer need the more expensive services surrounding acute care beds. The change will increase the hospital's capacity by 22 beds.

Expropriation Urged For Belleville Impasse

By JIM HUME

Ald. Ove Witt wants Victoria city council to use its powers of expropriation and go ahead and build the Belleville Street extension between Blanshard and Vancouver.

Plans for the road link, designed to siphon heavy James Bay traffic off Government and Douglas during rush hours, have been sidelined for several months because city, hospital and provincial government officials have been unable to reach agreement.

NO EXTENSION

Health minister Ralph Loffmark says he will not permit the extension to divide the new hospital site.

Consulting architects have stated that they can design a hospital around the road link without exorbitant costs. And they have pointed out that a road must exist in the middle of the site either as the Belleville extension or as a service road.

CITY REPLY

To date, Loffmark has remained adamant: Plans for a new hospital will remain shelved until the city agrees to re-route highway plans around the proposed hospital site.

The city's reply is that such a rerouting would cost $2 million and create traffic problems rather than solve them.

Witt says the minister could be forced into decisive action one way or the other if the city took a strong line on expropriation.

"The city has the power to take that portion of property on what is now the site of a private school," Witt said this morning. "I think we should expropriate that property right now, push the road through and let hospital officials and the minister adapt themselves to the facts of life."

NO CONTROL

Loffmark has the power to prevent expropriation proceedings on the hospital side of the proposed extension, but has no control over the St. Ann's Academy property.

"The Sisters of St. Ann must have had the Belleville Street extension in mind when they granted the city an easement to install underground services," Witt said. "All the experts tell us the extension is feasible and would create no major problems.

"I say let's get on with the job."

City manager Dennis Young said the city is well aware of its powers of expropriation but was always reluctant to use that power.

"It has always been our policy to sit down and try to negotiate agreement rather than just move in," Young said.

Young said any decision on expropriation would have to be made by city council.

"In the past moves to expropriate property have always been viewed with extreme concern," Young said. "It's an action council takes rarely and with great reluctance."

Freeway to Nowhere May Go Somewhere

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Victoria's freeway to nowhere may some day go somewhere.

That day, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis told a public meeting Tuesday night, will be decided by the provincial government.

He had been asked, at the meeting organized by Saanich Chamber of Commerce at Doncaster Elementary School, when some action will be taken to connect Blanshard Street in Victoria with Douglas Street.

NOT THE CASE

The city-built freeway now ends at the Saanich-Victoria boundary behind Mayfair shopping centre.

Curtis said some people think it was Saanich which failed to connect the last part with Douglas Street but this was not the case.

In a municipal district, such as Saanich, the provincial government is responsible for constructing certain highways. This was not the case for cities, such as Victoria.

PURELY GUESS

The provincial government had "not seen fit" so far to pay for the construction of a link. But while Saanich was "pretty upset about it," the decision was taken at a high level some time ago.

The questioner then asked Curtis when the provincial government will take action.

"Any answer I would give would be purely a guess," he replied.

But he believed — and he emphasized it was only a belief — that the province recognized this problem and that it could not continue.

Fifty persons attended the meeting which lasted just over two hours. Most of the questions had been answered publicly at various times in the past.

NO DECISION

They were told no decision has been made, and that a committee is to be established shortly — including residents — to go into this. The 1967 recreation referendum provided $260,000 for a "community centre" at the property but did not spell out what it would contain.

School Board Appoints 10 Principals in Area

Greater Victoria school board today announced appointment of 10 principals, including two newcomers to district schools.

David Voth, principal of Gordon Head Junior for the past year, will become principal of Oak Bay Senior, succeeding John Wallace who retired this spring because of ill health.

FROM UVIC

Claude Campbell, now superintendent of the North Island and Ocean Falls districts, will come in as principal of Cedar Hill Junior (the present Gordon Head Junior to be relocated next fall in the Mount Douglas building). Campbell is a former Uvic Education faculty member.

Norman Hoadley, currently principal of an elementary-secondary school in Chetwynd, will become principal of Highrock Junior (the present Esquimalt junior).

Elementary appointments:

Leonard Lang, now George Jay vice-principal, will take over Bank Street Elementary.

Bank Street principal D. G. Henderson will transfer to Hillcrest Elementary.

Hillcrest incumbent Wilfred Durrant transfers to Craigflower.

Wilbur Chater, Craigflower principal for 11 years, is retiring.

OFFICES CLOSE FOR HOLIDAY

The provincial government offices will be closed for observance of the Queen's birthday and the Victoria Day holiday, Monday.

The Provincial Museum will be open to the public during the holiday weekend as follows: Saturday from 10:00 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.; Sunday from 1:00 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Monday from 10:00 a.m. to 8:30 p.m.

COMMUNITY COUNCIL ISSUES DIRECTORY

The Community Council of Greater Victoria has issued a revised community services directory containing a complete list of public and private health and welfare, youth and recreation agencies in the capital region.

Information includes address, phone number, office hours, title of chief executive, area served, source of funds and a summary of services provided.

"Every effort has been made to ensure that the directory is as comprehensive and as accurate as possible," said Community Council director Garth Homer.

Copies may be ordered from the Community Council, No. 307, 895 Fort, for $1.50 each.

Arthur Mayse . . .

IF AGE IS RELATIVE, the gentle Oblate Father who lay dying in a Bulkeley Valley hospital was a young man still. He had merely outlived his body, a machine grown old which had failed him all of a piece.

He had spent much of his life among Indians, and fought hard to better their condition. Life had spared him no time for aging, and he made it plain that he regarded death as no more than in interruption of his work.

A man with his quality of spirit isn't easily forgotten. I remembered him years later, when a chronologically young man who was his extreme opposite fell to talking about his chief concern in life.

His job didn't interest him. He did what he was told, and took no chances that could have gained him promotion but might also have exposed him to blame. But he entertained a dream, and if a conversation lasted long enough, he would get around to it. His sights were set on a distant target: the day when he would retire from the company on pension.

When I met this eager candidate for retirement, he was in his early twenties. A few years later, on another job in a different city, I ran into a friend who had worked in that office.

We had a good deal of catching up to do. Sure, Al the dogman still kept beagles, and had surrounded himself with quite a little pack. Bert had gone to Ottawa, and so on through the list.

Finally I asked about Gene, who lived for his pension. Fate, or perhaps the jealous gods had come between him and his plan. He had died in a traffic crackup a couple of years earlier.

I suppose a moral lurks there, for anyone diligent enough to search it out. But I've never bothered to do so, and will only suggest that youth and age are delusive terms at best.

We tend to bracket ourselves into one category or the other, with a third state called middle age sandwiched between.

This arbitrary labelling provides convenient handles for the stages of man. I suppose we need them; but they make for rigidity and brittleness where none should exist.

I have never been able to define those terms satisfactorily, and it amuses me to note that the angry young American who attempted a definition of sorts merely succeeded in manufacturing a future awkwardness for himself.

"You can't trust anyone over 30," he declared from a stance in his twenties.

He is now 30, and I doubt that he is more or less trustworthy than he was when he framed that catchy epigram.

Trustworthiness, like wisdom or the lack of it, is confined to no one human category. Also, we live in an age that is tough on the easy definition and the sweeping generality.

A man is free as ever to state his beliefs. But if he declares them as absolutes, he can expect to be challenged on them.

This can be dreadfully hard on those who have fallen victim to the fossilization that the Oblate Father escaped, but to which the yearner after retirement and pension fell victim.

It is this lack of viability in United States' President Richard Nixon that defeats him even where his intent is good.

He came to the presidency a man set in a mould. His tragedy is rooted in his inability to comprehend what so many of his countrymen are trying to bring home to him.

There is nothing in the reports of his predawn visit among protesters gathered at Lincoln memorial to indicate that he brought with him a will to understand the deeply moral urgency which had fetched them there. What sticks in my mind is that when he learned some were from California, he made small-talk about surfing.

. . . As if they were children, and himself a determinedly indulgent grandfather!

An accumulation of years doesn't necessarily bring wisdom. This is another of the comfortable platitudes that will no longer bear leaning upon. What the years should bring is a willingness to re-examine even long-held convictions.

I have never felt that inward growth is the prerogative of any age group. The men and women I most admire are still growing, still appraising, still capable of accepting change and weighing the new on merit rather than against prejudice.

What marks them out is a quality easier to feel than to define. Perhaps a kind of agelessness.

Prairies Can Expect Ottawa Help In Solving Major Regional Problems

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — The Prairies have a right to expect Ottawa to make a major contribution to solving regional problems, Regional Expansion Minister Jean Marchand said Tuesday.

The federal cabinet minister was speaking at a banquet during the One Prairie Province conference sponsored by the Lethbridge Herald and the University of Lethbridge.

He declined comment on the one-province proposal, but said a nation will not survive unless all its parts can see their problems and their solutions in a national context.

And he called on Prairie dwellers to reject parochialism in favor of regional co-operation and nationalism.

His address ended the third day of the four-day conference, which is discussing the possibility of merging Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta.

Earlier, three economists expressed qualified support of the merger while one, Ralph Hedlin of Toronto, said other measures were preferable.

CONSIDER OTHER WAYS

He said if Western Canada does not like Ottawa's economic policies it should prepare some alternatives, perhaps through a beefed-up Prairie economic council and through a new "major Prairie policy foundation."

Mr. Hedlin also suggested the Senate should be replaced with an elected body which would act as a voice for regions and could be restricted to solely economic matters.

But T. K. Shoyama, assistant federal deputy minister of finance, said the proposed merger could provide positive economic gains for the area and at a national level.

"Once consolidated, the overall provincial finance system would be of major proportions by Canadian standards and provide a basis for stimulus to economic advance."

Dr. Stephen Peitchinis, a University of Calgary economist, said the government of one large Prairie province probably could influence the federal government's external trade policy much more than the existing three provinces can.

Eric Hanson, a University of Alberta economics professor, said union would provide a much-needed opportunity to revamp local government structures.

"And a united Prairie province could give the Prairie region a more effective voice in the national affairs than now is the case."

Mr. Marchand said the legal form is not so important.

"I do urge you in the policies you support to be Prairie regionalists and Canadian nationalists."

Poor Quality of Quebec French May Decide the Language's Fate

MONTREAL (CP) — The poor quality of French spoken in Quebec may be the real threat to the language's survival in Canada, a member of the Gendron commission inquiring into the status of French in the province said Tuesday.

Mrs. Madeleine Royon-Ferland made her statement in a debate with a French-speaking youth who had just submitted an error-filled brief.

"I can see by your brief that your French is weak, your vocabulary and your grammar both poor," Mrs. Royon-Ferland told Gaetan Couturier, a 19-year-old junior college student.

"And yet you seem content with your language."

"It's my language," Mr. Couturier replied. "It's the way I express myself. Maybe it could be better."

In his brief the student called for the establishment of French as the only official language in Quebec and demanded an end to what he called the privileged position of the English-speaking minority.

DEFENDS GRAMMAR

In defending his grammar, he told the commission his working class background had taught him the "joual of the people of Quebec", not the precise international French of the educated classes. (Joual is a common expression for bad French.)

"That's no excuse," Mrs. Royon-Ferland snapped back. "You've had everything you need to develop your language, you have schools and libraries, everything.

"If that is the kind of unilingualism you want, how can you expect French to survive in Quebec?"

Mr. Couturier protested that "without a unilingual policy we will be assimilated by the English."

Mrs. Royon-Ferland replied that "if you can't speak French properly it won't be difficult to assimilate you. If we speak French like you the language will certainly die."

When Mr. Couturier suggested that the commission is failing to communicate with "the mass of the Quebec population," Chairman Jean Denis Gendron said:

"What is the population? It's just the people, some educated some not, and we try to communicate with them all and now we're trying to communicate with you."

BLAMES SCHOOLS

Commissioner Aime Gagne then said: "What we want to know is why your French is poor."

Jean Belanger, who helped Mr. Couturier prepare his brief, blamed schools.

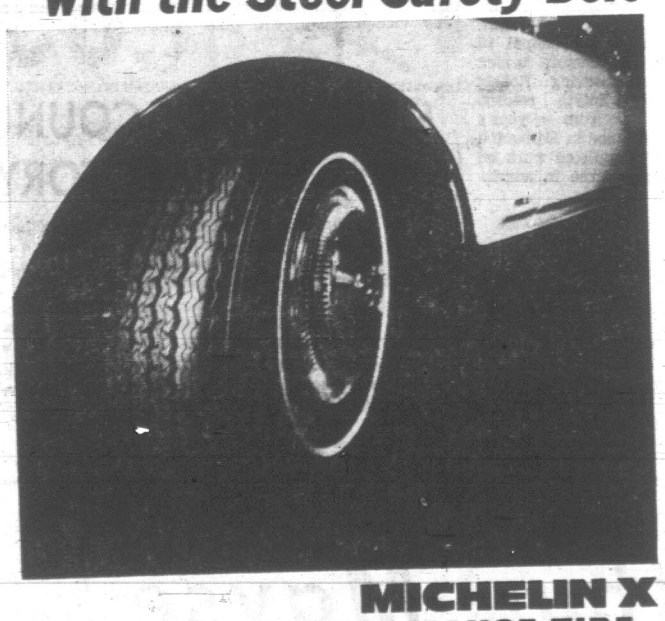

"The vast majority of Quebec students speak joual," Mr. Boulanger said, "but most of them want to improve."

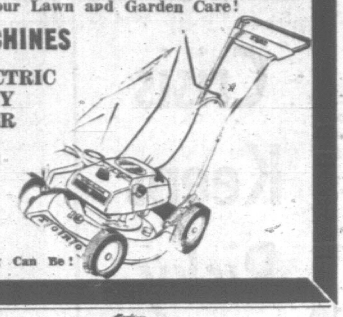

Another brief warned that a unilingual Quebec would cut off the province from the vast flow of technical data which pours into the province every day from the U.S. and the rest of Canada.

Casual Users of Marijuana 'Healthy, Normal People'

By STUART L. AUERBACH

SAN FRANCISCO (WP) — Pot smokers aren't all alike, a team of Boston psychiatrists reported here this week.

The team found vast differences in the social adjustment, mental health and working abilities between casual smokers of marijuana and chronic users even though they all were of the same age, educational level, racial distribution, social class.

"Casual smokers," the psychiatrists said, use marijuana once a week or less and make up "the great majority" of pot users.

OTHER DRUGS

They are generally healthy individuals who smoke marijuana becasue of its "pleasurable effects." They have "good to excellent" work habits, normal relations with friends and few sexual hangups. Except for alcohol, they rarely use other drugs.

Heavy users, on the other hand, smoke marijuana at least once a day. Besides pleasure, they say pot gives them "enhanced insight, the wish for union with some cosmic force and a sense of harmony."

They have all experimented widely with drugs; half of them have taken at least 25 LSD trips. Most of them have troubles at their jobs and they work at menial or mechanical tasks below their intellectual ability. They have poor relations with friends and sexual problems.

PSYCHIATRIC

Oddly enough, the psychiatrists found, none of the 12 casual users or the 12 heavy users of marijuana have ever used heroin, rejecting a widely-held law enforcement theory that marijuana smoking leads to heroin addiction. Alcohol was the first drug that all 24 persons used.

The psychiatrists — Drs. Steven M. Mirin, Leo M. Shapiro, Roger E. Meyer and Richard C. Pillard—concluded that personality defects make some people take drugs more often and switch from one drug to another.

"One wonders," the psychiatrists said, "whether the inability to get close to people or an escape from feelings of loneliness has provided the impetus for repetitive drug use."

The heavy drug users also show increased hostility — possibly because they are angry when psychiatrists question them about work and sexual and social adjustment.

Adding weight to the Boston report was a study released here about marijuana use at the University of Vermont.

DEEP PROBLEMS

It found that students who suffered personality disturbances from drugs were emotionally unstable before using them.

It also found that a student who uses marijuana only "has an intact personality and is grappling with a social problem." He is not different from non-users on the campus.

Multiple drug users, however, have deeper psychological problems.

Another study reported here by Dr. Lester Grinspoon of Harvard found possible medical uses for marijuana. This backs the conclusions reached in top-secret army biological warfare research at the Edgewood Md. Arsenal as long as 10 years ago, but not declassified until recently.

Grinspoon advanced the possibility that smoking marijuana may in fact protect some from serious mental illness by dulling "the impact of unbearable anxiety or an overwhelming reality."

He suggested that marijuana might be useful in treating some narcotic withdrawal symptoms, melancholia, insomnia, childbirth psychosis and migraine headaches.

"The clearest risk of the use of marijuana in this country," he concluded, is that of conviction of a felony or misdemeanor with its attendant permanent social and career damage."

Girl Arsonist Remanded

She was charged with arson after Cyril Canute's house on Tzouhalem Road was destroyed by fire late Saturday night.

Alberta Gas

The Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd. had net income of $1.94 million or 59 cents a share in the first quarter of 1970 compared with $1.87 million or 65 cents a share for the same period in 1969.

President J. C. Mahaffy said the decline in earnings a share was due to increased interest costs and an increase in the number of shares outstanding.

Included in net income was a gain of $169,000 on the purchase of first mortgage bonds and secured debentures for sinking fund purposes. Natural gas volume increased 21 per cent.

Killarney

The initial diamond drill hole on Marysville, N.B., property of Killarney Oil and Gas Development Co. Ltd. encountered a coal bearing zone at 1,145 feet and returned a total of 30 inches of bituminous coal at this depth.

The hole was drilled about 500 feet west of an oil test well which found the coal zone at 1,065 feet and was drilled from a site at an elevation of 78 feet higher than the test well.

Ross Loring, general manager of Killarney Oil and Gas said it appears the hole represents the outlining wall of a coal bed and that a major formation lies in the property. A second test hole is planned.

Peyto

Peyto Oils Ltd. of Calgary has made a bid to obtain control of Giant Reef Petroleums Ltd. of Vancouver.

Peyto has offered to exchange one Peyto share for 3¾ shares of Giant Reef.

Giant Reef directors have recommended that shareholders accept the offer, good until May 25 and subject to the condition that not less than 51 per cent of the outstanding shares of Giant Reef are tendered.

Superior

Canadian Superior Oil Ltd. reports a net loss of $160,063 or two cents a share in the first quarter of 1970, compared with net income of $507,301 or six cents a share in the first three months of 1969.

Gross operating income was $9.57 million compared with $9.3 million.

President A. E. Feldmeyer said in an interim report crude oil revenues increased 22 per cent and condensate and liquid petroleum revenues were up 15 per cent, but a continuing erosion of prices and lower exports reduced sulphur revenues by 78 per cent.

Hollinger

Hollinger Mines Ltd. net profit fell more than $2 million because of a mid-season iron ore strike, which also affected subsidiary Labrador Mining and Exploration Co. Ltd. earnings.

President A. L. Fairley Jr., expected improved earnings for both Labrador and Iron Ore Co. of Canada Ltd. in the 1970 season, perhaps equal to the record levels of 1968.

Hesa id 1969 profit was $9.9 million ($2.01 per share) compared with $12.3 million $2.50) in 1968.

Fairley also predicted white paper tax proposals, if adopted, will drive mining expansion from Canada to competing countries.

Labrador

Labrador Mining and Exploration Company Ltd had 1969 earnings of $6.9 million or $2.08 a share compared with $7.9 million or $2.38 a share in 1968.

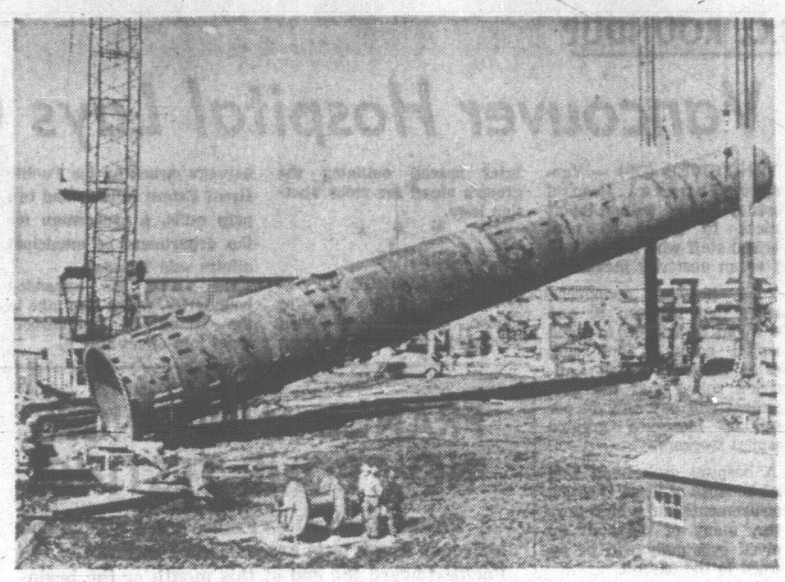

President A. L. Fairley attributed the decline to a strike in the Labrador iron ore fields last year which halted production for more than three months.

Neonex

Neonex International Ltd. reports consolidated net earnings of $127,000 for the first quarter of 1970, compared with $438,000 for the same period in 1969.

Sales figures for the first three months of 1970 were $32.9 million, an increase of 8 per cent over sales of $30.46 million for the previous year. Earnings per share amounted to two cents this year with reported earnings in 1969 of seven cents.

The company said the drop in net earnings for the first quarter is primarily attributed to "a reduction in sales and one time costs."

GIANT 280-ton isostripper, 166 feet long and 15 feet in diameter, is raised by two "gin poles" in process area of Gulf Oil Canada's $75 million Edmonton refinery by the general contractor Canadian Betchtel Ltd. As part of the alkylation unit, one of the largest of its type to be built in North America, this vessel will separate alkylate, a high octane gasoline blending component, form butanes. When the 80,000-barrel-a-day refinery goes on stream in mid-1971, it will largely replace an existing 14,000-barrel-per-day plant.

Few Crumbs of Comfort In Latest Price Index

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer prices moved up last month by the biggest spurt since last November, but there were some crumbs of comfort for anti-inflation campaigners.

The consumer price index, a measure of retail rates calculated from a base of 100 points for 1961 prices, moved ahead to 129.7 points in April from 128.9 in March, Dominion Burueau of Statistics reported Tuesday.

The index shows in rough form that goods and services valued at $10 in 1961 had moved up in price to $12.89 in March and $12.97 last month. A year ago the price was $12.46.

Most components of the index contributed to the April increase, notably fruit, vegetables, mortgages, men's wear and dental fees.

In percentage terms, the April increase amounted to six-tenths of one per cent. That was the biggest monthly advance since the index rose at the same rate last November.

FLICKER OF HOPE

However, there are flickers of evidence among the statistics to suggest that the trend of price inflation is less rapid than it has been.

April prices generally are subject to an extra seasonal push, government economists say. Even at that, the percentage advance last month is only about half as strong as it was in April, 1969, about the same as it was in the previous April and less than in April, 1967.

Further, the increase in the index since April of last year is 4.1 per cent, the lowest year-to-year advance in any month since early in 1969.

The increase of 1.4 per cent since the beginning of this year is less severe than the 1.8-per-cent advances recorded both in the equivalent stretch of 1969 and in the middle of last year.

Indexes for May and June should show whether underlying signs of a slowdown in retail price inflation are genuine.

The slight deceleration indicated by the 4.1-per-cent yearly advance in April remains well ahead of the average annual increase of about 3.2 per cent since the base index year of 1961.

Increased Gas Exports To U.S. Given Approval

VANCOUVER (CP) — American regulatory authorities have approved import of up to 800,000,000 cubic feet a day of British Columbia natural gas, Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. announced Tuesday.

The authorization by the U.S. federal power commission, subject to approval by the National Energy Board, would cancel all previous export contracts and substitute for them a new contract providing for increased prices and revenue to Westcoast.

The U.S. permit authorizes Westcoast and El Paso Natural Gas Co. to carry out an agreement signed last October involving a 20-year export contract value at $91,000,000 a year.

Previous export contracts called for exports worth approximately $500,000,000.

Hearings before the NEB in Ottawa to implement the contract have already been conducted by Westcoast.

If approval is given, Westcoast said it will embark on a $135,000,000 construction program that will include 234 miles of 36-inch loops and new compressor horsepower.

TO EXPAND PLANT

It also calls for additions to its Fort Nelson, B.C., processing plant and construction of a 110-mile pipeline from Fort Nelson to the Northwest Territories.

The new sales agreement is the largest in Westcoast history. Currently, the company has authorization for export of 500,000,000 cubic feet a day under two previous contracts.

Weighted average price per thousand cubic feet now is 27.4 cents. Under the new agreement, the border price would be 32.6 cents in 1971 and rise to 35.01 cents in 1973, with further increases at five-year intervals.

The company's planned construction program would enable it to export 575,000,000 cubic feet a day by November, 725,000,000 by November 1971 and 800,000,000 by Nobember, 1972.

Boeing Loses Bid For Space Craft

SEATTLE (AP) — The Boeing Co. has lost out in its bid to build a space shuttle craft which is expected to be a big part of the major American manned spaceflight program for many years.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration notified members of Washington's congressional delegation Tuesday that finalists in the competition will be the McDonnell Douglas Corp., St. Louis, and North American Rockwell Corp., Downey, Calif.

Boeing, which had teamed with Lockheed on the project, and Grumman Arospace were eliminated in the competition for the next phase of the shuttle program.

McDonnell Douglas and North American Rockwell each was awarded 11-month contracts of about $8,000,000 for preliminary design studies of the space transportation system.

The space shuttle, a reusable craft to carry passengers to and from orbiting space stations, had been a major new business goal of Boeing's aerospace group. The system, planned to go into operation before 1980, is expected to involve more than $10,000,000,000.

The preliminary design studies will involve only limited, specialized manpower, so loss of the space shuttle will have no immediate major impact on Boeing empoyment. But officials said if Boeing had been the eventual winner the long-term manpower requirements would have been considerable.

Ginter Seeks To Gain Control Of Wine Company

KELOWNA (CP) — The president of Mission Hill Wines Ltd. announced Tuesday that Prince George industrialist Ben Ginter has made a proposal to purchase controlling interest in the wine company.

W. W. Stewart said if the proposal is carried through Ginter's Uncle Ben's Tartan Holdings Ltd. would assume controlling interest of Mission Hill, which would merge with Uncle Ben's Tartan Breweries.

Stewart said the proposal has been unanimously recommended to the shareholders by the directors of Mission Hill, which commenced operations at its plant in nearby Westbank in 1966.

Mission Hill is in need of substantial additional financing, Mr. Stewart said, and adequate additional funds will be made available to the company if the proposal is carried out.

Profile: what kind of man buys a car with an ornament like this?

IT is very nearly impossible to fit the Mercedes-Benz owner within a particular socio economic group. He may be a school teacher, or a stock-broker. But when it comes to his basic attitudes, we can make some fairly accurate assumptions.

1. Our kind of man is a perfectionist and a seeker of quality. He regrets that the word "quality" has lost much of its true meaning in recent years through hackneyed use.

2. For that reason, our man generally dislikes puffed-up, showy advertising. He abhors attempts to manipulate his good taste and common sense. If his car has to have advertising, he wants that advertising to make sense.

3. A Mercedes-Benz owner usually feels closer to his car than does an owner of another make. His car is an extension of his personality. He feels that both his car, and himself, are comfortably above average.

4. By owning a Mercedes-Benz he can express his individuality, and status, without feeling or suggesting that he's a show-off.

5. How does our man feel behind the wheel? For one thing, he feels comfortable. He probably knows more about his car's superb engineering features than owners of other cars. He knows why he feels comfortable. The seats in his car were designed with the help of an orthopedic surgeon. And he appreciates their beautiful upholstery.

6. He feels secure, too. He knows that a Mercedes-Benz has non-fade disc brakes on all four wheels. An articulated rear axle designed to keep the wheels on the ground — no matter how hard he drives, or how rough the road. A collapsible steering column for safety. And a specially strengthened rattle-free body that could save his, and his passengers' lives, in a roll-over accident.

Now, how does the mantle of a Mercedes-Benz owner fit you? If you are still not absolutely sure, send for our illustrated brochure. And arrange for a test drive in one of our 1970 models on display at the Mercedes-Benz dealers shown below.

'Social Action' Plan Unveiled

EDMONTON (CP) — The executive of the 1,650,000-member Canadian Labor Congress is seeking authority to establish a special foundation to build community medical centres across Canada, CLC president Donald MacDonald said Tuesday.

MacDonald told a news conference that the CLC's 10-man executive committee will put the medical centre plan to the 30-member CLC executive council later this week.

19 PAPERS

The proposal is just one of several calls for increased "social action" by the CLC which are contained in 19 position papers being considered during four days of closed sessions by the committee and the council.

Once given executive approval, the proposals must go to the 1,600 delegates attending the CLC's biennial convention here next week.

The position papers, yet to be released, contain recommendations for increased CLC action in human rights, poverty, consumer affairs, housing and aid to the aged.

Protesters Force Campus Closure

CARBONDALE, Ill. (Reuters) — Thousands of angry students Tuesday night forced the indefinite closure of Southern Illinois University, where anti-war demonstrators clashed with state police last week.

Following an incident in which students smashed windows in the office of the president and staged a massive sit-down protest, chancellor Robert MacVicar announced the university, which has an enrolment of 24,000, "is closed for an indefinite period of time."

Vancouver Hospital Lays Off 50 Employees

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver General Hospital Tuesday started issuing layoff notices to about 50 non-medical staff who will be laid off as an austerity measure.

The hospital announced earlier that between 80 and 100 would be laid off to bring hospital costs in line with Health Minister Ralph Loffmark's ruling that the government will pay only 70 per cent of increases granted hospital workers.

A hospital spokesman said that because of large vacation requirements and a high turnover, many of the staff involved eventually will be returned to the payroll.

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Boundaries of the City of Prince George have been expanded to include some acreage owned by the Pacific Great Estern railway and two pulp mills, a spokesman for the department of municipal affairs said Tuesday.

He said the expanded boundaries, which also take in the island of Cottonwood, went into effect May 5.

One reason the island was included within the city was to enable the municipality to assist development on the island, which the spokesman described as a depressed area.

Mary Quant Designs Shoes for All Hemlines

Shoes that go with any length of hem were featured in the spring and summer line released recently by British designer Mary Quant.

Fashion Flashes

The chunky sandal will be set on high, chunky heels, blunt-toed, well-covered over the vamp, strapped and buckled everywhere possible.

The new hosiery will be sheer with side stripes or side zig-zags, the foot without reinforcements so the stocking can be worn with sandals.

The Ruby Keeler shoe will be in with a stripling pump on high curvy heels, with cut-away sides, thin buckled straps in that Thirties manner.

"Imperial Margarine's got flavour fit for a queen."

We told her it has flavour so good it makes you feel like a queen. And today she agrees. Imperial Margarine is great, royal, regal, superberama! It's true. No other margarine can match the flavour of Imperial. Made with pure vegetable oils, it's packed as Sof-Spread or Regular Imperial. Try it. Imperial with flavour so good it makes you feel like a queen.

Designer Invades Canada

By MARGARET NESS

MONTREAL (CP) — Designer Elvia Gobbo has reversed the usual trend: The 28-year-old American-born designer invaded Canada to start a fashion boutique. She felt there was a big gap in the Canadian market for fashionable sophisticated clothes.

Three years ago she made the big leap to the wholesale trade, form a new company called Luv Originals with a partner from another dress house to look after the business end.

Elvia says a firm like Luv must project farther ahead in fashion thinking and trends than the average company. So while most houses are predicting the midi length won't arrive before fall, Elvia already has 30 midis in her summer collection.

Born in a small upstate New York town, Elvia has a background of northern Italy. She claims the great Titian as an ancestor, and several of her uncles are artists. She loved clay modelling as a child but soon decided she wanted to be a fashion designer.

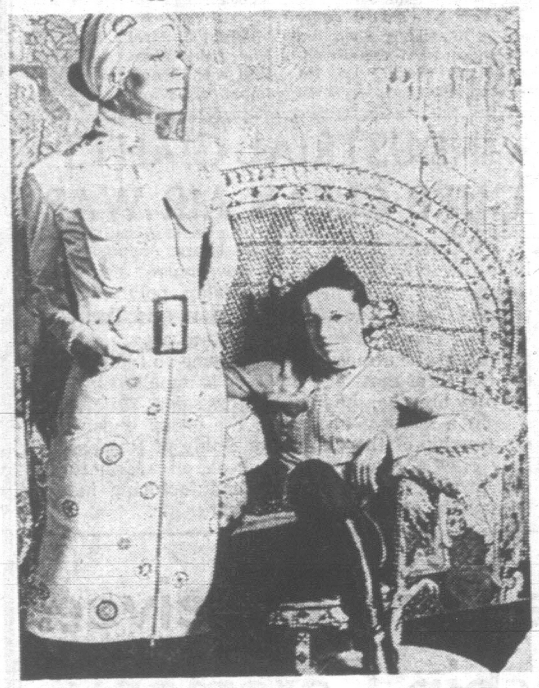

At the famous Traphagen School of Fashion in New York she took illustration design and studied the history of costume for two years. And it was there she met the young Montreal designer known as Lionel.

After graduation, when she won first prize for the best design, she worked as illustrator and assistant to Anne Fogarty, one of the best-known New York designers of smart young clothes.

While Elvia was designing for Mr. Mort, also of New York, Lionel suggested they open a boutique in Montreal. The idea, to provide a new designing image, appealed to Elvia.

The boutique, on fashionable Sherbrooke Street, was a success, but soon Elvia saw the wider possibilities. Luv Originals has more than justified her faith. In less than three years it has become a million-dollar business.

Not only is Luv sold across Canada but it is bought by such New York stores as Lord and Taylor, Bonwit Teller and Bloomingdale's. Last year Luv negotiated a tie-in with a California company to produce and carry some 20 styles from the Luv line.

Stuffed Chairs Welcome

If, during spring housecleaning, anyone finds unwanted furniture that would be better off somewhere else, there will be cheers in the carpentry and upholstery shop at Goodwill Enterprises.

Wilfred Burton, community relations officer, reports that there is an urgent need for any kind of repairable used furniture, from chesterfields to hostess chairs, bedroom suites to coffee tables.

Upholstered items are particularly welcome. These pieces are used to train handicapped people in repair and refinishing to the point where they can accept outside employment in similar work.

Pick up service is available, Burton points out, and a phone call to 385-6791, will have the unwanted items out of the way within 48 hours.

Improper Hiring Charges Rejected By Gaglardi

Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi Tuesday rejected a charge by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett that the Provincial Alliance of Businessmen is still hiring staff outside the Civil Service Commission.

Barrett referred to a Cariboo Observer newspaper report of April 18 in which Social Credit MLA Alex Fraser was quoted as saying he would announce the name of a new PAB official for the Quesnel area shortly.

This was evidence that the job-finding agency is still "undermining" the hiring practices of the CSC, Barrett said, recalling opposition criticism of Gaglardi for "pork barrel politics" during the legislative session.

NOT ANNOUNCED

But Gaglardi said later the appointment in question has not been announced and any new PAB jobs that are filled will be under the CSC.

Barrett said he had checked with the CSC and had been told no executive positions with the agency had been referred to it for job classification or competition.

The agency, set up under Gaglardi last summer when he was a minister without portfolio, initially hired staff outside the commission. It came under the commission April 1 after it was attached to the welfare department.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Car Theft Brings Three-Month Sentence

A 20-year-old man before being sentenced to three months in prison for stealing an auto told Judge William Ostler Tuesday it may be a good idea if some of his friends could read his pre-sentence report.

Warren William MacTier, 3286 Weatherby, said they might be able to learn something from it.

Ostler agreed, if it could help those involved in the drug culture who persist in using numerous drugs. The presentence report is prepared by probation officers on the request of the judge when an individual has been convicted of an offence.

The report is a confidential document that is read usually by the judge, the prosecutor, defence counsel and the defendant before sentence.

Ostler said it was unfortunate that MacTier seemed hooked on drugs but the accused stated that he felt he could get away from them.

"I admire your confidence," Ostler said but pointed out persistent use of marijuana, hashish, LSD, speed, mescaline and heroin would eventually produce addiction.

MacTier pleaded guilty April 28 to stealing a car the day before from the Strathcona Hotel parking lot. He was apprehended in the vehicle in Oak Bay several hours later.

The merchandise was valued at $6.89.

Albert J. Mruk, 21, of 673 Hoy Lake Road, was fined $350 when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

He was observed by police May 12 driving at about 50 m.p.h. north on Douglas and when he was stopped at Harriet on the Trans Canada Highway he showed signs of alcohol consumption. He gave a breathalyzer reading of .17 per cent blood-alcohol content.

Stanley J. Gregory, 19, of 66 Cook, was given a suspended sentence with an 18-month probation for cultivating marijuana.

He pleaded guilty April 28 to growing the substance in his apartment in five flower pots.

Sports 'Classic' Misses Festival

PORT HARDY — It somehow failed to make it into the B.C. Festival of Sports lineup, but the third annual Pothole Golf Tournament goes off as scheduled near Coal Harbor this weekend.

Teams from across the north end of Vancouver Island will tee off on a rocky stretch of road at 11 a.m. Sunday.

The event, kicked off by a Saturday night banquet and dance at the Port Hardy Airport, was originally conceived as a way of drawing attention to the area's bad roads.

Roads have improved considerably in the district since 1968 but organizers of this year's event — the Chambers of Commerce of North Vancouver Island — say the new course will challenge golfers armed with "shillelaghs" as much as it frightens motorists armed with their tire jacks.

The game, played with crooked tree branches, is won by the team taking the lowest number of strokes to drive a ball one mile or so on the road. The aim is to avoid the potholes.

The tournament, which also features prizes for the best-dressed team, will be followed by a picnic at the official opening of the new Cheslakees campsite near the Nimpkish River by the Canadian Forest Products Co.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, MLA for the area and traditional tournament leader, will miss this year's event. He's in a Victoria hospital where he underwent an operation this week.

INDUSTRIAL GIANTS CURB CLEAN AIR WAR

WASHINGTON (AP) — Giant corporations have thwarted United States government efforts to cleanse the atmosphere of deadly pollutants, a team of Ralph Nader's investigators said Tuesday.

The failure of federal and state programs has permitted the atmosphere to become so fouled that the health of most city dwellers is impaired by the air they breathe, the investigators said.

In a massive document, the group under the sponsorship of the Centre for Study of Responsive Law cited the auto-makers, coal, oil and natural gas producers, and several manufacturing industries as the chief obstacles to cleaner air.

Members of the Greater Victoria Citizenship Council entertained the group at a coffee party after the ceremonies.

BOMB SQUAD NOT NEEDED

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Authorities cleared a block square area and called in a bomb squad when a suspicious looking object dangling from a balloon dropped to the ground next to a police command post.

But the U.S. Weather Bureau in a nearby building cleared the matter up. It was a weather balloon from Point Mugu destined for the location and was "on target."

CUNNINGHAMS AT CUNNINGHAMS WE CARE

Streamline Cabinet, First Job in P.E.I.

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Premier Alex Campbell has returned to his office after a day's absence to celebrate his overwhelming victory in Monday's Prince Edward Island general election.

His Liberal party took 27 of the 32 seats in the legislature—a victory he said indicated a public mandate to carry on with his comprehensive development plan.

The $725,000,000 plan, toward which the federal government will pay $225,000,000 over 15 years, was the major election issue. It is designed to improve the provincial economy by upgrading fishing, farming and tourism, the island's three main industries.

It was the second provincial election victory for the 36-year-old premier, who led the party to a 17-15 win over the Progressive Conservatives in 1966.

Mr. Campbell spent Tuesday at his summer cottage near Summerside where he had said he would study the Nemetz report on reorganization of the provincial government.

WOULD CUT CABINET

The report recommends streamlining the administration, including a cutback in the number of cabinet members. In the last government there were 10 ministers, seven of them holding two portfolios each.

The study was headed by Donald Nemetz of the Chicago public administration service.

"I propose to establish a treasury board, which is one of the Nemetz report's recommendations," the premier said.

The premier also said he would be working on the makeup of his new cabinet and would announce it in about a week.

The legislature would be called into session "on or about June 2" and the budget, introduced one day before the house dissolved March 26 for the election, would be brought in again, with minor changes made for election expenses.

OPPOSED BUDGET

It was the budget, including appropriations for the development plan program, which precipitated the government's calling of the election. The 15 PCs in the house and Keir Clark, former Liberal health minister who crossed the floor to sit as an independent, indicated they would vote against money bills for the plan.

This would have defeated the government, which, with the Speaker in the chair, had only 15 voting members.

Mr. Clark, who left the party because he could not support the plan, was not a candidate in his Kings 4th seat. He said Tuesday it was the premier's personality which led the Liberals to their lopsided win.

The Conservatives, led by 39-year-old freshman George Key, campaigned heavily on a promise to renegotiate the plan. Mr. Key was defeated in his own Prince 2nd riding.

BOOBYTRAP GETS WRONG RABBIT

NANCY, France (UPI) — Jules Denis, 37, rigged up an anti-burglar boobytrap in his garage consisting of a trip wire and a double-barreled shotgun loaded with rabbit shot.

Today, entering the garage to get his car for work, he shot himself in the stomach. Doctors said his condition was not serious.

MOONWOMEN HIS BIG HOPE

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Speaking for his fellow astronauts, Col. Thomas P. Stafford says they hope women join them soon in the exploration of the moon.

"But not until our wives say it's OK," Stafford said. He spoke to the Herbert Hoover boys club Saturday.

There'll Be Surprises Among New Senators

By JOHN MIKA

OTTAWA—Prime Minister Trudeau may well disorient politically-staid Canadians a few days after he returns from the Far East late this month.

He's expected to throw in several exotic names among the dozen or so appointments he is planning for the Senate in June.

Would you believe Senator E. Davie Fulton?

Or Senator E. C. Manning?

Or Senator Robert Bonner?

There's considerable doubt that any of these men would agree to accept appointment but some sources here have little doubt that making the offer is under serious consideration.

And given the circumstances, there are reasons that argue powerfully in favor of a Liberal government considering retirement from active politics as a former Tory justice minister, a former Social Credit premier and a former Social Credit attorney-general, as excellent credentials for seats in the Upper House.

Mr. Ttudeau proclaims himself a pragmatist who, eschewing political labels as irrelevant, believes deeply that a structure of "countervailing forces" is necessary for a dynamic form of government capable of changing with the times.

So Tory and Socred should not be scare words to him and a strengthened role for the Senate — which will require vigorous and experienced men of varied persuasions in both the government and opposition sides of the Red Chamber — could be in the cards.

It must be apparent throughout Canada by now that the Senate of Trudeau's administration is different from those that have gone before.

The cornerstone of this difference was his choice of a passionate and clever competitor, Paul Martin, as his first appointment with the office of government leader in the Senate.

Senator Martin pledged that he would strive to revitalize the Senate.

Since then, the Senate has spawned more important discussion in its special committees — on poverty, the Benson White Paper, the news media, government expropriation powers — than even the lower chanber has managed with a larger and younger group.

There are now 15 vacancies: five in B.C. (where only Senator John Nichol remains); three each in Manitoba and Quebec; two in Nova Scotia; and one each in Alberta and Ontario.

With little likelihood of an early rewriting of the constitution, with some of the existing vacancies going back three and four years and with the substantially increasing workload, the rumors here that Mr. Trudeau will announce his appointments in early June are entirely credible.

He is, as many of his predecessors have been in the past, expected to fill only some of the appointments, leaving him room to manoeuvre in this area. The consensus appears to settle around a dozen seats.

It also appears likely — indeed it would not be in character otherwise — that his choices will be men of executive performance, many faintly Liberal (Victoria's former mayor R. B. Wilson and well-known conservationist Roderck Haig-Brown have been rumored in B.C.) and some of partisan gusto (for instance, Manitoba's retired Liberal leader Gildas Molgat has been mentioned as a probability).

But the fairly strong rumors that Fulton, Manning and Bonner might be approached will seem incredible — except against the background of an unconventional prime minister attempting to refashion the various areas of government into credible instruments.

To resurrect the Senate as a viable partner of power (an effort which began with the first serious proposals of Senate reform only seven years after the bicameral system was adopted in the 1867 Confederation), it is necessary to end a century's undermining of public esteem.

It began with Sir John A. Macdonald, who appointed a total of 117 senators during his regime, all of them Tories except two personal friends.

And 99 years later, when then-Prime Minister Pearson appointed the last dozen senators of his administration, no less than a prominent Calgary Liberal official was moved to publicly condemn the batch as making the Senate "a political garbage can, a depository for those political leftovers whose credentials could only be called shabby.

"There has been no prime minister who has been as guity as Mr. Pearson in making the Upper Chamber the political joke it is today," the outraged G. Alex Jupp concluded.

Selecting the eminent among the eligible produced

FULTON
. . . wanted

by other political parties would be an obvious method for Mr. Trudeau to avoid such corrosive accusations.

But there is a much stronger reasons for seeking opposition members of quality for the Senate. It is Mr. Trudeau's theory of countervailing forces.

If the plan is to re-establish the Senate as a functional, instead of ceremonial, arm of the governing process then it becomes essential that the Senate itself have a healthy political balance. That can't be said of its present composition: 60 Liberals, one Independent-Liberal, two Independents and only 24 Conservatives (with 15 more potential Liberals filling the vacancies).

Yet there is an even more important, and specific, reason why Socreds and Tories could be considered as desirable appointees for the western provinces.

And it would seem likely to impress itself strongly on a prime minister who takes an unemotional view of federalism as a logical mechanism for governing a huge and diverse country like Canada, provided some of its cogs and gears have not been stripped by partisan jamming.

A month ago, at a little-noted ceremony in the Centre Block to unveil portraits of 19 former Senate leaders, the prime minister was called upon to address a few perfunctory words to the small assembly of Senators, friends and onlookers.

Among his remarks was this significant passage:

"Speaking for myself, I should say simply that I have every respect for this institution (Senate) and that I hope it mill remain firmly established in our parliamentary traditions.

"I repeat, I believe that this bi-cameral system is a very important part of Parliament, especially in a federal form of government, and

MANNING
. . . are they willing?

I am sure it will continue for many years to perform its very vital functions."

Notice the stressed "especially in a federal form of government."

Historians, and the documents, agree that a prime reason why the bi-cameral system was adopted by the Fathers of Confederation was a desire to have one house to represent the people and the another to represent provincial interests in a federated state.

That's why Quebec, Ontario and the Maritimes were treated as regions and given an equal number of seats — 24 each — in the Senate. Later, when the western provinces joined Confederation, they were treated as a region and divided a further 24 seats to keep the formula consistent.

The provincial governments have always exprssede inerest in reforming the Senate to give it more power as their instrument.

Quebec, for instance, has always contended that the Senate could not be changed without its consent — recognizing that to some degree it provides it with a measure of security for the French-Canadian fact.

To satisfy this need, it was only necessary to appoint a predominance of French-speaking senators for Quebec and the fact was assured of a substantial voice in the Upper House no matter what representatives Canadians who live between Ontario and the Maritimes elected to the Commons.

Western Canada too has been afraid of being crushed between the Tory-Grit nutcrackers wielded by the more populous central Canada which controls the elected Commons. But the Western Fact has never been given voice in the Upper House.

So the West developed radical parties — the Progressives, CCF, Social Credit — to express its special aspirations and peeves in Ottawa but this multi-voiced babble was ineffective, and the West had voluable power only temporarily in John Diefenbaker.

This frustration helps explain one interesting footnote of our parliamentary history: why Quebecers have always jealously protected the Senate while most of the abolitionists have come from the West (Stanley Knowles' latest bill to abolish the Upper House was defeated only last December).

No one who speaks this 'radical' tongue of the West has been appointed to the Senate yet. That really didn't matter when a Senate seat was a sinecure. It does if those seats are to be upholstered with power.

It would be surprising if Mr. Trudeau, who knows all the historic arguments for federalism, was unaware of the deep satisfaction the West would experience if it's native political movements were finally acknowledged by appointment to the Upper House. And he wouldn't overlook its value, however small, as a countervailing force against the increasingly vocal separatists of the West.

So there are reasons to the rumors that Mr. Trudeau will call on Mr. Manning, Mr. Bonner and Mr. Fulton (who, although true-blue Tory is serving the B.C. government as its appointed chairman of the Law Reform Commission) to re-enter public life — this time for the good of their whole country.

'Canadians Don't Assert Own Values'

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said Tuesday that much of the radical literature of Canadian universities and high schools is as Canadian as Kentucky fried chicken.

He told a group of high school students that he is disturbed that renewed Canadian nationalism "seems to be against the values of the United States rather than an assertion of values of our own."

Many young Canadians condemned American policies but often adopted the rhetoric and tactics and even the causes of the youth protest of the United States.

If Canadians spent their limited resources in protest of other countries' policies, such as Vietnam, "we may not have enough to develop our own response to the problems directly in our realm."

Mr. Stanfield said separatism, both in Quebec and Western Canada, is a growing threat to the possibility of establishing a distinctive and strong Canadian nationality.

Canadian identity would come only with Canadian accomplishment.

"We will be known by what we do, or not at all," he said.

"Our great challenge, our fundamental opportunity, is to establish a standard of community in which different men can live together and live well."

GUIDED BY COMPASSION

A growing number of Canadians were guided by compassion and social conscience in selecting national goals.

But "if we spend our energies in condemnation of other countries, we could lose the chance to build a better country of our own."

"It is as Canadian as Kentucky fried chicken," Mr. Stanfield said.

"It is not enough to be a Canadian nationalist simply be cause you do not want to be a citizen of the United States.

"A dynamic country must be more than a refuge."

Canadian nationalism could be positive and productive, bringing Canadians together to achieve goals in response to urban and social problems and thereby offering an example to the world.

Mr. Stanfield said there is encouraging evidence that some younger Canadians are prepared to accept personal responsibility to improve conditions in the communities in which they live.

But he had found among some high school students a hard line against programs to break poverty, intolerance and other cul-

Border Protesters Called Scum

Canadian demonstrators who marched into the United States at the Blaine border crossing Saturday are "scum" who speak only for a tiny minority of British Columbians, a Social Credit MLA said Tuesday.

He said Canadians can speak through diplomatic sources rather than with "some flower children's demonstration that turns to violence."

"The very thing those people went out to protest they were guilty of themselves."

Meanwhile, two B.C. councils on the lower mainland have voted to apologize for Saturday's protest invasion, which broke up with fighting and vandalism.

Surrey and New Westminster councils Tuesday night tendered aplogies to the city of Blaine.

New Westminster alderman Doug Stout said he was deeply ashamed of the "so-called Canadians who invaded American soil and desecrated the American flag."

Surrey Mayor Bill Vander Zalm said he hopes to deliver a

Air Traffic Controllers Ask Curbs

MONTREAL (CP) — Air traffic controllers passed a resolution Tuesday that could allow them to refuse to handle aircraft from countries harboring known terrorists.

The resolution, passed in the second day of the annual convention of the International Federation of Air Traffic Controllers Associations, was seen as a step toward curbing air piracy.

It was expected to be discussed further at a meeting of the International Civil Aviation Organization here next month.

Meantime, John-David Lyon, president of the Canadian Air Traffic Controllers Association, said Tuesday Canada will have to improve its use of regional airports.

"This would take the pressures off major centres while assuring equally good service to both large and small air carriers," he said.

Mr. Lyon said Canada's chronic shortage of controllers is being helped by a massive training program at the Ottawa training school. He expected the 1,200-man force to increase by 1,000 in two to three years.

At present, he said, some controllers at busy terminals work streaks of nine consecutive days with one day off, spending nearly their full eight-hour and 15-minute shifts at their control instruments.

Twin Bombs Shake IOC

(Times sport columnist Bill Walker is holidaying in Europe this week and was in Amsterdam when the International Olympic Committee met to make its decisions on the sites for 1976 Olympics and Winter Games. He telephoned this exclusive account of the politics behind the votes and the reaction.)

By BILL WALKER

AMSTERDAM—Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, thought he had a neat little atom bomb for the committee to juggle here this week. He obviously didn't know what they knew.

The IOC delegation had one in return.

Last week Brundage asked the committee to study professionalism in Olympic sports, particularly hockey, skiing and basketball. The committee began that study today.

But last night they brought down their own shocker. The surprise was wrapped in two packages.

First one opened was the real bomb.

Montreal had been awarded the 1976 Olympic Games.

The second one was labeled "Sop." That was for Denver, which got the 1976 Winter Olympics.

Site Awards Set Precedent

This marked the first time in Olympic history that North America had been elected as the site for both events, also the first time that Canada had ever been elected.

The Montreal victory completely shook the large gathering. Moscow and Los Angeles has been considered the prime candidates. And there was a long silent moment of disbelief before the Montreal contingent erupted with screams of delight. Meanwhile, Moscow's delegates huddled briefly, rose from their seats and walked out of the hall.

But if the gathering was surprised at this turn of events, the Vancouver-Garibaldi delegation was stunned.

"Oh, No!" Father David Bauer, a member of the committee and a former Olympic hockey coach, was heard to mutter. "Now there's no way," he said.

For this vote had killed Garibaldi's chances and even the most optimistic delegate, although refusing to concede, ruefully admitted they had lost.

Leak Confirms Elimination

And sure enough.

For shortly after the IOC voting group had reconvened to determine the site of the Winter Olympics, there was a leak from the committee room that said that Garibaldi had received only nine votes on the first ballot. Denver had 29; Sion, Switzerland, 18 and Tampere, Finland, 12.

Garibaldi had been eliminated. The final vote on the third ballot, Denver 39, Sion 30.

The Montreal victory came unexpectedly as another "leak," which was later confirmed, had Moscow winning the first ballot 28 votes to 25 for Montreal and 17 for Los Angeles.

On the second ballot all the Los Angeles votes went to Canada except for one. This was considered significant by the delegation as it indicated the solid stand against Russia as host for the Games.

There was no comment from the mayor of Moscow for the vote. "Nyet" was his only word.

No communist nation has ever been host to the Olympic Games.

The Montreal triumph and Garibaldi's defeat gave a bitter-sweet touch to the situation. On the one hand, the eastern Canadians were laughing and gay. The Garibaldi smiles were evident, too, but they came through clenched teeth.

Drapeau Man of the Hour

Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau was the man of the hour. And why not? He had just completed an impossible double in international politics. He had parlayed the name of Expo 67 into world-wide fame. Now he had the Olympics for his beloved city.

This was Montreal's third try for the Olympics and Garibaldi's first.

Drapeau was also surprised at the Montreal decision, and was so excited that he declined to answer the television announcer's queries immediately. However, he quickly regained his aplomb, and hurried to the podium to accept the '76 Games for Montreal and Canada.

He promised dutifully that Montreal would host the event in the true spirit of the Olympics and with humbleness, simplicity and dignity.

It was definitely a personal triumph for Drapeau. The Montreal delegation was the first to admit this. He himself admitted it was a low-key approach that had won it for Montreal, compared to high pressure tactics and the commercial overtones that had accompanied the Moscow and Los Angeles bids.

The numbness has started to wear off the Garibaldi delegation today, but some were still in a state of confusion.

They had come so close, only to lose — in effect — to another Canadian city. This was the consensus and this made the heartbreak a little harder to take.

First, because they had been told that technically they had the best site for the Winter Games. The presentation to the IOC had been extremely well received. Mayor Tom Campbell of Vancouver almost, but not quite, openly predicted victory for Garibaldi on the second ballot.

A telegram of 105,000 names of Vancover and Victoria residents offering their support of the bid had been an instant hit with the committee.

And then Brundage himself had stood up to say that he too had recieved "a foot-high stack" of telegrams from Vancouver. He said the Vancouver-Garibaldi Olympic committee obviously had the support of its people.

But it was not to be, not after Montreal's victory, or as James Worrall, Canada's voting delegate later said:

"It was obvious the committee was not going to give one country both events."

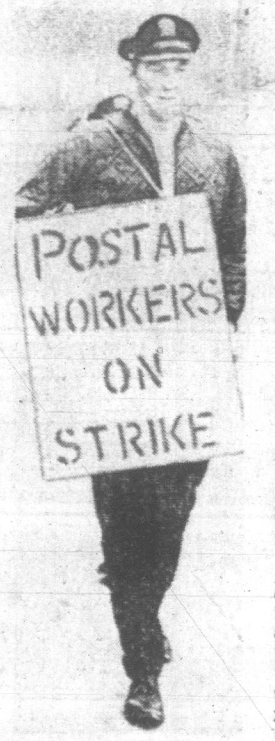

Worrall did suggest, however, that it was his opinion that in the future that one country should bid for one event.

U.K. Looks to Canada For Major Army Base

LONDON (CP) — The British army is considering the possibility of taking over a large military base in Canada or some other country for training purposes, a spokesman said today.

He emphasized that the question of finding large training areas abroad is in the early stages of study and no details could be provided now.

"Obviously Canada is among the areas considered," he added. "We also are looking at Australia."

The need to find vast new ground results from withdrawal of British troops from Libya where large ground and air exercises had been undertaken from time to time.

Canada provides areas for training of British troops each year but these have been mainly on a battalion scale. The British army appears to be looking for major installations where perhaps a brigade could exercise in combined training with a number of British air squadrons.

BIG BASE

The Canadian defence department is reported to be gradually closing its big base at Rivers, Man., in line with the government's decision to restrain defence spending. Last week a defence spokesman at Ottawa suggested that Rivers is one of the bases the British army is exploring.

A defence department spokesman in Ottawa said it is possible that training of British forces in Canada will be expanded but it was too early to say to what extent.

A number of locations are being considered but no decision has been made, said the spokesman.

It "could be" that Rivers, Man., is one of the bases under consideration. The future of Rivers, has been in doubt for some time. It is known to be one of a number of Canadian forces bases the government is considering closing for economy reasons.

Defence Minister Leo Cadieux indicated last week that the decision on Rivers may be announced within a few weeks.

Some observers doubted that Rivers is roomy enough for British army training purposes. It is primarily an air base, with a drop zone for training paratroopers.

Disciplinary Action Urged By Committee

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons public accounts committee said today disciplinary action may have to be taken against government personnel involved in the refit of the aircraft carrier Bonaventure.

In a report tabled in the Commons by chairman Alfred D. Hales (PC — Wellington), the committee said it "fails to understand" why two deputy ministers did not order an on-the-job inspection of the 1966-67 refit of the Bonaventure.

The two referred to are deputy minister E. B. Armstrong, 55, of the defence department and Gordon W. Hunter, also 55, at the time deputy defence production minister. Hunter now is master of the Royal Canadian Mint.

The committee said it feels it has "only explored the tip of an iceberg of unsatisfactory estimating procedures, miscalculations and poor administration."

It recommended that the departments concerned "determine the reasons why departmental officers involved in the refit performed in the manner they did and also take appropriate action to ensure that such inefficiency be eliminated in the future."

MUST CHANGE SYSTEM

"This will require changes to the system under which they work and may require disciplinary action in regard to personnel involved."

The committee asked to be informed of action taken in respect both to procedures and personnel.

"The committee fails to understand why the deputy ministers of national defence and defence production, realizing that the cost of the refit of the Bonaventure was, month by month, getting out of control, did not order an 'on-the-job' investigation."

Estimates by the naval dockyard in Halifax placed the refit price at $8,000,000.

Israeli Forces End Campaign

By REUTERS

Israel said the last of its tanks which took part in Tuesday's raid on Arab guerrilla bases in southern Lebanon returned to their home bases today, 32 hours after the first tank rolled across the border.

Contradictory accounts of the operation in the rugged foothills of 9,000-foot Mount Hermon came from the Israelis and the Arabs.

In Beirut, Reuters correspondent Ian MacDowell reported that Palestine-Arab commandos celebrated what they hailed as a victory in the battle against the powerful Israeli armored force.

Despite Arab claims to have inflicted a heavy toll on the raiders, the Israelis reported only 11 wounded, 10 of them slightly.

Military spokesmen also denied Arab claims that there had been direct clashes between Israeli forces and the Lebanese army.

The Israelis said that during the raid the Israeli troops occupied six villages, blew up 40 buildings and took 11 prisoners. An undisclosed number of guerrillas were reported killed.

A spokesman said Israel stood ready to repeat the land and air invasion into Lebanon.

BEHIND SCHEDULE

The Israeli plan, which originally provided for the raiding force to be pulled out by sunset, ran behind schedule.

Early today, Egyptian planes went into action against Israeli positions in the northern sector of the Suez canal.

NOL REGIME AID REFUSED

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary William P. Rogers, appearing at a surprise news conference today, ruled out any United States military support for the government of Premier Lon Nol in Cambodia apart from limited arms aid.

"We don't intend to become involved militarily in support of the Lon Nol government," Rogers said.

VIETS BEGIN NEW DRIVE

Times News Services

SAIGON—South Vietnamese forces, with U.S. advisers, have launched a major land offensive along Highway One leading to the capital of Cambodia.

Associated Press correspondent David Rosenzweig reported that a South Vietnamese armored column accompanied by U.S. advisers pushed up Highway One from the provincial capital of Svay Rieng to Kompong Trabek, 25 miles to the west.

The armored column linked up with South Vietnamese marines driving up the Mekong River, then engaged about 600 Communist troops three miles beyond Kompong Trabek in heavy fighting.

The announced purpose of the drive was to clear Highway One for the repatriation of Vietnamese in Cambodia.

Earlier this week 30 South Viet gunboats escorting barges, made the run to the capital of Phnom Penh. This action was described by Saigon as a means to repatriate Vietnamese living in the capital.

The U.S. command announced that the first American troop withdrawal from Cambodia was completed but

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Student strikes and demonstrations have continued to surge and subside on the campuses in the United States. At the University of South Carolina, 100 persons were arrested during student-police clashes.

The arrests Tuesday night at the 13,000-student campus in Columbia, S.C., were made after students threw bottles, bricks and firecrackers at city and state police, backed by troops, who were imposing a 9 p.m. curfew.

Law enforcement officials used tear gas and clubbed several students. Two soldiers suffered minor injuries.

The student strike information centre at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., reported today that 266 colleges and universities were on strikes of indefinite length.

Strikes at many of the 1,500 four-year colleges and at other educational institutions began last week to protest Nixon's decision to send American combat troops into Cambodia and the deaths of four Kent State University students shot as National Guard troops attempted to quell a disorder.

Unofficial student strikes and protests have continued on many campuses with impacts of varying degrees.

BANS GASOLINE SALES

Michigan Gov. William Milliken declared a state of emergency in Ypsilanti following two days of disorders by Eastern Michigan University students. The emergency order sets a curfew and prohibits the local sale of gasoline in containers. The college has 14,500 students.

Striking students engaged in a variety of anti-war activity, including demonstrations, leafletting, lobbying, withdrawing money from banks, urging workers to strike for peace and cashing in U.S. savings bonds.

The New Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam announced in Washington that soldiers at 22 U.S. military bases will stage anti-war demonstrations this weekend to coincide with Armed Forces Day Saturday. The announcement said organizations at 43 military installations would participate.

In New York city, the City-Wide Work Stoppage Committee, an organization of students and workers set up recently to promote a general labor strike against the war, said 300 workers met with an equal number of students to discuss strikes for peace.

"Everyone at the meeting was for a general strike to demand immediate withdrawal from Southeast Asia," a committee spokesman said. "The question is when."

The Ohio National Guard disclosed what it suggested was new evidence of sniper fire at Kent State at the time the students were killed May 4. Guard spokesmen have maintained that troops opened fire after a sniper began shooting.

The guard spokesman said nearby construction workers heard a shot before the killings. He also said a .32-calibre revolver had been found in a nearby river.

Gravel Pit Favoritism Denied

The charge was made Tuesday by Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver-East) who said taxpayers suffered because no free bidding was allowed for the 185-acre gravel site at Treat Creek on Jervis Inlet.

Williston said the reason Delta Rock Ltd. didn't have to put up a certified cheque for $692,174 like the others wishing to bid, was that the company owned the facilities already located on the site.

These include an office building, two bunkhouses, two powerhouses, a wharf, water supply and sewer system and seven conveyors and a rock crusher.

The minister explained that Delta Rock Ltd. had moved in and begun a gravel operation under a deal with a logging company which had a special use permit for logging only.

FOR LOGGING ROADS

He said the initial use of gravel on the property was understood to be for logging roads only, but before the government could move in, a gravel pit was in operation and the facilities installed.

Since Delta Rock owned the facilities, it was decided to get an appraisal on their value and require other biders for the gravel rights to in effect buy them if they wanted the gravel rights.

Macdonald charged that the cash requirement effectively discouraged other bidders, leaving Delta Rock free to bid the minimum amount.

"Now Delta Rock is rewarded for making off with the gravel before the public auction by being set up as the only possible bidder," Macdonald said.

"This is straight out of Gilbert and Sullivan," he said.

Williston said the appraisal was a lower value than might have been put on the assets because factors such as the time invested by the company in site development were not allowed as part of the value.

Williston rejected Macdonald's call for a public inquiry into the matter, saying all the facts are now available to the public.

Ambassador To Visit

Mohamed Choucri, Egypt's ambassador to Canada, will begin an official visit to Western Canada when he arrives in Victoria Tuesday, May 27.

Choucri will stay at the Empress until his departure May 29.

The ambassador will visit Premier Bennett and Lt.-Gov. John Nicholson. During his tour, Choucri will discuss the Middle East conflict from an Arab viewpoint.

He will also spend time in Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton and Winnipeg before returning to Ottawa June 5.

. . . OLYMPIC GAMES

Minister Without Portfolio Grace McCarthy was distraught.

". . . and we so much thought we had it won," she said.

"It's a long way to come for such a big disappointment," she added.

Other members of the Garibaldi team echoed similar sentiments. President Jean Brusset said, "I think we should try again, but for me another four years is a long time."

Vice-president Sid Young said he wasn't about to take "no" as a final answer.

"We know we did a good job, we know we couldn't have done any better. The Montreal decision beat us. Nothing else."

Father Bauer was more critical of the committee than he was of the defeat for Garibaldi.

"A most incredible decision," he said of Denver's victory. "We had the backing of all the winter sports federations. They didn't and they won."

In that regard there was a suggestion later that the winter federations might challenge the IOC decision. But this was considered highly unlikely although feelings were running high.

Denver, it was implied, had won because of Olympic politics. This was appeasement because LA had lost.

CHEQUES DELIVERED

A Victoria post office spokesman today confirmed reports that old age pension cheques for June have been received early and are being delivered.

Old age pension, youth and family allowance cheques for May were also received early by the post office and delivered last week.

The cheques are normally not delivered until June 28. Ken Darlington, president of the Victoria local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said this morning early delivery of the cheques indicates the government expects a strike.

PREPARED

He repeated his union's position that members are prepared to make emergency deliveries of pension, youth and family allowance cheques should a strike occur.

Darlington said negotiations between the government and postal workers unions have been resumed, but a strike vote is still set for Tuesday, May 19.

Postal information officer in Victoria Ken Stofer said he did not know whether June's family and youth allowance cheques would be received early. He would not comment on whether early delivery of pension cheques indicates the government is expecting a strike.

informed sources in the South Vietnamese capital said the withdrawal affected less than 2,000 men.

The command first announced that elements of the 3rd Brigade, 9th Infantry Division, had been withdrawn from the Parrot's Beak section of Cambodia about 45 miles west of Saigon.

Later, headquarters reported the withdrawal of one-third of the 4th Division force operating more than 200 miles to the north in the Se San base area of Cambodia, about 50 miles west of Pleiku City.

"The remainder of the task force will continue to operate along with elements of the South Vietnamese 22nd Division," a spokesman said.

U.S. Defence Secretary Melvin Laird said in Washington earlier that several thousand American troops already had been withdrawn from Cambodia.

Sources said the 9th Division unit had secured Ba Thu, about a mile inside Cambodia, after the North Vietnamese base area had been seized by South Vietnamese. U.S. Losses during the week of occupation were reported as four killed and 20 wounded.

The U.S. command said today that all U.S. losses in Cambodia totalled 101 killed and 427 wounded.

Official sources have said 14,000 to 16,000 U.S. troops and 18,000 to 20,000 South Vietnamese troops are operating inside Cambodia on more than a dozen fronts on both sides of the Mekong River.

Headquarters said American and South Vietnamese forces have killed more than 6,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops and seized nearly 10,000 weapons and hundreds of tons of ammunition in Cambodia since the drive began two weeks ago.

In action inside Cambodia Tuesday, a column of South Vietnamese tanks pushing North from Svay Rieng met resistance in the tow of Kompong Trach on Route 24, about 80 miles northwest of Saigon.

The South Vietnamese called in air strikes. Several buildings were destroyed or damaged, field reports said.

The South Vietnamese drove the Communist forces from Kompong Trach today and joined up with South Vietnamese marines who had been fighting along the Mekong River.

STAFF CUT FURTHER

B.C. Forest Products Victoria sawmills are expected to have only 20 men working by Thursday as a result of the B.C. towboat strike

Mill workers are refusing to handle logs and booms marked hot by the striking Canadian Merchant Service Guild and as a result thousands of coast sawmill and woods workers have been laid off.

Added to the unemployed total this morning were 85 employees of Crown Zellerbach operations at Courtenay.

In the 10 days since 1,150 CMSG officers, mates and engineers went on strike in support of better safety, manning and accommodation clauses in their contracts, an estimated 10,000 forestry employees have been affected.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Most areas in southern B.C. were free of frost overnight with only Williams Lake and Cranbrook reporting freezing or near freezing temperatures. Showers persisted in a few regions.

Cloud cover will be quite variable today with a few showers persisting along the coast and afternoon showers or thundershowers developing in the interior.

The next Pacific disturbance will bring rain to the exposed coast late tomorrow. A decrease in shower activity and cloud cover is expected in most other regions.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

More people get sunstrokes than you would think. As long as we insist on going out in the heat of the day when the sun is shining fiercely from overhead, we can get too much sun. When that happens, the victim suffers what is known as a sunstroke.

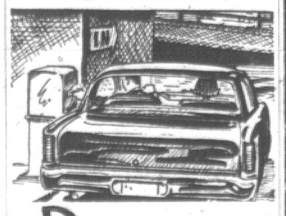

Desert travellers and explorers in Africa and the jungles of South America aren't the only people who get sunstroke. Long-distance runners, golfers, hikers, bricklayers and even people in a boat or a canoe out on a lake can get a sunstroke.

When the wonderful thermostat inside the brain signals changes to the body when the buildup of body heat is too great blows out and the body can't change its temperature, the victims is in danger from sunstroke. People die from it, too.
